Room 201

Dear Dr. Fleming:

At the suggestion of Elizabeth Herring I'm writing to seek your help for an appellate moot court argument to which I have been assigned at the Washington College of Law at American University.

Since members or attorneys of the Civil Rights Commission will be attending the oral arguments because of their interest in the subject, I am interested in doing a particularly thorough and convincing job.

Briefly, the legal problems posed involve the Hill-Burton Federal Aid to Hospital Construction Bill and the Federal Aid to Impacted Areas Education Bill. Both of these Federal laws contain specific clauses barring the Federal administrator from interfering with or seeking to control local administration, etc., and the Hill-Burton Bill contains a specific clause permitting segregated hospitals. Despite these statutory provisions, the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare has denied funds to a South Carolina city for hospital construction because it refuses to sign an agreement not to discriminate (1) in employment during the construction of the hospital; and (2) in opening the hospital to all patients without discrimination after it is completed. He has also denied the city Federal impacted-area education money because (3) its school system is segregated. The city, which has met all the requirements of the two laws, was denied an injunction against the Secretary in the lower Federal court in the District of Columbia and is appealing. My job is to defend the Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare's right to impose these restrictions (probably as part of the President's inherent right and duty to uphold and enforce the Constitution), despite the specific statutory language to the contrary. My opponent will be representing the city on appeal.

I'm writing to request any material you can send me in support of the three specific points mentioned above, as well as the general right and duty of the President to enforce the Constitutional pledge of equality. Any briefs or legal arguments, citing cases, developed by you or others on any of these points would be particularly helpful.

Thanks in advance for your prompt help.

Sincerely,

Harry Kranz

Dear Harold:

Thank you very much for your letter of October 18th. Unfortunately, your letter arrived when we were involved in the GE strike so I didn't get a chance to answer it.

I will try to do what I can to follow up on your request. I doubt if any thought will be given to it until well after the election.

I notice on the list of unions that you have one mistake. You listed Jacob Potofsky as president of the Communication Workers of America. The president of CWA is Joseph Beirne. Potofsky is president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. I would suggest that it might be well to write another letter because little mistakes like that can be fatal.

On November 14th I am taking part in a forum on the use of the religious issue in this campaign. I would appreciate receiving any material that has come across your desk on this subject. Thanks much for your help.

Best wishes and regards.

Dear Mr. Kranz:

We have your letter of October 25 and, although we are whole-heartedly interested in the problem you have tackled and would keenly enjoy reading your brief if you make an extra copy of it, I suspect we have nothing worth offering you. The Council does not take any part in court proceedings and consequently we do not do any legal research of our own. There are standard sources, such as Greenberg and Emerson and Haber, but I don't know what we could offer that you would not come across yourself in your own research.

Yours is a fascinating topic. I am only sorry that I could not be in Washington to hear the arguments.

P. O. Box 1662

Dear Moreland:

I was glad to get your letter. I think it is fine that you are back at Brown and I gathered, from what you say, that you must be hard at work and enjoying it. I gave your regards to the family; Linda sends you her very best wishes as, indeed, so do we all.

Yours is an interesting topic and you will, I am sure, have much to say. Of course you know Montgomery thoroughly, and you stayed in Atlanta long enough to get some feel for this place. I doubt that there is much I can tell you about either that you do not know. In respect to the colleges, Atlanta University and its companion colleges are of course much larger, more cosmopolitan, and perhaps better generally staffed than is Alabama State. Because of its size and prestige, the Atlanta group maintains a very stimulating intellectual climate. It of course also has a graduate school (Atlanta University) which adds so much to a campus tone.

As to the politics of the two cities, I know practically nothing about Montgomery that any out-of-state newspaper reader would not know. Atlanta's politics have been dominated for 20 years and more by Mayor Hartsfield. Some of the factors in Atlanta's politics which you might take note of are: the growing size and alertness of the Negro vote, the pervasive influence in Atlanta of the down-town businessmen whose interests are mercantile and proprietary and not industrial, and the long practice in this town of what might be called liberal dissent. In a way, I think that many of the more pleasing aspects of Atlanta are attributable in considerable part to Atlanta's helplessness in state politics, due to the county unit system. People in this city have grown accustomed to thinking of themselves as separated from the state in important respects and perhaps feel that if they are to be separated they may as well act differently.

I am enclosing a reprint of some articles from the New Republic, which includes one on Atlanta. It happens that we have at the printers now a pamphlet which has a section on law enforcement in Montgomery that may interest you; I'll mail it to you as soon as it is off the press and can only hope that it reaches you in time to be of use. Floyd Hunter's book, Community and Power Structure, is about Atlanta and you ought to read it. There is still much in V. O. Key's Southern Politics that is not out of date. There are a few other miscellaneous things from recent periodicals which we have in our files. I do not need to have them copied because you have a good library at hand:

See, on Montgomery, the New Leader, Sept. 12, 1960 article by Larner; the New Yorker, July 16, 1960, article by Hentoff; Dissent, Summer, 1960 articles by Reddick and Janifer (also, generally, the article by Walzer).

See, for Atlanta, The Nation, August 6, 1960 article by Zinn; The Reporter, July 11, 1957 article by Cater; Fortune, September, 1956 article by Hughes.

In a book edited by Nathan Glazer and McEntire, Studies in Housing and Minority Groups, there is a comparative study of Atlanta and Birmingham. The report of the Commission on Civil Rights describes housing in Atlanta at length and relates its status in part to the presence of the Negro colleges here. Dan Wakefield, Revolt in the South, writes about Montgomery in chapter four.

Best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar
Director of Research

According to the New York Times, your study suggests that none of the enterprises which dropped their discriminatory policies suffered any loss of business.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

This is to inquire about the availability of research funds from your Organization for research in race relations.

One of our advanced graduate students who is working for the doctorate is planning a research that would focus particularly on the tactics that have been used, and are now being used, in the various collective undertakings to improve the position of the Negro in American society. His study would involve both library and field work; and in the case of the latter there would be some need for limited financial support, perhaps to the extent of a few hundred dollars.

The student referred to above is Mr. Robert Sweet. He is a mature person, responsible, strongly motivated, and capable. I believe he would make a substantial contribution to our knowledge in this general area of race relations if he is able to proceed with his present plans. He is presently a member of NAIRO, and formerly served on the staff of Dr. Herman Long at Fisk University.

I would appreciate it very much if you would consider the matter and let me know, at your earliest convenience, what the prospects are for some financial support. If you think the prospects are favorable we would, of course, be pleased to send you a detailed prospectus of the research project.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

I am at present doing research on the Negro policeman in the South and in talking with my uncle, Brooks Hays, he suggested that you might have some information that would be of help.

Primarily I am concerned with qualifications for Negro patrolmen, problems, if any, between Negro and White patrolmen, and population of Negros employed.

Also I understand that quite a few areas in the country have started programs similar to The National Institute of Police-Community Relations at Michigan State University, which is represented by leaders in, not only the law enforcement agency, but labor, business, and education as well. Their main objective being a better understanding of the current problems and improved community relations.

I would be interested in knowing if any program of this type has been tried in your area and also appreciate very much any help you can give me in this research. I will look forward to hearing from you in the near future.

I am afraid we cannot give any encouragement about financial support. We have never attempted to aid academic research, and it is probably best that we not change this policy. On the other hand we have, on occasion, been in a position to use portions of studies which fitted into our publications and field programs, and whenever we have done so we have paid a modest honorarium. We have also rather extensive files consisting of clippings from newspapers and other periodicals, and many other materials. The enclosed clipping seems to be the best I can do at the moment in responding to your request for a report on the election in Alabama. However, you should be able to obtain very soon an official tabulation of the results of the election from the Office of the Secretary of State in Montgomery. I regret that the clipping doesn't show how the vote was divided between "pledged" and "unpledged" Democratic candidates for electors. For the state as a whole, the "unpledged" candidates ran ahead of the others, although their margin was not really very great.

Dear Bill:

I think it is tremendous of you to make the offer you have. We shall of course pick up the tab back and forth from Chicago, as well as your time with us in Washington. I wish we could do better.

The meeting will be in Washington, and in a few days you will be getting details of time and place, etc. Incidentally, response to our invitation so far has been good and I believe we will have a sharp group. Your presence makes that adjective all the more fitting.

I am awfully glad the Saturday Review will publish your piece. Sometimes (but not always) I think these things have a way of working themselves out as they should. On the whole I think it is clear that the Saturday Review is a better spot for your article than either Harpers or Atlantic.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mary Ellen:

I hope that before this reaches you I shall have talked with you by telephone. Please read over the enclosed copy of your manuscript. Your reactions to the changes will be most helpful.

I always feel diffident in asking an author to look over her handiwork after I have operated on it. This is not the most enviable job. I did want to reduce the length, and had believed that I should do so more than finally is the case. I hope you won't feel that I have been to ruthless, and if there are any cuts which you feel strongly about, we will want to consider them very carefully. You probably will agree that brevity has virtues for most readers and most "action agencies."

You will notice two spots where I have incorporated material from your supplementary sections. This leaves, however, a great deal of your material still unused. We ought to be thinking about other possible outlets for it, though frankly I have nothing in mind now.

I shall want to read this over again, at least one more time, and I am sure Harold will want to read it also. There may be, in other words, a few more fly-specks cast upon it. But I think you can assume that this is, for the most part, what we come up with and I think it is better to postpone further reading here until we have your comments.

The above matter-of-fact remarks don't indicate anything of my opinion of this job you have done for us. I think it is first-rate. I more than ever am grateful to you for undertaking it. I think you have done a rare job of viewing a half-formed situation with both scholarly perception and awareness of the immediate implications.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Professor Rudwick:

Thank you for your letter of November 14. If the Journal of Negro Education does not take your study, or not on conditions satisfactory to you, we would be glad to have it either for New South or for release in some other form. I certainly agree with you that it would be desirable for it to come out soon.

Dear Miss Rudolf:

We were interested to hear of your research on Negro policemen in the South. We are sending you under separate cover a few items which we have available that are related to your subject. Elliott M. Rudwick, Department of Social Studies, Southern Illinois University, East St. Louis, Illinois, has done the most authoritative recent work on the subject of southern Negro policemen. His findings, however, are still in manuscript form; you may wish to write to him. Professor Elmer Johnson, Department of Sociology, North Carolina State College, Raleigh, N. C., has just completed for us a study of Negro crime. This will be issued as a pamphlet but probably not before February, 1961.

I do not know of any police-community relations institutes held in the South, although it has been called to my attention that the magazine, Social Order, of May, 1960 carried an article by Lewis Radelet in which he stated that such an institute was scheduled for June, 1960 at Wild Acres, N. C.; Mr. Radelet is an associate director of the National Institute on Police-Community Relations at Michigan State University and you may wish to correspond with him. I would suggest also that you write for information on this question to Mr. David A. McCandless at the Southern Police Institute, University of Louisville.

Will you kindly place us on your mailing list to receive review copies of your publications?

Currently we would be particularly interested in reviewing the report "Racial Violence and Law Enforcement" by George McMillan which you have recently issued.

For your information I enclose a copy of our recent issue. Our readers are chiefly factory workers and university students interested in the labor movement and the struggle for civil rights.

Thank you for your prompt attention in this matter.

Mr. James Cook

Dear Mr. Cook:

In reply to your letters of November 12 and 13, we are sending you under separate cover a bundle of stuff. It has been selected in the hope that it will provide most of what we can tell you on the questions listed in your letter of November 12. Two of the items requested specifically in your letter of November 14 are no longer available. These are Report L-9 on the Virginia private schools and the pamphlet Intimidation, Reprisal, and Violence. In lieu of the former, we shall send you as soon as it is released a new report on Virginia's private schools, prepared for us by Dr. Mary Ellen Goodman, and about ready now for mimeographing. The Intimidation, Reprisal, and Violence pamphlet is out of stock, but it was reprinted in Part 3 of Hearings Before the Sub-committee on Constitutional Rights of the U. S. Senate Committee on the Judiciary, 1959, at p. 1573;" these hearings ought to be available at a convenient library.

The following comments refer to numbered paragraphs in your November 12 letter:

3) We did school desegregation reports in 1958 and 1959 and they are out of stock; at least we can't find them now and if we can later we will send to you.

4 & 5) Your source is Race Relations Law Reporter.

6) You might write to the Race Relations Department at Fisk University, for Fellowship for Whom, a study of racial inclusiveness in the Congregational Christian Churches.

9) Write to Tuskegee Institute, Alabama.

11) Your best source is the American Jewish Committee's monthly report, For Your Information. Write to the American Jewish Committee Institute on Human Relations, 165 - 56 Street, New York 52; perhaps if you explain your need they could furnish you with some back copies.

14) There are so many segregationists' newspapers. I would certainly add to the ones you have listed the Richmond News Leader, Montgomery Advertiser, and the Birmingham papers.

16) Professor Elbert Johnson, of North Carolina State College, has completed for us a short study of Negro crime. His manuscript is on my desk, but I doubt that we shall get it in print before about February.

18) Your best source is the Report of the Commission on Civil Rights; some of the acts are summarized in our The Negro and the Ballot in the South. These 1959 reports do not, of course, cover Fayette County.

22) In addition to Race Relations Law Reporter, your best source is Jack Greenberg, Race Relations and American Law.

23) Robt. McCFigg, of South Carolina, and Charles Bloch, of Georgia, are probably more important than either of the men you mentioned.

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar
Director of Research

Dear Mr. Fleming:

After writing my lengthy request for information two days ago, I encountered the following references to Southern Regional Council reports in Melvin Tumin's segregation-desegregation bibliography published by the Anti-Defamation League:

1. Green, Donald R., and Gauerke, Warren E., "If the Schools Are Closed...," 1959.

2. Price, Margaret, "The Negro and the Ballot in the South," 1959.

3. SRC, "Public Schools and the Economy of Virginia," (Report No. L-5, June 12, 1959).

4. SRC, "The Private School Answer to the Desegregation Crisis: The Virginia Experience," Report No. L-9, Sept. 1, 1959.

5. SRC, "Housing for Negroes in Atlanta, Ga.," Report No. SRC 10, June 24, 1959.

6. SRC, American Friends Service Committee, and National Council of Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., "Intimidation, Reprisal and Violence in the South's Racial Crisis," 1959.

These seem to be right on the button of some of the questions contained in my letter of November 12.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

I am beginning to pick up a bit of steam on my book-writing project and once again call on you for a bit of information and guidance.

In the following paragraphs I'll set forth some of the material I need. I think it's likely that the Southern Regional Council has published reports on a great many of these matters and might still have a copy to send me. If not, then I figure it's likely that you might know off-hand where to refer me for such a report. I say this as a preface so that you won't feel overwhelmed by the length of this list of needs.

Assuming you haven't now fled toward the exit, I might suggest that you can respond to these queries simply by the number with such phrases as "No SRC material on this" and "Ask Urban League for 1957 report on this matter" and "Enclosed is our June, 1955, report on this." Of course, I would also welcome any additional comments you (or Mrs. Flowers) might have time to make, but I don't want you to feel bogged down by any of these questions and requests.

RHA 11/16/60

1. I am enclosing my check for $2 for a subscription to the very fine New South. Presumably no libraries in the San Francisco area have kept bound copies of New South, so if you have any extra copies of past issues lying around your office I would like to have as many as you feel disposed to send me.

2. I'd like to have any SRC report or reference to a report on the increases and decreases in the number of Negro voters in the various Southern states through the past two decades to the present. (I am familiar with Henry Lee Moon's book).

3. SRC reports (similar to your "Report on School Desegregation for 1960-61") for the years 1954, 1955, 1956, 1957, 1958, and 1959.

Low Echo

3. SRC or other reports on the effects that the May 17, 1954, decision has had on States' expenditures for Negro schools in the South.

4. SRC or other reports giving a round-up of all the post-1954 segregation laws passed by the Southern states to date.

RPL 5. SRC or other reports on any changes in the [redacted] Klan laws of Southern states since the May, 1954, decision.

Taylor 6. SRC or other reports on actual and theoretical integration in the churches.

7. SRC orother reports on desegregation in labor unions.

8. Reports on dynamitings and other secret violence in the South in the past decade.

9. Reports bringing lynching statistics and interpretations up to date.

10. Any reports on incidents of "individual" violence with racial overtones (example: Till case).

11. Any reports on Citizens Councils and/or Citizens Council-type organizations and Ku Klux Klan activity since the writing of Hodding Carter III's The South Strikes Back.

release 12. Any reports on desegregation in federal employment in the South. (I am familiar with Peters' discussion of this in The Southern Temper.)

13. Any reports on anti-Negro literature. (I have, of course, asked the anti-Defamation League for information in this area.)

Race in the news 14. Any reports on the treatment given to Negroes in the Southern press. (In The Strange Career of Jim Crow, Woodward mentions an SRC report showing "marked improvement in treatment of Negro news by Southern newspapers"; I presume this was in the mid-1950s. I would like to have a copy of that report plus any subsequent one on the same subject. Also, I would like to know which Southern papers in addition to the Jackson Daily News and the Charleston News and Courier are particularly influential as segregationist organs.)

LWD. answer. 15. Any recent reports on the number of Negro law enforcement officers employed in the various Southern states.

16. Any recent reports on Negro crime in the Southern states.

17. Any reports on the subject of police brutality or the violation of Negroes' civil rights in Southern places.

CCR 18. Any reports on the investigations and cases undertaken as the result of recent Federal civil rights legislation (as, for example, in Macon County, Ala., and Fayette County, Tenn.).

19. Any reports on the increase of desegregation of private schools in the South.

20. Any reports on desegregation (or the lack of it) in Southern private industry and on the changing attitudes of industrial leaders and businessmen. (Example: any reliable report on the extent to which management feels that anti-Negro feeling tends to protect industry against unionization. Another example: any report on the effects that racial strife has on a community's chances to get new industries.

21. Any reports that you might suggest on the status of "liberalism" and "moderation" in Southern politics....Any reports enumerating and perhaps evaluating the state legislators who have spoken or voted against the many segregation bills which have been passed by the states since May, 1954....Also, any reports describing the positions taken on segregation by the present Southern governors and/or Congressmen in comparison with the positions taken by them or their predecessors in the mid-1950s. (I am thinking, for example, of Ross Barnett's attitudes and programs compared with T. C. Coleman's; John Patterson's compared with Jim Folsom's; Jimmie Davis' compared with Earl Long's; Orval Faubus' compared with Sid McMath's, etc. In The Strange Career of Jim Crow, Woodward notes, for instance, that two North Carolina Congressmen who refused to sign the Southern Manifesto were promptly defeated in 1956, and we recall the defeats suffered by Brooks Hays and John Orr in 1958).....Or have some "liberals" and "moderates" also been added to the list of Southern political officeholders?

22. Any reports recapitulating the legal actions taken in behalf of Negroes in the field of civil rights and school desegregation and outlining the major cases which are now pending.

23. Any reports evaluating the segregationists' current legal position, and any reports which might indicate to me the most influential present legal brains among the segregationists (Rogers of Summerton, S. C.? Eugene Cook of Georgia? or?) Bagg Block

24. Any report on the positions which Southern educators are willing to take now in public in comparison with their positions prior to and just after the May 17, 1954, decision....Any report indicating to what extent other Southern educators (white and Negro) have shared the fate of Dr. Chester Travelstead of the University of South Carolina and, say, Mrs. Flo Way, who lost her teaching job in Jefferson County, Fla., after defending Dr. Deborah Coggins.

25. Any reports on the activities of women's organizations for and against segregation. Which are the most ~~[illegible]~~ significant groups and individual women on "both sides" of the controversy?

26. Any reports on the present attitudes and morale of Southern Negroes (as measured by pollsters, say) in view of developments since May, 1954. Also, any reports on the public positions taken by Negro groups now in comparison with 1954 (For example, I recall that the state association of Negro teachers in Mississippi in 1954 or 1955 voted in favor of the continuation of segregated schools, and I wonder if that position has been changed and if it has ever been shared by other Negro organizations.)

27. Any list of organizations (with addresses, if convenient) which are working in the South toward the smooth accomplishment of desegregation---organizations such as the Nashville Community Relations Conference, the NAACP, the Urban League, etc.

28. A statement of the purposes of the Southern Regional Council and, if such exists, a statement of what the SRC foresees that race relations will be like in the South a decade or so from now.

Again, I realize that this is a burdensomely long list of needed items, but I need not tell you that it's a difficult subject to tackle and, with the experience of your staff, you are in position to point immediately to information that might take me days of research to find on my own. I can only say that my aim is serious and I want my book(s) to be a worthwhile contribution to an understanding of the Southern scene.

My best wishes to you and Mrs. Flowers.

Sincerely,

James Cook

THE NEW SOCIETY

BLUE COLLAR: By Al Whitney

DETROIT.—The atmosphere at the Chrysler-Jefferson plant on November 9, the day after the election, was peculiar. In other years, when the candidates supported by the workers had won, they would come into the shop hurrahing and booing the bosses. This year they didn't say anything to the bosses. There was just a kind of quiet jubilation among themselves.

"Things will be better from now on," people were saying to one another. There were great expectations in the shop, greater than any I can recall after an election. But when you tried to pin somebody down as to what would be better, nobody seemed to know what it was he was expecting. "Things can't stay where they are now," some said. "There will have to be some more jobs somehow," said others.

There was quite a bit of discussion about how Tennessee and Kentucky had gone Republican. There was a certain amazement, particularly since Deep South states had stayed Democratic, but at the same time no question about the reason for it. Everyone agreed that it was prejudice. By prejudice they didn't mean race, they meant religious prejudice. But then they quickly lumped race and religious prejudice together, and said that America still has a lot of prejudice deep inside it. Florida they had expected to go Republican, because Florida is looked on as the haven for Northern millionaires, the Southern rich, and a heap of retired factory workers who have changed sides and who now, in their little cottages in Florida, believe that their welfare rests with the rich instead of with the poor.

One guy had lost $3.00 on a Nixon bet. He said the reason he would never vote for Kennedy was that Kennedy was a Catholic and a Kennedy victory would mean Catholics running the country. Someone asked him what he was and he said "Protestant." Whereupon one man asked him whether that meant he would want a Protestant to run the country. Others began saying they didn't want a Protestant, a Baptist, a hillbilly, a Northern conservative or a Southern conservative running the country. In fact, they didn't want a President from any particular group. They only wanted somebody to run the country for all the people, and particularly for the poor people because the poor people are the majority in the U.S.

Finally, as in all American elections, there was one thing missing. Although they felt that Kennedy's victory was a victory for the working people, nobody thought of Kennedy as part of the working class. In fact, they thought of him as a rich man in the tradition of Franklin D. Roosevelt allying himself with the lower classes.

WHITE COLLAR: By Filomena Daddario

The day after election my office was buzzing with discussion.

Among Kennedy supporters his victory was accepted by some jubilantly (one girl was singing and dancing practically the whole day); by others soberly—"I'm glad he won, but now he has got to prove himself and we have got to stick by him." Another Kennedy supporter, a Catholic, had been worried before the election that the religious issue might defeat him, but afterwards said, "That so-and-so had better deliver the goods—or else" and "We Catholics are going to get the business now whenever he makes a wrong move."

Among the Nixon supporters there was outright gloom on the part of some, others took it philosophically with an eye towards 1964. But when a Nixon supporter said, "It could have been worse. He could have been a Jew," she was called down by practically everyone, Nixon and Kennedy supporters alike. She was described as being mentally distorted, sick, ignorant, and as one girl was trying to "understand" such a person, another girl closed the discussion with, "Let's face it, she is just an idiot." There ensued a discussion as to the exact policy of Americans where the State and Church are concerned. A Nixon supporter explained that it would be impossible for Kennedy to carry on as a Catholic because he would be impeached and she had full confidence that Kennedy would not veer from this fundamental conception of American politics.

Then someone said we should keep in mind that Hitler was a Catholic and during his reign had closed all churches but Catholic ones. A refugee of Nazi Germany said this was ridiculous, that Hitler persecuted Catholics as well as Jews. Everyone then became concerned with the historical facts. Since I am "connected with a newspaper," I was asked to call the editor of CORRESPONDENCE. To the surprise of some informed people, including the editor, it was

Kennedy Win Deepens U. S. Crisis By Building Great Expectations

If Nixon had won the election, the U.S. would still be faced with the fundamental problems of what to do about its declining prestige in the world, mounting unemployment due to automation, the second-class status of its Negro citizens. But Kennedy's victory has deepened the social crisis because Kennedy, unlike Nixon, has created the illusion that his election would mean a vigorous tackling and solution of these critical issues of nation, class and race.

Kennedy has been placed in the White House by the votes of millions of workers, Negroes, women and young people. As the campaign came to a close, the great masses of industrial workers concentrated in the big Northern cities began to feel that the country was confronted with a real choice between the do-and-know-nothingism of the Republicans and the "concerned" leadership promised by Kennedy. Friday night before election, one million Chicagoans gathered in the rain for a Kennedy rally.

Election night practically the whole adult population, (an estimated 83,000,000) followed the returns by TV. Many people went to bed at midnight and arose again at 3 a.m. The Kennedy supporters felt more involved than they had ever felt in an election of this century and more excited than if they had been at a World Series.

The closeness of the popular vote and the obvious support given Nixon by the conservative Midwest and such Southern states as Virginia, Florida, Tennessee, and Kentucky gave the population an invaluable insight into the deep social and economic divisions within the country and an unforgettable experience in social thinking. The determination to ignore Kennedy's religion was a conscious demonstration by the workers against the divide and rule policy of the ruling class.

All history, and particularly the history of the New Deal in the Thirties, shows that it has been the hope and taste of better things, as much as want and misery, which has spurred people to revolt.

Kennedy can now be expected to duplicate FDR's first One Hundred Days. He has no alternative. He will make every effort to sweep clean, bring young people into his administration, make dramatic decisions. But what can he do to solve the fundamental contradictions of American capi-

THESE UNITED STATES By Frank

"Mr. President, I know you can't make jobs for all of us—like Mr. Reuther promised—but how about one of those jobs Mr. Nixon said we already had?"

AN EDITORIAL

Don't Leave It to Walter or Jack

While Reuther & Co. were out drumming up votes for Kennedy and the Democrats, workers at the Sikorsky Division of United Aircraft in Stratford, Conn., were quietly voting themselves out of the UAW. What the Sikorsky workers will do next, we don't know. But they have made one thing clear—they are no longer looking to Reuther & Co. to take the lead in their behalf.

We do not recommend that other workers follow the Sikorsky example and vote themselves out of the union. Each group of workers will have to decide that for itself according to its particular circumstances.

But we do recommend that workers not depend upon Reuther & Co. to press their demands on the new administration.

The top union leaders have already announced that, despite the key role which labor played in putting Kennedy into the White House, they are not going to put pressure on him and embarrass him. They are using the old excuse and falling for the line that is now being assiduously propagated by the daily press—that because Kennedy's popular vote was close, he has no mandate to take drastic action that will antagonize the losers.

We believe and recommend the exact opposite. Precisely because Kennedy's margin of popular victory was so narrow, the maximum pressure should be put on him to demonstrate his "concern" for the great masses of the people. The squeeze which the Southern Democrats are putting on him and the stranglehold of the monstrous state apparatus which he now takes over should be counter-balanced by an even more overwhelming pressure from the people.

We hope that workers from the shop floor, by departments, by locals, as groups and as individuals, will let Kennedy know how they are being driven to an early death by man-o-mation; that unemployed workers, women, Negroes and youth will bombard the new President with reminders of their grievances and demands; that Negroes (and whites) will not let him forget his campaign pledges on civil rights; that the millions of objectors to nuclear war and Kennedy's "America First" plans will warn him of their intentions to resist any armaments build-up to combat the recession; that wherever he is, in Hyannisport, Palm Beach or Washington, letters and delegations will remind him that those who voted for him have their own ideas on how to "move this country safely through the 1960s."

The union leaders are not going to do this. It is up to the ranks.

prove himself and we have got to stick by him." Another Kennedy supporter, a Catholic, had been worried before the election that the religious issue might defeat him, but afterwards said, "That so-and-so had better deliver the goods—or else" and "We Catholics are going to get the business now whenever he makes a wrong move."

Among the Nixon supporters there was outright gloom on the part of some, others took it philosophically with an eye towards 1964. But when a Nixon supporter said, "It could have been worse. He could have been a Jew," she was called down by practically everyone, Nixon and Kennedy supporters alike. She was described as being mentally distorted, sick, ignorant, and as one girl was trying to "understand" such a person, another girl closed the discussion with, "Let's face it, she is just an idiot." There ensued a discussion as to the exact policy of Americans where the State and Church are concerned. A Nixon supporter explained that it would be impossible for Kennedy to carry on as a Catholic because he would be impeached and she had full confidence that Kennedy would not veer from this fundamental conception of American politics.

Then someone said we should keep in mind that Hitler was a Catholic and during his reign had closed all churches but Catholic ones. A refugee of Nazi Germany said this was ridiculous, that Hitler persecuted Catholics as well as Jews. Everyone then became concerned with the historical facts. Since I am "connected with a newspaper," I was asked to call the editor of CORRESPONDENCE. To the surprise of some informed people, including the editor, it was discovered Hitler had indeed been born a Catholic but had made no special overtures towards the Catholics or any particular religion. His main concern was the master race, Germany First, and he destroyed anything that got in the way of that.

What was obvious to this writer is the hunger of the average American citizen to participate in the politics of his country as never before. Politics is today close to home. What decisions the new President makes towards a man like Hoffa will not only affect Hoffa but thousands of truckdrivers all over the U.S. and bring the question of the future of the union movement into sharper focus than ever before. This hunger to know and to participate will express itself in developments in this country that no one could ever have predicted.

News In Brief

Less Room at the Top

Ford Motor Co. has named a new president, Chrysler has named a new manager for the Dodge Division and will soon name a new corporation president, GM has appointed new general managers at Cadillac and Buick. In each case there has been a shake-up and purge of the administrative set-up.

First and Second Class Cave Dwellers

"Community of Fear," a special report issued by the Center for the Study of Democratic Institutions in Santa Barbara, Calif., forecasts an underground life for most Americans if the military elite now in the saddle continues the arms race with Russia. Meanwhile both luxury and economy type underground shelters are being built by American industry.

All history, and particularly the history of the New Deal in the Thirties, shows that it has been the hope and taste of better things, as much as want and misery, which has spurred people to revolt.

Kennedy can now be expected to duplicate FDR's first One Hundred Days. He has no alternative. He will make every effort to sweep clean, bring young people into his administration, make dramatic decisions. But what can he do to solve the fundamental contradictions of American capitalism?

He cannot end the life and death struggle with Russia, and before long with China, for mastery of the world. He cannot stem the mounting tide of neutralism that has gained its momentum from the balance of terror between Russia and the U. S. He cannot control the Frankenstein of automation and the devastation it has spread in one-third of the industrial areas of the nation. He can only moderate, not destroy, the power that the county political machines hold over the lives of Negroes (and whites) in the South.

But Kennedy has created the illusion and the hope that he can do all this, and every step or misstep that he takes is being passionately discussed by the millions of workers in the plant, the office and the community desperately yearning for mastery over their own destinies and the destiny of their country. He has a tiger by the tail.

Voting Wasn't Enough

Once again, on Election Day, young Negro and white Americans demonstrated that to put democracy to work you need more than voting once a year.

In New York City, on November 8, two hundred and fifty people, mostly teenagers, paraded to both the Nixon and Kennedy headquarters to demand civil rights action in the South. Many of the demonstrators wore blank buttons to indicate their opposition to both candidates. The march was sponsored by the Committee for Protest Action, 5 Beekman St.

In Jackson, Tenn., some 150 to 170 Negro college students were arrested for parading to the Madison County courthouse to protest the denial of registration rights to Negroes in Haywood and Fayette Counties. The students had merely planned to lead a prayer for civil rights on the courthouse lawn but they were charged with disorderly conduct, threatening breach of the peace and violating a city ordinance requiring a permit to stage a parade.

In Washington, D. C., twenty-four Negro and white students picketed the White House in below-freezing weather to demand immediate action by the new President on civil rights. Beginning at dawn, the marchers continued until well into the night, awaiting the outcome of the elections. The leader of the pickets, Lawrence Henry, a 26-year-old Howard University divinity student, said that the demonstration was "not a means of agitation but a coordinated move with students all over the country as a reminder to the new President."

In Atlanta, Ga., twelve white Emory College students picketed a polling place in protest against segregation and discrimination in voting and registration in the South.

Congo Deaths Lie at U. S. Door

A few days before the Congo achieved its independence on June 30 of this year, the chief Congolese leaders with a mass political following were able to come to an agreement. They agreed that Mr. Kasavubu, who is the leader of the Association of the Lower Congo and stands for a federated form of government, would become President, while Patrice Lumumba, who had won the largest vote in the national elections and stands for a centralized government, would become Prime Minister. Before the elections the outgoing Belgians had been openly opposed to Lumumba because of his known ties with the African nationalist movement. But after Lumumba's mass meetings throughout the Congo had demonstrated his political popularity and his ability to keep order, the Belgians stopped their open attacks on him.

The agreement between Lumumba and Kasavubu, arrived at after the most delicate negotiations, was in the best traditions of political statesmanship and would have done credit to the most experienced, most mature politicians in the most developed, most advanced nations of the world.

The crime is that it was given practically no opportunity to function. The first threat came from the deliberate and conscious efforts of the Belgians to produce disorder by sponsoring the Katanga secessionist movement, and provoking the mutiny of the Force Publique. Even then, despite the chaos engineered by the Belgians, it might still have been possible for Kasavubu and Lumumba, as leaders of the central government, to restore order with the help of the UN. What made this impossible was the steady attacks on Lumumba by the U.S., both personally and on the grounds that he was pro-Communist. The U.S. refused to recognize the legally constituted Lumumba-Kasavubu government, it refused to allow the UN forces in the Congo to back this government, it insisted that UN forces remain neutral while it was encouraging the revolt of the pro-Western, anti-Communist Colonel Mobutu. Nor can the U.S. plead ignorance of the principles at stake. These were stated unequivocally by Nkrumah in his speech to the UN Assembly this fall.

The result has been the loss of countless lives in the Congo and the end is not yet in sight.

Dag Hammarskjold and Rajeshwar Dayal, the UN representative in the Congo, are now trying to find their way back to the policy that should have been theirs in the first place, the unmistakable denunciation of the Belgian counter-revolution and the support of the legal government. But the U.S. is still maneuvering and intriguing. It has attacked the UN report for its condemnation of the Belgians, it is doing everything in its power to keep the Congo crisis and discussion alive in the UN where it is a football in the cold war and to sabotage the efforts of the Asian-African nations to bring some order into the situation outside of the UN, it is encouraging Kasavubu to make his break with Lumumba irrevocable.

The responsibility which the U.S. bears for the loss of life and the continuing disorder in the Congo is a heavy one. It will take much more than task forces of young idealistic American technicians and teachers to atone for the crimes which have been perpetrated not only against the Congolese people but humanity as a whole.

Next Time Khrushchev May Be Really Out

The Detroit Times, the Hearst daily, carried the rumor of Mr. K's ousting in big bold headlines. Two days later the Times folded completely and suddenly (see p. 4). It was only a coincidence, but in the episode is summed up the reaction of most people here to the rumor.

Next time, however, such a report may be much better founded. Mr. K, like Mr. Eisenhower, has been running around the world like a chicken with his head cut off, improvising from day to day. Since the Hungarian Revolution in 1956 Russian moral credit has been little more than zero. The power of Khrushchev has rested solely on the Russian priority in sending up Sputnik, handouts to the new nations, and especially the hollowness of any American alternative and the determination of Western Europeans not to be drawn into another war from which they will be "liberated" a third time by American arms.

At home the Russian people are fed up with the unending sacrifices extracted from them on earth in order to compete with

GREAT EXPECTATIONS

I have confidence in Kennedy because he has wild ideas and that is what we need today for the mess we are in. Even with his principles, he has sense enough to know that it is going to take some wild ideas to get us out of this crisis.

What we need is a limited war. I would be willing to give my life to see some of the rich people in this country go through what I saw the kids go through in Korea and what I have seen the people in Europe trying to recover from.

The girls in the small shops where I work are almost all Catholic and were hot for Kennedy. But the day after the election, the girl who was most for Kennedy, in an almost bigoted way, said, "He'd better do right or I'll spit on him."

Another girl, when she heard that they may go through a re-count, said, "If they can't even count my vote right, I'm not going to vote at all."

The question of Catholicism was not ignored. Many people actively supported Kennedy to demonstrate that religion should not play a part. Nixon supporters were angry at Kennedy's raising the religious issue.

Children also played a role. There was the youngster who wrote Nixon to ask if it was true that if Nixon was elected there would be no holidays; if Kennedy won, there would be a four-day week. A few days before the election a little girl I know came home from school with the verse "Kennedy is in the White House waiting to be elected; Nixon is in the garbage can waiting to be collected." (The same verse circulated among schoolchildren in Detroit.—Editor.)

There are rumors that Mexican-Americans were challenged here at the polls and asked to recite the Constitution before they could vote. Interestingly, some women who could hardly speak English could recite the Constitution.

HIGH COST OF PRODUCTION

On Nov. 1 Harry Lafata, Chief Steward at Chrysler Local 7, dropped dead on the Final OK Assembly Line. Although his death was attributed to a weak heart, you could feel the pulse of the shop a few minutes after. "He's another one for the big boys!" "He paid the high cost of production." No one had much to say about him except that his death was the result of working conditions at Chrysler.

Local 7 Member

At the Chrysler - Trenton Plant the Local vice-president, Jim Martin, swore to uphold union principles. But the seniority principle, which the union boasts is its main contribution to the workers' rights, is constantly violated by him.

He has very little seniority himself and he always supports and advocates that people with low seniority (half of the plant has low seniority) should have equal rights with old seniority employees when layoffs occur. He fights to support the company principle of department seniority so that he can keep low seniority workers on the job who will vote for him while workers with many years seniority are laid off. And he has the backing of the International on every deal that he puts over on the membership. These are union principles upside down! A house cleaning is needed but how can you do it

HOW CAN WORKERS CONTROL UNION REPS?

Parliament is a factory of words. In the factory we produce goods. Industry is much more complicated now and the worker does only one operation. Nevertheless with the shop steward system we could make the factories run without supervision.

If a dispute comes up and the steward succeeds in protecting the worker, it builds up confidence in the steward. If the steward is a class-conscious one, he can also coach the workers in what they are producing for, e.g., when the community needs a little more production. If we can produce things, we don't need speakers, parliamentarians. We need people who know how to run industry and the workers are the ones who know best. The steward could know more than the superintendent.

On the other hand, in a mass organization like the auto industry, in the case of a strike you can't have a loose steward body formulating its own policy in conflict with the Local or International one.

You have to have some well-organized centralized body. You can't just have a lot of loose ideas around. Some kind of centralized office is necessary to exchange information from plant to plant. You can't act only from the level of a single shop.

At home the Russian people are fed up with the unending sacrifices extracted from them on earth in order to compete with the U.S. for the moon. All history shows that in the face of such restlessness opposing factions emerge in the government, one faction proposing a soft policy to appease the masses, the other demanding a tough policy to check them. We can be sure that such a conflict is now agitating the Kremlin leaders, with Khrushchev trying to keep the peace between them.

The Sidewalks of New York

New York City transit workers, firemen, sanitation workers, policemen and now teachers have been using every method of working class struggle, including the strike, to enforce their demands for more pay, shorter working hours and better working conditions. Mayor Wagner simply can't understand the growing belligerence and resentment of city employees when under his liberal administration there have been improvements in pay and fringe benefits.

There is an explosion on the way, an explosion of great significance in exposing the limitations of the Welfare State and pointing the road to a new type of city administration which will be as sharp a break from the progressive liberalism introduced by Fiorello LaGuardia in the 30s as LaGuardia's policies were different from those of his Tammany Hall predecessors.

We urge our New York readers and subscribers to keep in close touch with these developments and report them in the columns of CORRESPONDENCE.

WHOLE WORLD'S WAITING

All the English people I've talked to are for Kennedy. The morning after the election when I went shopping, the butcher, grocer, wine-merchant, fish-monger, greengrocer, all asked beamingly, "So did you get your man?" The fish-monger also said he thought it was time the British started voting for the American president because "With this Polaris and all, they can do what they like with us."

Well, anyway he got in and the whole of the world is waiting on him.

In a lighter vein, I must say the thing I like most about Kennedy so far is his wife. Her unabashed "Reading books," in answer to a reporter's question about what she liked doing best, really delighted me. Also her response to the query about how she would like being First Lady which seemed to say she thought she could just about live through it. If Mrs. Kennedy can inspire American women to think, at least, we may get somewhere.

SIT-INS OVER THERE

Last Saturday night we conducted an experiment. Some of the guys went down to the Atlantic Bar. This is where all the white guys hang out. The establishment belongs to the German people. Every time a colored guy goes there by himself those down home G.I.'s beat him up or pester him in some way. They have lied to the German people and convinced them that we are trouble makers and everything else they can think of.

About ten of us went there Saturday night and one white G.I. started trouble and the owner called the M.P.'s. The M.P.'s came and told all the G.I.'s to leave the place. After we left, they opened the bar up again for the whites.

Sunday we went back again and the same thing happened.

They tell us whenever we go to places like that in a bunch that we go to start trouble, but when a bunch of fay boys go, that's all right. Whenever we stand up for our rights, they say we are Communist-influenced. They threaten to bust us up and put us in jail and everything else.

WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

Thanksgiving Day is almost here and I ask, what did the Pilgrims come over here for? They came over here for freedom of religion so that they can serve God in their own way. And now today it is all together different. You have to serve God in the way you are told to serve Him.

Where do we go from here? Give me liberty or give me death. Freedom of speech is no more desired — equality is no more desired; morality is no more desired. At this point I would like to know what has our world gone into.

This is only my opinion of how things are today. I wish a copy of this could get to each and every citizen and I was able to get a comment from each individual as to his or her thinking on this particular matter.

HOLLYWOOD

In her article on "Ben Hur," I think that Filomena Daddario was taken in by Hollywood. "Ben Hur" IS the chariot race--period. Take this out and the whole film is very little. Try to put another form of contest in its place, less spectacular, and the so-called struggle of the Jewish people against the Romans would not be strong enough, as the film treats it, to carry the audience. In fact, the chariot scene is so good that if the rest of the picture were cut out, it alone would still be worth the price of admission. The revolution that she talks about is much more her own creation than the film's. It is a pity, however, that she had to excel Hollywood at its own publicity campaigns by saying that the film "sustains" Michelangelo's Adam. Michelangelo is no doubt turning in his grave and good Italians may yet be massing in demonstration at this kind of surrender to Hollywood Chauvinism.

We saw the movie PSYCHO and were hysterical from laughing. People would say to us, "When you go see this movie PSYCHO, hold on to your seats." We held on, not because we were scared but because we were hysterical.

It all started when Janet Leigh stole money from her boss and went to another town. On the way it was raining very hard so she stopped at a motel. This is where she meets Tony Perkins who is the clerk. He convinces her to have dinner with him and his mother, but when he goes to ask his mother, Janet Leigh hears them arguing. After dinner he watches her take a shower through a hole in his office and before you know it, she is getting stabbed in the shower. Tony finds the body, wraps it in the shower curtain, puts it in the trunk of her car and pushes the car in a swamp. In the meantime her boss misses the money and her sister starts to worry about her and calls in a private eye.

Well, if you want to know more about it, go see it yourself. There was a lady across from us who would jump out of her seat about three feet. Then there was another lady who made believe she was looking for something on the floor, so she wouldn't have to watch the scarey parts. But we say, just be prepared for a good laugh.

MEN AND WOMEN

What makes me so mad these days when I go to the movies is that men like Yves Montand and Cary Grant can obviously have so many lines in their faces and still be appealing to the young heroines. But a woman has to keep herself young and use all kinds of creams to make her face smooth before she can be considered attractive.

Femina Nouva is young but a fine journalist and it is a great pleasure reading her articles. I would be very glad to know what she thinks about the following: Why is it that American women, who have waged such a splendid battle for equality and who have won so many victories, why is it that there are not more of them in the professions and the arts? Do all women doctors have to become baby doctors? Do all women teachers have to become elementary school teachers? I warn her — exceptions prove the rule.

I am not implying that that is the solution to all problems but it is a question that many foreign women ask me and which I have difficulty in answering. Nor do I imply any attack on my fellow countrymen. Perhaps femina can give me a nouva answer to an old question.

CAMPUS TALK

Colleges are over-crowded today. More and more kids are going to college and the colleges can only accommodate a limited number. It's the cream of the crop getting in, and that means just to get into college you must possess a higher scholastic record and more to offer.

As an example, I applied and received a reply to the effect that the school had been filled. 1,500 applications have been turned down. In the meantime I have to wait it out for another term, losing time.

In a place like Ferris Institute, a smaller college, there are four terms to the year so that the wait is not so bad. In some cases, such as Highland Park Junior College and Wayne State University, you would have to wait the full term.

At the Wayne Student Center the white students use the second-floor lounge, the colored use the third floor one. Only a few whites come up to the third floor and they sit separately. One way of looking at it is that there is more noise upstairs and maybe it's harder to study.

I had the impression the white students were for Nixon. You would think that by the time you reach college kids wouldn't write on bathroom walls, but there were Nixon slogans on all of them.

Neutralism's Growing Power

By James Boggs

Two policies have disturbed the status quo of the advanced countries of the West and the East. They are Passive Resistance and Neutralism. Both came from the so-called backward nations of Asia and Africa. Passive Resistance was put forward by Gandhi in his movement for winning Indian Independence. To this day this method is used by millions to gain freedom and moral victory for themselves throughout the world. Now neutralism is substituting the international power of moral convictions for the international power of arms.

Since the beginning of recorded history, nations have been forming alliances either to protect themselves or to expand their power. This has been especially true in Europe. To this day there is not one European nation which has not belonged, at one time or another, to a power alliance. These alliances have been so complex that allied nations could later end up fighting each other.

America is no exception. In the revolutionary war against England, it allied itself with France. In World War I, it allied itself with France and England to fight Germany. In World War II, it allied itself with France, England, China, and Russia to fight Hitler Germany and Japan.

In 1945, at the first meeting of the United Nations in San Francisco, where nations were making a second attempt to form an organization to settle international disputes and prevent another world war, more time was spent by the American delegates laying the basis for NATO, SEATO, etc. than in organizing a solid basis for the UN.

The Half That Hasn't Been Told

How Negro Parents Taught Board

By a Detroit Teacher

Nothing but the Detroit Board of Education's own "policy" was responsible for the ugly boycott staged by white parents in the Northwest Detroit area against the busing of Negro children from their overcrowded schools to three predominantly white, or "white schools" (see the last issue of CORRESPONDENCE). The Board's "policy" has been to send children to the school closest to their homes; or, if their neighborhood school is overcrowded, to bus them as a group to the nearest school or schools with available space. The actual practice, however, has been to permit individual white children to go to white schools instead of "transitional" or "Negro" schools closer to their homes. This was constantly seen in the Miller High School area during World War II when the school was changing from white to Negro, The boundaries of the transitional and/or Negro schools, such as Central High School after 1952, have also been stretched to include the Negroes as they moved into white areas. These actual practices only served to reinforce the segregationist elements in the city and alienate the Negros.

Other situations forced the Negroes to take direct action against the Board. Parents from Miller High had to march on the Board to get a swimming pool after the war, and, as one former Miller teacher explained, "Only when they (the Board) looked out the window and saw all those black faces" did they build the pool. In fact, the parents' organization got so strong at Miller that the Board took drastic action—it "disbanded" the school in a quick and underhanded manner in 1957.

The Board could not close down every school that presented a "problem," so it was forced to deal with the next two major Negro protests in a different manner. In 1959, the parents from the Pattengill School vehemently protested the busing of some of the Pattengill students to another Negro school, the Houghton School, five miles away, in an inferior, run-down, transient area. (See Vol. 4, No. 2.) The Pattengill parents finally forced Superintendent Samuel H. Brownell to admit publicly that he "had not known" space was available at nearer (white) schools only a mile and a half or two miles away from the Pattengill school.

This year the Negro parents in the overcrowded center district of the city lost no time protesting half-day sessions for their small children. Furor was created when Supt. Brownell refused to allow the press (the Negro press was waiting) to sit in on his meeting with the Roosevelt School's parents group. The various parents' groups involved wanted decent schools for their children within walking distance; busing was accepted only as a temporary, stopgap measure.

The Board was forced by these Negro parents to bus the center district children some place. There was (and still is) no extra space in any Negro school in the center district. This time the Board did not dare to attempt to bus the children to another district's Negro schools—no matter how distant. The Board simply had to implement its "policy" of busing children to the nearest school with available space. This meant sending the Negro children to white schools. The reactionary white elements, encouraged by years of Board duplicity, staged an immediate boycott which they assumed would force the Board to revert to its old pro-segregation practices. The boycott was unsuccessful because the Board did not dare to give in to the whites and buck the well-organized Negroes.

Kennedy has repeatedly identified himself with Franklin D. Roosevelt. In his election campaign he constantly drew parallels between the crises that Roosevelt faced in the first days of 1933 and those faced by a new president today. An examination of that period is in order.

In a fine study of that time, Roosevelt, The Lion and the Fox, by James MacGregor Burns (Harcourt, Brace and Co., New York, 1956), it is clear that the coming into office of Roosevelt was the signal for a movement of vast and varied masses.

In the South, a figure with enormous demagogic appeal arose—Huey P. Long, of Louisiana. He promised free homesteads, education, cheap food, veterans bonuses, a limitation of fortunes, a minimum annual income of two thousand dollars. "Every man a king, and Huey the Kingfish." (p. 212) When he invaded Arkansas to help a political friend to win office, his demagogery helped that friend overwhelm his opponents by six to one!

Another man, similar to Long in both his abilities and his aims, arose in the North, Father Coughlin. Like Long, he had supported Roosevelt's presidency and at one time had said the "New Deal is Christ's Deal." Using both the pulpit and the

SHADES OF SPARTACUS

There was a great deal of excitement about the Detroit Auto Show. It was the first time they held it here and the first time to show off the new multi-million dollar building, Cobo Hall. I live a few blocks from the place. The whole week of the show traffic was impossible. A record of more than a million saw the show. There was glitter, chrome, cars, and crowds. Thinking of the thousands of bleak jobless men and women walking the streets of Detroit because of the very automation which made these cars and this show, I wondered: Was this Detroit's version of the Roman Games?

I don't see how things can go on this way. We buy from Europe, send them aid, but we can't sell to them because our wage scale is too high. So they have our dollars and ask for gold for them. And we have all these unemployed. All we can give them is welfare but for how long?

Two policies have disturbed the status quo of the advanced countries of the West and the East. They are Passive Resistance and Neutralism. Both came from the so-called backward nations of Asia and Africa. Passive Resistance was put forward by Gandhi in his movement for winning Indian Independence. To this day this method is used by millions to gain freedom and moral victory for themselves throughout the world. Now neutralism is substituting the international power of moral convictions for the international power of arms.

Since the beginning of recorded history, nations have been forming alliances either to protect themselves or to expand their power. This has been especially true in Europe. To this day there is not one European nation which has not belonged, at one time or another, to a power alliance. These alliances have been so complex that allied nations could later end up fighting each other.

America is no exception. In the revolutionary war against England, it allied itself with France. In World War I, it allied itself with France and England to fight Germany. In World War II, it allied itself with France, England, China, and Russia to fight Hitler Germany and Japan.

In 1945, at the first meeting of the United Nations in San Francisco, where nations were making a second attempt to form an organization to settle international disputes and prevent another world war, more time was spent by the American delegates laying the basis for NATO, SEATO, etc. than in organizing a solid basis for the UN. Russia, of course, was also busy rounding up the satellites for its own bloc. Although each was talking of preventing war, each was preparing for the cold war.

After India achieved independence in 1947, Nehru decided not to take sides either with the U.S. or with Russia. For several years India was bombarded by both the U.S. and Russia to take sides. India's Neutralism was called pro-Communism by the U.S. and pro-Capitalism by Russia.

Since the Bandung Conference in 1955 and Ghana Independence in 1957, the tune of both camps has been changing. The flood of Asian and African nations achieving independence from the so-called democratic countries of the West has helped complete the change.

Today Neutralism is fast becoming the policy of the most powerful bloc in the world. Although they have not got the arms or the bombs of either the East or the West, these so-called backward nations have created the first major alliance that is not based on power by force of arms. The labor movement in England is now trying to join them.

Neutralism not only means to be neutral to East or West. It also means that if there is going to be any war, the U.S. and Russia will have to fight it out on their own soil, use their own troops for cannon and atomic fodder, and can expect from the Neutralists nothing but criticism. When, finally, they have exhausted themselves, they will be faced with the cold fact that their alliances and their mad race to out-produce each other were not to save civilization, democracy, or communism but to destroy mankind.

In the South, a figure with enormous demagogic appeal arose—Huey P. Long, of Louisiana. (p. 212) When he invaded Arkansas to help a political friend to win office, his demagogery helped that friend overwhelm his opponents by six to one!

Another man, similar to Long in both his abilities and his aims, arose in the North, Father Coughlin. Like Long, he had supported Roosevelt's presidency and at one time had said the "New Deal is Christ's Deal." Using both the pulpit and the radio, he won a following that poured money into his campaign against "the godless capitalists, the Jews, Communists, international bankers, and plutocrats." (p. 212) Roosevelt's success as presidential candidate marked Coughlin's intensification of his own movement.

If the South and North had created their new demagogues with Roosevelt's ascension into power, the West followed quickly. Seven months after the New Deal had started, Dr. Townsend sent a plan for old age pensions to a local paper. Inside of a year more than a thousand clubs had been organized!

By far the most significant of the mass movements was that of labor. At the time Roosevelt took office the organized labor movement was down to what it had been a quarter of a century before. But, as Burns aptly notes, "The Rooseveltian militancy and exuberance of the Hundred Days aroused workers just as they aroused the rest of the population." (p. 215) A little noticed provision, Section 7a of the NRA Act, which gave employees the right to collective bargaining, was used by John L. Lewis to spur the long awaited revolution in the coal fields. Posters were placed all over the coal fields proclaiming: "PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT WANTS YOU TO JOIN THE UNION." Workers flocked into the unions by the thousands and later the millions.

"Often," writes Burns, "it is not actual suffering but the taste of better things that excites people to revolt . . . the Depression seemed to have frozen people into a political as well as economic inertness. Then came the golden words of a new leader, the excitement of bread and circuses, the flush of returning prosperity. Better times led to higher expectations and higher expectations in turn to discontent as recovery faltered. America had been in a political slack water: now the tide was running strong toward new and dimly seen shores." (p. 209)

Is Kennedy's "New Frontier" then only shores "dimly seen?"

Everybody Joins Workers Councils

By Gabor Kocsis

— CONCLUSION —

(At the end of the last instalment Mr. Kocsis was describing the remarkable similarity between the demands of the Workers Councils of the various factories in the Hungarian Revolution of 1956.—Editor.)

These demands—to mention only the most important ones—related to the management of individual factories by the particular Workers' Council, the abolishment of the inhuman system of payment by results, the abolition of personnel departments, the immediate adjustment of wages, pensions, and other benefits, the establishment of an independent, non-partisan trade union, the resumption of relations with World Council of Trade Unions, adoption of the 16 points formulated by the revolutionary youth, the withdrawal of Soviet troops, and after November 4, the reinstitution of the Imre Nagy government.

After November the 4th the Workers Council remained alone on the battlefield against the Soviet armed might and the Kadar government. The parties disintegrated almost at once, while all the other organizations, recognizing the only given opportunity, immediately announced their accession to the Central Workers' Council. Such announcements were made by the Central Revolutionary Committee of the Intelligentsia, the Writers, Journalists, Artists, and Actors Associations, the Associations of Lawyers, of Engineers, and of Physicians, the organizations formed by the Universities, the Radio, the youth organizations, the Association of Peasants and Small Craftsmen, as well as all county, district, and town councils formed in the country. As the list of affiliations shows, in mid-November there were about 4,000,000 people behind the Central Workers' Council.

Accordingly, the name Central Workers' Council was changed into The Workers' Council of Greater Budapest. The name National Central Workers' Council was not assumed in view of the fact that the Kadar government was already accusing the members of the Workers' Council of plans to form an "opposition government."

The population of Budapest and of the entire country showed such unanimity in their support of the Central Workers' Council that the Kadar clique had to use Soviet tanks to prevent the holding of an inaugural meeting on a national scale.

The "Government" naturally did everything to reduce the weight represented by the Central Workers' Council to the minimum. An edict was issued which defined the territory within which the Workers' Council could be active, and limited it to measures of factory management. According to the edict the government retains the right to issue measures of a personnel nature, and the right to collect money was restricted to the factory manager who was appointed by the "State."

Naturally, the Workers' Council could not accept these restrictions, but they provided a basis for negotiations with the Kadar government.

From then on the position of the Central Workers' Council grew worse from day to day. The government adopted delaying tactics, and negotiations ended again and again without resolution. The delegates who could not directly participate in the negotiations and consequently could not form a clear picture as to the actual nature of the proceedings, eventually accused the leaders of the Workers' Council with opportunism and, to force a decision, proposed the proclamation of another nation-wide strike.

By this time the whole structural apparatus of the Workers' Council had been formed; it had a political, organizational, economic, and a press department, and preparations were undertaken to publish a daily, "The Workers' Paper" to continue the legacy of Nihaly Tancsis. Unfortunately, this could not be realized. In the factories the Workers' Councils completely took over the management, and forbade the former factory managers reinstated by the government to enter the factories; they also assumed control over financial matters. All former wage funds were raised by 10%, personnel departments and the system of payment by results abolished.

The very same period was, however, sufficient for the Kadar government to rally its forces. With the help of the Soviet armed forces, the newly formed Party and the ministries represented enough power at the beginning of December for the government to break negotiations and bring matters to a head.

From December 5-8, two to three hundred Council members were arrested, and several hundred others "interrogated" at the various police headquarters.

In view of the above the Central Workers' Council could not hesitate any further. Obviously there was no sense in continuing

Scab Labor On E. Jefferson

By a Chrysler Correspondent

John Doyle inspects metal tubes every day from 8 a.m. to 4:30 a.m. in the Chrysler Jefferson plant. These metal tubes are used on the Chrysler cars and are manufactured by an outside vendor. John receives $1.00 an hour from Man-Power, Inc., an employment agency which only last year was charged before the Compensation Commission with evading payment of unemployment compensation to its many employees. It is alleged to have a contract to supply labor to the vendor who makes the tubes. John also receives from the agency expense money for cigarettes, carfare, etc.

The first few days in the shop, John was very quiet, but it wasn't long before the men in the shop began to question him. It finally came out who he was working for. The men called the steward, who called the committeeman, who called the president of the local. He, in turn, called the International, who told him that they would immediately call management to investigate. A few days later the men in the shop were told that Doyle would be leaving. That was three weeks ago. Doyle is still coming. He comes every day and the men are growing more and more tense every day.

A few years ago had such a man come into the plant the men would have walked out or refused to work until management had put Doyle out. Today, with the union being so weak, they are torn between sympathy and anger against Doyle, who needs the job and wouldn't work for the low wages if he had any support from the organized labor movement.

Murder on Newspaper Row

By Martin Glaberman

A big metropolitan daily newspaper dies hard. On Monday, November 7, 1960, the Detroit Times, with a circulation in the neighborhood of 400,000, ceased to appear. It was bought out by its rival afternoon paper, The Detroit News, leaving only the News and the morning Free Press in the Detroit area.

The Times was a Hearst paper. The sale to the News was arranged by the Hearst organization in New York. Only one man in Detroit, the managing editor, was informed in advance and he was told to maintain silence until the last moment. Late on the night

LETTER TO A FRIEND

Ambush Awaiting New Frontiersman?

Dear Virginia,

What a fantastically close election! John F. Kennedy owes his victory to the fact that he carried five out of the seven largest states: New York, Pennsylvania, Michigan, Texas and Illinois. In every one of these states, with the possible exception of Texas, the city vote is what carried the state for Kennedy over the predominantly Republican outstate areas.

The first and most incredible fact is that these city people voted like crazy. In Philadelphia 93 per cent of the registered voters turned out, and Detroit's showing of 77 per cent of its registered voters appears to have been the lowest of these turnouts. Not only did these people vote like crazy, but they voted like crazy for Kennedy, thereby giving him 180 of the 269 electoral votes needed to win. The Republican Party's national chairman, Thurston B. Morton, explained his party's defeat by saying, "The Negro vote seemed to go against us." From all indications the Negroes voted overwhelmingly in the critical Northern cities and probably swung the election.

Something happened during this campaign to make the Negroes vote for Kennedy. Many Negroes had to be lured back from the Republican fold to begin with, and Kennedy's selection of Lyndon B. Johnson as his running mate greatly increased Negro antipathy before the campaign got started. Only when certain events, completely outside of Kennedy's plans, began happening did the Negroes start making up their minds to vote for Kennedy.

First of all, Nixon made the strategic mistake of catering to the Southern white vote instead of the Negro vote. It was common knowledge that many Southern racists, including the leader of the Ku Klux Klan, were working for or endorsing Nixon; and that there were few black faces in the crowds of the many Southern cities that Nixon visited and revisited. Soon these segregationist elements behind Nixon were joined by other groups opposed to Kennedy's religion. When a group of Protestant leaders, including the famous Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, signed a statement urging Protestants to consider the issue of Kennedy's Catholicism, many minority group members, especially Negroes, reacted by determining to vote for Kennedy to get rid of at least one prejudice, the old anti-Catholic one, for once and for all.

The last minute publicity given to Kennedy's actions which possibly released Martin Luther King, Jr., from his Georgia jail cell undoubtedly helped Kennedy. However, great numbers of Negroes voted for Kennedy just to vote against unemployment and for a job. Probably some Negroes were also influenced by Kennedy's showing during the TV debates, which Robert Kennedy claims were the decisive factor in winning the election for his brother. Negroes voted for Kennedy, it seems, for three basic (and interwoven) reasons: 1) to vote against racial and religious prejudice; 2) to vote for civil rights; and 3) to vote against unemployment and for a job.

The broader significance of the election, I feel, is the fact that the American people, Negro and white, have been stirred. The widespread interest in the final stages of the campaign will undoubtedly lead many observers to conclude that the American people have finally "woken up." Also expectations have definitely been raised. In emphasizing and re-emphasizing that the country is in bad shape and that it must begin to "move forward again," Kennedy has convinced people that big things must be done.

Kennedy must now forge ahead and blaze the trails leading to his "New Frontier" with rather drastic types of legislation to keep faith with the people who now expect big things from him. And who is already preparing to ambush our young trail blazer? Nobody but some members of his own party, the Southern Democrats. Here is the historic significance of the election. In 1960 it is just too, too much to see New Orleans, a city that just integrated four little Negro children into its public schools at the near point of a "federal gun," and the city of Detroit voting for the same party. In 1964 these two cities may still be voting for the same party, but in 1968 they won't be. By then the South will be out of the party, or the people in the liberal North—especially the Negroes—will have forsaken Kennedy and the Democratic Party for allowing themselves to be ambushed on the trail to the great "New Frontier."

As ever,
Joan

From December 5-8, two to three hundred Council members were arrested, and several hundred others "interrogated" at the various police headquarters.

In view of the above the Central Workers' Council could not hesitate any further. Obviously there was no sense in continuing further negotiations with the government and therefore at a nationwide conference called in the face of a government ban on December 8 (or 9) a resolution was passed ordering a second 48-hour general strike.

In spite of a news ban ordered simultaneously, the government detected the resolution and issued an edict the following day dissolving the Central Workers' Council as well as the district and county Workers' Councils.

This marked the end of the activities of the Workers' Councils. Although certain factory Workers' Councils which did not dissolve themselves voluntarily remained in existence, in practice the government made it impossible for them to function. The great majority of Workers' Council members were arrested and interned during July.

Summing up, it may be said that the Workers' Councils proved their vitality in a situation of such graveness that perhaps has no parallel in history and their activity is ample proof that in any future situation approximating normalcy, they may form the basis of an entirely new economic, political, and perhaps even social structure, corresponding in every respect to the national character of the Hungarian people. In fact such plans existed, and the Central Workers' Council regarded their elaboration as one of its major tasks. These plans and hypotheses based thereon will be discussed in another article.

Late on the night of November 6 he began to issue the telegrams to the Times' 1400 employees, instructing them not to report to work that day. To add to the humiliation, people coming to clean out their desks were escorted in and out by specially-hired police.

No apologies, no warning, no humanity whatever — just the axe. It is obvious that this brutality was requested by the NEWS, which wanted a time advantage over the FREE PRESS in the battle for TIMES readers. The two remaining papers were fighting over the corpse like vultures before it had a chance to cool.

To a city which has seen the equally brutal closing of industrial plants like Hudson Motors, Packard, Murray Body and many others, this murderous grubbing for the fast dollar might appear as just par for the course of capitalist conscience. But newspapers claim — and have — a public responsibility beyond their private profit needs. They claim the right to guide the public in its moral views and political acts.

From a purely journalistic point of view, the Times had the reputation among Detroit workers for somewhat greater sensitivity in covering labor and racial news. In losing that, however slight the difference may have been, the Detroit press hammers another nail into its own coffin.

Dear Mr. Cotter:

Thank you for the transcript of the Gatlinburg Conference.

As you requested, we are enclosing a roster of the members of the Southern Regional Council. It is correct as of this date; however, five new members have been nominated and invited to become members. They will not officially become members until after January 1st.

May I make a further request of you. A short while ago we wrote to Mr. Murray Cox, chairman of the Mississippi Advisory Committee, with a request that we be furnished a copy of the recently prepared report on Negro voting in Mississippi. Mr. Cox replied that he did not have one in his possession. He went on to say: "it is my understanding that the Committee does not wish to release the report to the public at the present time. But I see no reason why the Southern Regional Council should not have a copy. The original report has gone to the Commission on Civil Rights in Washington. You might be able to obtain a copy from that office. Write to Dr. C. P. Cotter, Division of State Advisory Committees, Commission on Civil Rights, Washington 25, D.C." If it is possible, could you send to us a copy of this report.

Sincerely yours,

Although the note which you enclosed did not mention our recent Report L-20, I assume that it was the cause of your sending us this material.

I do not know whether to be more pleased that you took time to communicate with us, or more regretful that we inexcusably omitted Alexandria from our list of cities which had formed bi-racial committees under official auspices and which, in doing so, had evidenced firm local leadership in these vexing times. We are very sorry that we omitted Alexandria and very grateful to you for calling it to our attention.

We were very pleased to see your letter of November 15 and to know that you shall be with us beginning January 3. The others on the staff of the Council join me in hoping that you will find your work with us pleasant.

As to residence during your stay, we think it would be best to let that question wait until you arrive, although of course if we hear of anything we shall look into it. Single girls don't seem to have too much difficulty finding places here. The first day or two after your arrival can be devoted to settling in, and we'll be all the help that we can at that time. If you have any bags you wish to send on ahead, they can be sent to the Council and kept here until you arrive.

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar

Dear Leslie:

It was good meeting with you. It was important to clarify some of our plans and problems. I found our meeting quite valuable.

I am sending you some copies of your paper which we mimeographed and distributed. We sent out about 125 copies to attendees at the May, 1959 Conference on Strategy of Desegregation, invitees to the SSSP annual meeting in September of 1959, and to those attending the meeting of the Committee on Intergroup Relations of SSSP in 1959 and 1960.

Warmest regards.

Sincerely,

My dear Mr. Dunbar:

I appreciated your letter of October 21st in which you gave me the very interesting excerpts from the paper of Mr. Louis W. Jones of Tuskegee Institute. I have read these observations with considerable interest. They seem to me to state and to clarify some of the conditions I am witnessing in our community, particularly the attitude of "bumptiousness" on the part of Negro youth.

Let me say, too, that I was quite impressed with the recent brochure delineating the details of the Chattanooga, Montgomery and Little Rock conflicts.

With best wishes, I am

Gentlemen:

I am a student of Hunter College in New York City, and am presently in the process of writing a term paper on School Desegreation in the South.

In a bibliography compiled by Melvin M. Tumin and published by the Anti-Defamation League, I note a number of papers which have been published by you which, I think, would be very helpful to me. I don't know whether there is a charge involved - would be glad to pay it - but don't know how much. Would it be possible for you to send to me through the mail, or tell me where I can obtain the following articles:

out of print

"The Private School Answer to the Desegregation Crisis: The Virginia Experience." Report No. L-9, Sept. 1, 1959

"IF THE SCHOOLS ARE CLOSED" A Critical Analysis of the Private School Plan."1959

"Race and Intelligence." A joint statement of 18 psychologists,etc.

and any other publications you think may be of interest to me.

I would certainly appreciate anything you can do for me, since the deadline for my term paper is right around the corner. Thanks.

State's Negro Voters Estimated at Near 25,000

By W. F. MINOR
(Times-Picayune Staff Correspondent)

JACKSON, Miss.—An unofficial estimate of Negro voter registration in Mississippi, prepared for the civil rights commission, shows 23,801 Negroes on voter lists in 67 of the state's 82 counties.

No reports were received from the other 15 counties in the state, but the unreporting counties would have no more than 2000 Negro voters.

The statewide survey was made by several Negro voting leaders at the request of the state advisory committee of the civil rights commission because the Negro registration figures are not available from official sources.

This is the first statewide estimate of Negro voting strength since 1954. The significance of the latest estimate is that it shows only a slight increase in the past six years.

Less Than Others

Mississippi has no state office where voter registration figures are kept, hence the only figures to be found must come from county registrars. Because most registrars don't make public the Negro registration figures, it is difficult to determine accurately the Negro voting strength.

The estimated registration indicates that Mississippi has a considerably smaller percentage of Negro voters than any of the other Deep South states.

Negro registration in Louisiana exceeds 130,000; in South Carolina, the state most often compared with Mississippi, there are 58,000 Negroes registered; in Georgia, 162,000, and in Arkansas, 65,000.

The 1954 estimate was prepared for the legal educational advisory commission, forerunner of the state's present state sovereignty commission.

Compiled by then Atty. Gen. J. P. Coleman, it showed a registration of 22,104 Negroes in all 82 counties. Because of his official position, he was able to get figures directly from county officials.

The 1954 figures and the 1960 estimate show that less than three per cent of the state's Negro population is on the voter registration rolls.

Some Dwindle

Comparing the two reports, it is evident that Negro voter registration has increased in only about 10 counties of the state.

Eight counties—Adams, Harrison, Hinds, Coahoma, Jackson, Warren, Washington and Lauderdale—account for nearly 80 per cent of the Negroes registered.

Cuts in Negro registration were shown in a half dozen counties. Humphreys county, which had 126 Negro voters registered in 1954, has only two now, according to the last estimate. Jefferson Davis county, which had 1221 registered six years ago, has dwindled to 96, the report shows.

Hinds county (Jackson), where Negroes are permitted to register and vote with little attention from the white community, has the largest Negro registration. The estimate gives Hinds county 5000 Negro voters.

The estimates of the other seven counties with significant Negro registration are: Harrison, 2000; Coahoma, 1900; Jackson, 1400; Washington, 2563; Adams, 1050; Warren, 1910; Lauderdale, 2000.

This is an opportu[illegible] to raise with you two questions that we have [illegible]dering about. In early correspondence which we [illegible] you, I believe it was said that you could make available to us, periodically, the names of persons who requested from you our material listed in your Reader's Service. If this is convenient, we would like to have the names. We are always looking for ways of improving our distribution and especially if there are Southerners who have been writing to you it might be useful for us to know about them.

Secondly, although [illegible]ys set a price on our publications, it is our [illegible]ractice to be very lenient in giving single copies [illegible]on request. This means, among other things, that [illegible] been very happy to participate with you as [illegible] of circulating our materials. On the other [illegible]e get frequently quantity orders, and we scrutinize each order individually to decide whether to charge or not. We do charge if we think the organization making the request is well able to pay, and certainly in most situations this is the case. My understanding is that your Reader's Service sends out single copies only, but perhaps you could let me know definitely whether this is so.

Dear Miss Hoover:

In reply to your letter of November 29, we are sending you:

1) 50 copies of Racial Violence and Law Enforcement, by George McMillan.

2) 50 copies of Report L-20; incidentally, Alexandria, Virginia should have been included in our list of cities.

3) Mr. Wright spoke from notes; his speech is being transcribed, and when he has had a chance to look it over and has returned it to us, we will mail you a copy with our permission to reproduce it.

4) 50 copies (half our present supply) of Will Campbell's speech, "A Man Had Two Sons." I am sorry we cannot furnish the requested 500. Many thanks for the reprint of your article on r racial violence. I read it with considerable interest and found it instructive. I hopw you will continue publishing in this area.

You may be interested to know that some while back we planned with Professor Elmer Johnson a short study on Negro crime. The intention was to summarize the known facts about the incidence of crime by Negroes and to put these facts in good sociological perspective, drawing on (inadequate) research which has been done. Johnson did a rough draft in the summer, and his final manuscript has now been on my desk for a couple of weeks. I think it is going to be a useful piece and hope we may get it out in pamphlet form along about February. Johnson, who was assistant director of prisons for North Carolina, is now teaching at North Carolina State.

TO: HCR

FROM: LWD

There is something interesting here, undoubtedly, though the field has been worked over a good bit. Pettigrew and Campbell's Little Rock study is not "systematic," but there is always the question of whether a systematic study--assuming it is feasible--would be more enlightening. On the other hand, what does "systematic" mean?

Perhaps a study of steps taken and problems encountered by two or three of the largest denominations in implementing at the local level their conventional pronouncements would be an approach. A study of how the denominations and local churdhhs have reacted to pressure and overt attacks might be another.

At any rate, it might be worthwhile to invite Cunninggim to write another and larger letter explaining what he has in mind.

I have always been intrigued by the notion of having a graduate student work on a question for us as part of his thesis research. On several grounds, however, I have generally thought it impractical. I am, nevertheless, willing to explore it again. But I would like to do it at one of the Negro universities.

In raising the question, is Cunninggim implying that his Foundation might be financially interested?

If he is, maybe a sensible first step would be to call a few people together--Campbell, Tarplee, Morris, etc.--and throw at them the questions 1) whether there is anything which needs doing 2) how it would be best defined.

TO: PR

FROM: LWD Subject: South Carolina study

I have no suggestion for change in the figures you have put down for Courtney Siceloff--except that, obviously, a few hundred dollars more have to be allowed for office supplies and postage.

But why must it be done this way? It would seem to me that if money and two years are made available for the state-wide study of South Carolina, all that is needed is a man (or woman). Why must there be coordination, secretary, conferences, and office, etc.? I can't believe that one good researcher could not, just like any man off writing a book or a series of articles, handle this thing by himself. It is not that big an undertaking. South Carolina is a relatively small, uncomplicated state. I don't know where the researcher would be found, but it would be no harder to get one for the assignment on this basis than to get one to "coordinate." On the other hand, I suspect that there would be a better chance to get a good man if the assignment were one of doing all the work himself. So far as the typing is concerned, that is a detail: there are commercial stenographers everywhere. Get a grant of $8,000 a year for the man, allow him, say 1,500 for expenses plus something for typing, and if you can find anybody to do it you can have the job done. As a matter of fact, I doubt that more than one year would be needed. $8,000 would be a top grant; depending upon qualifications, you might attract someone for any sum from $5,000 up.

Incidentally, I think your description and analysis of the South Carolina scene in your October 1 memo is well done.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I have just finished reading George McMillan's report on racial violence and law enforcement, published last month by the Council. I am intrigued by two references and wonder whether you might make available to me the material cited. The first is a joint publication of the Council along with the National Council of Churches and the AFSC on violence and intimidation from 1954 through 1958. The second reference is to a report made by D. S. Leonard for the Little Rock police.

I made two attempts to obtain a copy of a handbook on riot control prepared by the Dallas, Texas, police department. In spite of assurances that the material would be used in a strictly professional manner and confidentially if so desired, access to the material was refused. I wonder whether you might use your good offices in obtaining for me a copy of that report. It is my hope to prepare material on policing practices for a professional journal.

Dear Sirs,

I am currently engaged in writing my Ph.D. dissertation in sociology at the University of Pennsylvania on the subject of the "Sit-In Movement." I have finished a good deal of the preliminary work and hope to have a draft ready for my faculty committee by next September.

However, in order to do this, it will be necessary for me to do some travelling in the South to visit several communities, talk to community leaders, and the like. I am unable to do this at present for lack of funds, and consequently find the project as a whole held up until such a time as I am able to earn the funds personally.

Because of the currency of the Sit-In Movement, and the urgent need for a study of this sort from a sociological viewpoint now, I feel that a delay would not be good, and am appealing to your agency. Do you have funds that you might be able to make available for what is virtually an emergency situation, or do you know of anyone else who might have such funds? I will need approximately $3,000.

The objective of this study is publication. I feel it will be of great assistance to workers in the field of race relations. I would be able to supply you with some written material now, recommendations, etc.

Sincerely,

Martin Oppenheimer

Dear Professor Grimshaw:

I have your letter of December 12; I cannot do as much as I would like in reply to your two queries.

The joint publication of the Council, the National Council of Churches, and the American Friends Service Committee was titled Intimidation, Reprisal, and Violence; it was issued the Spring or Summer of 1959. It was a very limited printing and we are down to our last three or four copies. The pamphlet has been reprinted in its entirety in the ~~Congressional Record~~:

> Hearings Before the Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights of the Committee on the Judiciary, U. S. Senate, 86th Congress. Part 3--Appendix. pp. 1573-1603. (Published by U. S. Government Printing Office, Washington, 1959.)

I would hope these hearings are available in your library, but if not please let me know and I shall send a copy of the pamphlet to you on loan.

My recollection of conversations with McMillan is that the Leonard report is not available but that he was permitted to study it while in Little Rock. I am sending a copy of your letter to McMillan, however, with the request that he write directly to you about this.

I do not know that I am familiar with the Handbook on Riot Control of the Dallas Police Department. I once reviewed a manuscript on the subject, prepared out there, but it was never published and we do not have a copy of it. This may be the same document to which you have referred. The best suggestion I would have would be that you write to Oscar Cohen, Director Program Division, Anti-Defamation League, 515 Madison Avenue, New York, N. Y., explain your interest and you specific interest in the Dallas report; you are free to tell Oscar that I suggested that you write him.

I am sending you under separate cover a copy of an old publication of ours titled Race and Law Enforcement. We have in our files a few other things which are listed below. If you think any of them might help you, and can't get them otherwise, we shall be glad to lend them to you. Incidentally, do you know of Professor Elliott Rudwick, Southern Illinois University, East St. Louis Residence Center, East St. Louis, Illinois. He is very much interested in this same field.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I am almost certain that this is only the second "fan letter" I have ever written, and the first one was also to the Southern Regional Council.

I have just received and read Psychiatric Aspects of School Desegregation, or, rather, the shorter report, and I want to thank you for sending it to me and to commend the people who are responsible for the study and its publication.

I almost wish you people would cease to operate! I feel compelled to read anything you send out, which takes time, and I'd like to stop writing "fan letters."

Please do not trouble to acknowledge this letter. I'm certain you are very busy, and my purpose was not to obtain an acknowledgment but to indicate as I am sure many others are doing that the excellent job you people are doing is not going unnoticed.

Sincerely yours,

I am in receipt of your Report L-22 dated December 9, 1960.

It is stated on page 7 of this report that an outline of approach to the problem of race relations has been drawn up that might be used by local groups as a starting point. I would very much appreciate your sending to me a copy of this outline.

Dear Mary Ellen:

Your notes arrived. There is some awfully interesting stuff in them, and I would like to see some of it woven into the second section of your report. We are going to try to do that--you have already done as much as could be asked--and send the product to you for criticism and approval.

There is also a consensus(of which I am not a part) around here and in Virginia that the mode of presentation in section two could give the hasty reader the feeling that you and we endorse the various statements you quote of foundation leaders. Here again, any changes will be subject to your approval.

All this means that we will not get the report out until next month, but we don't think that will be hurtful. In the meantime,

Merry Christmas.

Dear Mr. Slayman:

We are pleased to send you under separate cover the requested three copies of Daniel Pollitt's memo. We are glad that you share our high regard for his work.

Professor Pollitt was commissioned to do this as an aid to our preparation of a statement by the Council regarding executive powers and their desirable use. We are hoping that some time later this month or early in January our statement will be issued. I mention this because we want you to understand that the Pollitt paper, excellent as it is, will not necessarily represent the Council's own views; these are to be stated later.

Dear Mr. Levy:

I must first apologize for the delay in responding. I did read your thesis with care (and admiration) and had another of our staff examine it also. Frankly, I had hoped we could think of some way to take advantage of your work and could plan with you a short publication. I am afraid that we can't, and am returning the thesis to Mr. Oscar Cohen.

If the ADL or other agency, however, is in a better position than we to do something with it, it is altogether possible that we could cooperate, if requested. From our organizational point of view, the portion of your work which seemed most intriguing, and invited extraction and rewriting, was the very interesting analysis of the motivation, organization, personalities, and methods of the segregationist side, led by the Citizens Committee and working through the Foundation.

With best wishes for the New Year, and also for continued success with your studies.

Dear Mr. Constable:

Jim Laue suggested that I write asking for your assistance. Professors G.W. Allport and T.F. Pettigrew, Lillian Smith, G. Myrdal, et. al., give great credit for the decline of lynching to the Association of Southern Women for the Prevention of Lynching.

I am writing a paper for Professor Pettigrew on the Association, and I find that our information on the subject is very incomplete. You will agree, I am sure, that the Association, by virture of its work, is more than worthy of study.

The SRC must certainly possess much information about the Association, information to which I would like access. For example, when, how, and by whom(this pertains to individuals) was the organization founded? How did it do its work? How was it received by the South? Why was it so successful where other organizations failed? What do you know about its members, e.g., their purposes, social and economic status, etc.? From whence did it draw its financial backing? What has the organization become?

These questions are general, but I would appreciate your answering any or all of them. If could send me any of SRC's imformation on the subject, I would certainly pay full postage and take complete responsibility for the care and preservation of it. Jim asks me to assure you that he too will take responsibility for any documents sent to me.

Your help in the above ways or any others will be of great assistance. Where may I obtain more information about the Association? I am writing to Mrs. M.E. Tilly and Mr. Leslie Dunbar on the same subject. No duplication need occur.

Thank you for your help.

Gratefully yours,

Jim Laue has directed me to your office for information about the Association of Southern Women for the prevention of lynching.

I would appreciate any direction toward information on the subject which you might be able to give. Jim mentioned a pamphlet which you told him about. Could I have its title and the place where it may be obtained?

Is it possible for your office to send any literature on loan? If so, I would appreciate paying postage and taking full responsibility for the material. Jim assures you that he too will be responsible for any literature sent me.

If I am asking for more time than you can afford to give, please disregard the request. I am writing to Mrs. Tilly and Mr. Constable.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

The Front Royal study is still not quite in a finished state. My thesis advisor, Prof. Everett Hughes, had not seen it before it reached the stage in which it was sent to you. His comments begin by pointing out that "I really know of no study in which the operating structure of a community is so well revealed," but this is followed by several suggestions -- though none require much change.

In any case, it has been some time since I mailed the thesis, and not having heard from you I do not know whether it has been received -- please let me know.

Gentlemen:

Jim Leeson, of the Southern Education Reporting Service in Nashville, suggested that you may be able to give us a break down on some general statistics.

The Washington Evening Star of January 8, 1960, in an article called "College Integration Making Progress," states:

> "...probably only 3,000 or so Negroes attend integrated colleges or universities in the South and are a tiny proportion--perhaps 2 percent--of the total number of students. As might be expected, the higher ratios occur in the border states... But in many mid-South colleges there are only a handful of Negro students."

As our colleges are all in the mid-South, we wonder if you have a percentage break down of Negroes in integrated colleges by state. We are interested in the following states:

Alabama

Arkansas

Florida

Georgia

Louisiana

Dear Mrs. Alexander,

In initial research on newspapers and the racial situation in the southern United States, I saw reference to a study by your organization that seemed to be precisely what I need.

If it is at all possible, I should be greatful for any information you are able to supply in this area, and in the broader question of the racial problem as it exists in the South.

The material is to be used in a study undertaken by the Daily Trojan, a student newspaper with a circulation of 18,000.

The SRC will of course be given full credit for any information cited in the final published study, slated to occupy 16 consecutive issues in this paper.

Thank you for your kind interest.

Gentlemen:

Some years ago I was an interested subscriber to your publications with the result that your work in developing community self-surveys became familiar to me. Yesterday the Human Relations Council of the town of Irvington, a suburb of Newark, New Jersey asked me to address their meeting on January 9 next. Due to their interest in current human relations research as well as in community self-surveys I naturally turn to you for information.

Despite the short time would you be kind enough to tell me what information you have available? I should also like to know if the Greenville study has been continued, or applied in other areas.

Your cooperation will be deeply appreciated.

As recent members of the National Student Association, interested members of the student body here at Capital University are of the opinion that the students on our campus are neither informed nor concerned about the problems and actions of fellow students in the South.

Therefore, we are requesting information from you concerning recent "sit-in" action in the South, and any non-violent demonstrations in support of Negro student rights. We would appreciate any correspondence you can send us as soon as possible. We hope to awaken our student body through a series of programs which we intend to begin within the next few weeks.

Miss Trudie Sarasohn Casper
Public Information Director
United Negro College Fund, Inc.
22 East Fifty-Fourth Street,
New York 22, N. Y.

Dear Miss Casper:

Regrettably, we do not have the percentage breakdown of Negroes in integrated colleges by state which you requested in your letter of December 6. The Southern Education Reporting Service's Southern School News is the source we always turn to for information on the numbers of students in integrated classes. The November, 1960 issue of SSN contains the only recent information we know to be available, and, while I am aware that their Mr. Leeson referred you to us, I am taking the liberty of quoting some of the SSN data to you. As you will discover, the information is spotty and incomplete in regard to desegregated private colleges, however, and it seems to me doubtful that any meaningful ratios can be drawn unless you wish to concentrate on tax-supported colleges.

Included below (attached) are figures indicating the total enrollment in all public and private colleges in each of the states in which you are interested. Please note that the most recent available figures known to us are for fall, 1959, while the SSN data is in most instances for fall, 1960. Also, even the enrollment figures may not always be complete. They are derived from the U. S. Department of Health, Education, and Welfare Education Directory, 1960-61, Part 3, Higher Education.

I am sorry we are unable to provide the exact figures you wish to obtain.

Sincerely yours,

Marge Manderson
Research Assistant

Upper Montclair, New Jersey

Dear Professor Apgar:

I am enclosing the only pamphlets we have available which may be of use to you in connection with your presentation on community self-surveys. The Greenville study you mention (a copy is enclosed) represents one of SRC's last publications in this area; one later pamphlet, "Your Community Looks at Itself: A Manual for the Home Town Self-Survey," did appear as the April, 1951 issue of New South (Vol. 6, No. 4). Regrettably, it is out of print. If it is available in any libraries to which you have access, you may find it useful in that it provides detailed model questionnaires.

In regard to your question about the Greenville study, there was some follow-up, but after several years efforts were discontinued, due to tensions connected with Supreme Court desegregation decisions.

Two of the enclosed items are published results of recent surveys, "A Second Look at the Negro Citizen in Atlanta,: and "The Negro Citizen in Arlington." A community audit of Greater Miami was conducted in 1959 under the sponsorship of the American Jewish Committee. Write to Seymour Samet, A.J.C., 1208 Congress Building, Miami, if you wish to obtain copies of the results. I am listing below several other publications you may also wish to request directly from the publishers.

1. Description of the 1953 human relations project conducted in Nutley, N. J. (together with any follow-up). If copies are still available, they may be ordered from: Essex County Intergroup Council, 30 Clinton Street, Newark 2, N. J.

2. "Shall We Make a Survey?" Questions to be considered Before a Survey is Undertaken. National Social Welfare Assembly, Inc., 1790 Broadway, New York 19, N. Y. 1949.

3. "Let's Look at Ourselves" A Brief Guide for Conducting a Community Audit. National Citizens' Council on Civil Rights, 20 West 40th Street, New York 18, N. Y.

4. Northtown Survey on Human Relations, 1947. American Jewish Congress, 212 West 50th Street, New York 19, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Fleming,

Your organization was suggested to me by Mr. Ralph McGill of the Atlanta Constitution as a source of information for a paper I am preparing on desegregation in my native state of Georgia. I regret to confess my ignorance of your organization's aims and purposes, but for inclusion in my report, I would appreciate knowing more about it.

There is a great deal of national interest, as I am sure there is local, in the federal court decision to effect integration of the races in Atlanta's public schools. After seeing the CBS-TV program "Who Speaks for the South?" I became more interested and felt the subject was a good one to present to a discussion group of which I am a member. I have obtained a copy of the report of The General Assembly Committee on Schools. I also have some other data, but need others:

1. What is the proportion of Negro and white population, by county or congressional district?

2. How many school-age children, Negro and white, are there?

3. How do the "separate but equal" public school facilities compare for Negro and white students?

I will be most grateful for any information you can give me. I am hoping to have my report ready to present by January 20th, so an early answer from you will be most welcome.

Dear Friends: -

Can you help us?

Our public library has desegregated but is caught between NAACP and City Commission in regard to toilet facilities - Latter demands segregated toilet rooms; former rejects -

Can you supply us with any information on practices, rules, laws, court cases in regard to this matter from other areas in the South? Our Memphis Chapter TCHR is concerned to help in ironing this out - if that can be done. Of course, we do not know, lacking such data whether it might even be best to let this run its court course as a test case if such ordinances have never been ruled on -

Whatever our course we need some information and would appreciate your help in getting it - and since the matter is in the courts now for settlement this month, time is of the essence -

I am an undergraduate student participating in the Washington Semester Program at The American University in Washington, D.C. While here, I am doing research on an individual project entitled, "The Leadership Role of the NAACP in School Desegregation." I have studied the past actions of the Association. I am also trying to analyze the type of leadership presently needed in the South for the eventual realization of complete integration in the schools.

Mr. Robert J. Greene, Area Director, American Jewish Committee, informed me that your Report L-22, by the Fowler Commission, issued December 9, 1960, is one of the most comprehensive studies concerning the type of leadership now needed in this area.

I would appreciate it very much if you would send me a copy of this report.

Miss Margaret McCulloch
858 Whitford Place

Dear Miss McCulloch:

In reply to your recent letter in regard to desegregation of rest room facilities in public libraries, it is our belief that this specific question has never been adjudicated. The major references sources we checked--Greenberg's Race Relations and American Law, Pauli Murray's States' Laws on Race and Color, and Race Relations Law Reporter mentioned neither decisions nor laws directed specifically to rest room segregation. It would seem to us that whenever library facilities have been desegregated by court order, rest room facilities would be included--but this is merely law opinion. In regard to existing laws requiring segregated rest rooms, presumably whenever laws or ordinances require segregation in public buildings or public places, rest room segregation is also required.

Rest rooms in the Atlanta public library have no signs indicating segregation and I feel rather certain that they may be used by Negroes as well as whites. (I have tried several times today--unsuccessfully--to reach a contact who can advise me definitely on this question; if I find there are any restrictions I will let you know.) The public libraries here voluntarily desegregated in 1959. Unfortunately, our files reflect no information about practices in other cities in which libraries have desegregated voluntarily.

I am sorry we are unable to provide more conclusive information.

Dear Mr. Brewbaker:

In connection with an L Report we are currently compiling centered around the amounts spent by the states in attempting to resist desegregation, we would like very much to include the cost of paying salaries to idle teachers and otherwise operating and maintaining closed schools in Norfolk during fall and winter, 1958-59.

Southern School News, January, 1959, states that the Norfolk board billed the state for $693,000 for these costs, September through November. I wonder if, without going to any trouble, you can advise me if this figure is roughly correct (another source, Robert C. Smith's Commentary article, March, 1959, places the cost at $172,000 a month, considerably less) or, better, give us an estimate of the amount the state (and the locality, if any) paid to the schools affected during the entire five months they were closed, through January, 1959.

Mr. J. M. Dabbs, President
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
Room 432, 63 Auburn Avenue, N. E.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Dabbs:

You have undoubtedly seen or used a bibliography that we published in 1949 entitled RACE AND REGION, by Edgar T. Thompson and Alma Macy Thompson, being a descriptive bibliography of books and periodical literature dealing with relations between whites and Negroes in the United States. It is, of course, a selective work, aimed to be useful for the student, study groups, and organizations. We have sold about 1,000 copies of the book at a retail price of $5.00 and it is now going out of print at just about the time its useful life is ending. I am sending you a copy separately, in case you don't have one handy.

Dr. Thompson, who is professor of sociology at Duke University, has asked about the possibilities of a new edition brought up to date. Manufacturing costs have doubled since 1949, and I don't see a possibility of putting out a new edition in standard letterpress form on the basis of a printing of 1,000 copies. I would like to explore the possibilities of producing a new edition by offset from typescript. The question in my mind is whether there is a sufficient usefulness in such an edition among study groups, in addition to the normal institutional market, to justify the attempt. I think of your organization as being the one in closest touch with such groups, with a possible interest in buying a quantity of the bibliography for distribution in that area. The Press can, of course, take care of the institutional demand. Specifically, if we could get the price of such an edition down to $2.00 or $3.00 a copy, would you be at all interested in the purchase of 500 or more copies? We might be able to get out a new edition on this basis.

I can get more refined figures if you need to study them. But I don't see any need to get them unless there is at least a possibility of the kind of distribution by the Southern Regional Council that I have envisaged. And perhaps if your organization is not interested, you might know of one that would be. I look forward eagerly to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Lambert Davis, Director

Do you know of any published source where this data could be obtained ? To the best of my knowledge neither the New York Public Library nor the Columbia University Library have this data available.

NATIONWIDE POLL OF MARCH 1959

The most recent of a series of public opinion polls, conducted by the American Jewish Committee over a period of twenty years, is the Nationwide Poll of March, 1959. A comprehensive report of this survey of American public opinion by the American Jewish Committee's Scientific Research Division is now completed.

The major emphasis of the survey is on the issue of Southern school desegregation, and the role of Jews and other minorities in relation thereto. In addition, the poll includes questions on anti-Semitism, permitting comparison of current levels with previous years.

The report is not intended for general distribution. With the understanding that it is not to be publicized, we shall be glad to make a copy available to you for your personal-professional use, on request.

Dear Mr. Reston:

We are sending you under separate cover some materials dealing with desegregation of public schools in Washington. These should give you a start. The New York Times gave very good coverage to the Washington schools, principally in articles by Bess Furman and during the 1954-1956 period, and you can follow in the Times Index.

Included in the materials we are sending are a few editorials dealing with the Davis Subcommittee. I think it is true that this committee's report has been one of the documents with the greatest influence on opinion in the South during the schools controversy. If your library has the Southern Education Reporting Service microfilm library, you could gather some interesting comments by examining editorials in southern newspapers about the Davis Committee and its investigation, especially from mid-1956 to the Spring of 1957. Unfortunately SERS microfilm does not index editorials and you would have to look them up by date in the newspaper, which is why we have not attempted it for you. I am sure your library will have a copy of the Davis report. It is titled: Investigation of Public School Conditions, Report of the Subcommittee to Investigate Public School Standards and Conditions, and Juvenile Delinquency in the District of Columbia of the Committee on The District of Columbia, House of Representatives, Eighty-fourth Congress, 2nd. session.

There are magazine articles worth reading by Franck, in Commonweal, Aug. 15, 1958; Knowl, in Commentary, June 1959; an article by Douglas Cater which I cannot put my hands on, but was in the Reporter along about 1955 or 1956; and the U. S. News and World Report, Nov. 15, 1958 and April 4, 1960. You ought also see the Notre Dame Lawyer, Symposium, 1959. The Washington Post carried a series by Luther Jackson about the end of November, 1959; see the Post also for Feb. 11, 1957 for an interview with Mr. Hansen. I understand, though I have never seen it, that the Richmond Times-Dispatch had a series by Larry Weekly early in February, 1959. You will certainlywant to see the Report of theConference Before the Commission on Civil Rights in Nashville, 1959; I am sure your library has this.

Thank you for forwarding me a copy of Dan Pollitt's paper. I will await the Southern Regional Council's program with great interest. I would appreciate your sending me a copy when it becomes available.

Dear Sirs:

I am a first-year law student at New York University Law School, and will be embarking on my law note shortly for next semester. My topic is a timely one, and I feel you can be of some assistance to me.

Specifically, I will delve into the troubled area of the sit-in demonstrations, exploring the conflicting rights of the property-owner and the right of the public to be served. As my taking-off point, I shall refer to a recent New Hampshire case, TAMELLEO v. NEW HAMPSHIRE JOCKEY CLUB, 163 A.2d 10, (July, 1960), which, though not directly a factual reproduction of present sit-ins, involves a similar situation, i.e, the ejectment of an "undesirable" patron from a race track. The particular court upheld the owner's right of ouster.

I have been referred to your organization through Mr. Gregory Shinert, executive director of the Missouri Commission on Human Rights, my former state. I am looking for anything of legal pertinence, including cases, decisions, theories, ideas, arguments, the situation by the states, etc. If you can be of any assistance to me, I will be most grateful.

Thank you very much.

Dear Charlie:

I am sending you an extra copy of The Federal Executive and Civil Rights with the thought that you might like to have it reviewed in The Journal of Politics.

We submitted this last week to Mr. Kennedy and others in the new administration, and will give it a public release in, probably, ten days or two weeks.

Among the people whom we consulted in preparation of it were three political scientists: Robert Harris, Bob Steamer, and Alex Heard. None of them, of course, is to be credited or blamed for anything that is in it.

Mr. Perry Mullen
Associated Press
Box 4245
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Mr. Mullen:

Here is a statement which you may use in whole or in part in the business survey. This is in response to your telephone request this morning.

It hardly bears repeating that massive resistance, with its inevitable uncertainties and disorders, brings economic set-backs to the state or city which indulges in it. The evidence from Little Rock and Virginia was clear, and is now wellknown. The evidence is already beginning to come in from New Orleans. We assume that business leaders in Georgia are cognizant of the economic costs of resistance to school desegregation, and that this in large part accounts for their present support of pupil placement and the repeal of school closing laws.

It should not be assumed, however, that a change in the laws will by itself be enough to assure a good business climate. The industrialist, the investor in bonds, the prospective employee will want to see how Georgia acts when schools are desegregated in Atlanta next Fall, and in other parts of the state at later dates. Law enforcement remains the key question.

Leslie W. Dunbar

A professor of mine at Harvard, Professor Thomas Pettigrew, suggested that you might be able to send me some information for a paper that I am doing in his course. The paper will deal quite broadly with possible forces of moderation in Montgomery when integration comes - e.g., businessmen impressed by the consequences of Little Rock, the sympathy of the Jewish community, etc. If you have done any studies along these lines, or if you have any information which would tie in, however broadly, I would greatly appreciate your sending them to me.

Gentlemen:

I have been referred to you by President E.Clayton Calhoun of Paine College concerning the practice of theological schools of Protestant denominations in the South in regard to the admission of Negro students. I believe that among the major institutions of the Methodist Church Duke and Emory are the only ones that do not admit Negroes. Information seems to be lacking concerning the practice of smaller Methodist institutions with departments of religion.

I shall greatly appreciate information concerning the practice of the other Protestant denominations, especially the Baptists, Presbyterians, Episcopalians, and Lutherans.

Dear Mr. Gross:

Mrs. Dorothy Tilly has asked me to furnish you with a list of integrated organizations in the South, other than those obvious ones which will be known to you. I am enclosing some loose pages on this subject from a 1956 publication, Integration North and South; all of the individual entries, pp. 101-104, represent integration which took place for the first time between 1954 and 1956. Another enclosure lists those instances of integration from 1956 to the present which have come to our attention via news stories. While these lists will indicate many of the major instances of desegregation in voluntary organizations, they do not, of course, include all desegregated organizations. Frequently, no publicity has been given to the fact that an organization has a biracial membership. To our knowledge there have been no surveys which would provide more complete informatinn.

Please let us know if we may be of further help.

Dear Mr. Constable,

I am a member of an interracial study group made up of University of Alabama (mainly Presbyterian) and Stillman College students. We have been organized in tuscaloosa for well over a year now. We began as a study group for the 18th meeting of the World and National Student Christian Federations, which we attended in athens, Ohio, last Christmas, 1959. Since then we have grow, and we have studied different subjects of world importance. We reported to the Council on Human Relations at Stillman on the athens Conference, and have been led in our meetings by the President of the Council in tuscaloosa and by the Presbyterian minister to students at the University. I subscribe to New South, and we use it the Presbyterian Center library.

We are contemplating on studying different books that have been published in recent years on the Segregation - Integration Crisis. What we have in mind is studying all three views, the Segregationists, integrationists, and so called moderate views, and then releasing to different religious student centers over the South our conclusions. Could you help us in this task, by sending us a list of some of the best books on this subject, as you know them. I had several in mind myself. Stride toward Freedom, by Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., What the Negro Wants, University of North Carolina Press, You and Segregation, by Senator Hermane E. Talmage. There is another book I thought of, by Harry Golden. We want to cover all three viewpoints as throughly, completely, intelligently, and as reasonably, in the time allowed which is from January to the end of May, as we can. If there are any outstandly good magazine articals, we would appreciate knowing of them also.

I am sure that this can be very beneficial to all of us, if done correctly. We of the University Presbyterian Center have gained much in recent years from our relations with the Stillman students. Write me back at my home address given in this letter, which is different from my University address, where I take New South.

Thank you so very much for any assistantance that you can offer to us.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

Thank you for your kind letter of December 12, in which you inform us that Dr. Leslie W. Dear Mr. Raab:

There are so many things which might be suggested, in response to your letter of January 19. If this letter goes somewhat wide of your mark, please let me know and we shall try to offer further suggestions.

I am sending you several things under separate cover which may give some light to your query about post integration problems.

As to Negro nationalism, there is a chapter in Harry Ashmore's new book, The Other Side of Jordan; Nat Hentoff had an article in the Reporter for August 4, 1960; there was a piece by Alex Haley in the Readers' Digest, March, 1960. I am enclosing one clip from a Southern newspaper.

As to Negro youth, I was impressed by the paper of Lewis W. Jones, titled "Negro Youth in the South"; this is to be found in the proceedings of the White House Conference on Children and Youth: these proceedings are collected in a series titled: The Nation's Children, and Mr. Jones's paper is in Vol. 3.

As to new trends in leadership, there has been a lot written, especially since the sit-ins began, and I hardly know what to suggest. Among the pieces which announce that new leadership is superceding old, two which occur to me first are one by Louis Lomax, Harpers, June 1960; and an article by Michael Walzer in Dissent, Summer, 1960. There is also a pamphlet titled Unfinished Revolution, by Tom Kahn, published last year and available from the Liberation Press, 110 Christopher Street, New York 14, price .50¢. I think you would find interesting the November, 1960 issue of Interracial Review, especially an article by Harold Fleming. I would recommend also George McMillan's article in Look, July 5, 1960. Included in the package being sent is a copy of a paper of mine which I am currently revising with the expectation that it will be published in Phylon.

Finally, both on the matter of Negro nationalism and Negro opinion, there is a two part article by Harold Isaacs in Phylon, Fall & Winter, 1960, "Five Writers and their African Ancestors." I have, by accident, gone at this backwards: I have not yet read the first part, but have read the second, and found it extraordinarily interesting.

Let me know if we can be of further help.

Sincerely yours,

Harold Flemming
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsyth St., NW - Rm. 201
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Flemming:

I am in the process of editing a collection for Doubleday to be published as an Anchor book, on what we are now loosely calling "frontier" problems and developments in intergroup relations. At least two of these areas touch on what is happening in the South: 1) Post-integration type problems: i.e., what has happened, is happening in communities where formal integration (in schools, busses or whatever) has already been accomplished, with respect to Negro-white relationships, educational levels or whatever; 2) Internal matters in the Negro community, i.e., new trends in leadership, nationalism etc.--or new social phenomena such as Negro teen-age retaliation against whites for the first time, the business of mutual violence taking the place of one-way lynchings as a grisly sign of progress etc. All the material to be included in the book should be at about the level of supplementary reading for basic college courses.

My questions, obviously: 1) Has the Southern Regional Council itself published any reports or materials which might conceivably fit? 2) Has the Southern Regional Council maintained some bibliography of materials that might fit--and indeed does anything occur to you off the top of your head?

I think this collection might be helpful in the "field", in which I am a professional toiler with a Jewish agency as well as a dabbler in publication, and any help you can give me will be most appreciated.

Sincerely,

Earl Raab

Enclosed is a copy of the abstract of a book that I am writing on the Sitdown movement. It is contemplated that the manuscript will be completed roughly around the latter part of February. This will include clearances for citations used.

When completed, the manuscript will comprise about 200 pages, including documentation, introduction, and index.

This letter comes to inquire as to whether you would be interested in the manuscript for possible publication.

An Abstract

PEOPLE Sat Down to Eat

PEOPLE Sat Down to Eat is the story of the sitdown movement which was initiated by Negro college students in Greensboro, North Carolina in the early part of 1960. It embraces a treatment of the background of the movement, the movement itself, and its implications for the future. It is an attempt to objectively evaluate the movement against the backdrop of the Negro's continuing fight for first-class citizenship since the days of Reconstruction, the impact of the budding spirit of nationalism as it has affected colored peoples, and the impact of the emerging independent Negro republics of Africa.

The immediate theme of this work is concerned with directing the attention of Americans in general and the white South in particular to the fact that Negro Americans are first of all PEOPLE, human beings, if you please, and, secondly, that Negro Americans are American citizens, as other American citizens, who not only embrace the tenets of the Declaration of Independence, but also have the same constitutional guarantees that other Americans have, including privileges and immunities.

The contents of the work, and a word of explanation of each of the captions, are as follows:

I - "An Idea Whose Time Has Come."

The background and the unfolding story of the sitdown movement.

II - "Private Rights v. Fairness of Treatment."

An analysis of the legal and moral issues involved in the movement.

III - "The Status Quo or Constructive Compromise."

An analysis of the attitudes and reactions regarding the sitdown demonstrations, local, national and state, with reference to the National Democratic and Republican Nominating Conventions.

IV - "The Young Negro is a New Negro."

The approach of the younger generation of Negroes to the problem of gaining first-class citizenship.

V - "Rights - Constitutional Guarantee or Southern Whim."

The relationship of the sitdowns to the Civil Rights fight.

An Abstract - 2

PEOPLE Sat Down to Eat

Virgil C. Stroud

Contents, (cont'd)

VI - "Debt to the Past or Road to Zion."

[redacted]

VII - "Appraisal."

A look at the results or lack of results of the sitdown movement.

VIII - "Compendium."

Summary, conclusions, and implications for the future in the sitdown situation.

Appropriate pictures are interspersed throughout the work.

Dear Charley:

As much as was any one person, I was the author of The Federal Executive and Civil Rights. I think, therefore, that I could not appropriately write a note about it, even a brief one.

We had expectations of good reception for this document in Washington and with the press. To date in both quarters the response has gratifyingly exceeded what we had thought probable.

Incidentally, I understand Peggy has given your name as a reference at the University's personnel office. I hope this will not cause you any bother.

Dear Charlie:

I am sending you an extra copy of The Federal Executive and Civil Rights with the thought that you might like to have it reviewed in The Journal of Politics.

We submitted this last week to Mr. Kennedy and others in the new administration, and will give it a public release in, probably, ten days or two weeks.

Among the people whom we consulted in preparation of it were three political scientists: Robert Harris, Bob Steamer, and Alex Heard. None of them, of course, is to be credited or blamed for anything that is in it.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Horton:

Thank you for your invitation to participate in one of the workshops of the Highlander Folk School. I am afraid it is impossible for me to accept another travel or speaking engagement this month. I ordinarily stick pretty closely to my desk and find that that is necessary if I am to come at all close to handling the work-load. By some freakish bad planning, I find myself scooting off this month three times and I just cannot do it a fourth. Moreover, February 23 and 24 are the dates of our annual meeting of directors of the state councils on human relations and I have to be here in Atlanta for the occasion.

I am sorry that I cannot accept your invitation, particularly as I have not yet visited Highlander.

In the newspapers all over the country one reads often of the racial tensions, strife, & violence that accompany the school desegregation process. OPEN is interested in getting some factual material to the people on which and how many cities and counties of the South have carried on this process with little or no violence. I'm sure there must be many places that have worked out a solution to peaceful desegregation.

We feel this is needed newspaper information to present the other side of this violence and hate picture. Do you have any such articles or would you send us any information on this subject that you can —

Gentlemen:

I am in need of some information on the segregation laws of the various southern states, and I think that you might be able to help me. I would like to know if the various southern states, especially South Carolina, have segregation laws that forbid private colleges from accepting Negro students for enrollment as regular students. I have been told that a certain private college in South Carolina will not accept Negro students because their is a state law that forbids integration of even private colleges. I would like to know if this is true.

I know of several graduates schools that accept Negro students. A number of these are seminaries, which are private schools. Do the state laws make any differentiation between regular colleges and graduate schools?

I would appreciate very much any information that you can give me on this. I am writing a thesis on the education of Negro ministers in the South, and this information would be of great help to me. Also, I would like to thank you for the information which you have already sent to me. It has been of great help to me.

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

(reports views of SUI foreign students)

IOWA CITY, IOWA, Feb. 9 -- Racial segregation in America had scored a real black mark against the U.S. in the minds of students from other countries as they began their studies at The State University of Iowa in September, 1959.

Most of the students criticized the U.S. quite severely on the basis of segregation, reported Horace Dawson Jr. in a dissertation submitted for a Ph.D. degree, which he received at SUI's February Commencement. Little Rock and Arkansas' Governor Faubus were the symbols of racial discrimination and provided one of the students' more prominent impressions of the U.S., Dawson found out.

When he interviewed the students shortly after they arrived to begin their studies in 1959, he found most of them "disgusted" by what they had heard previously of segregation in America. They indicated inability to understand segregation as a policy, there being no precedent for it in their own experience, explained Dawson, assistant professor of English and journalism at North Carolina College, Durham.

Students from India were the only ones unwilling to be drawn out on the issue, Dawson continued. Those who would comment softened their remarks with "but that is passing now" or "these problems will be solved in time." One of this group cited "free publication of disagreeable news" as evidence of American sincerity in trying to solve the problem.

Another Indian student commented that "Communists in India make a lot of American segregation. 'Democracy for whites only,' they say. Don't forget, Indians are not white."

Dawson investigated the students' preconceptions concerning America in four areas: family relations; standard of living; economic, political and social outlook; and college life. At the end of the academic year, he interviewed the students again in an attempt to discover how these attitudes had changed.

During the second interview, Dawson recorded a general decline in interest in segregation. The students, generally, still thought Americans were prejudiced, particularly in the South, but the problem was not considered of maximum interest. This change in attitude may have been partly due to the fact that there are relatively few Negroes at SUI and little open discrimination in the community, Dawson noted.

Dawson found in his first interview in 1959 that the students from other countries had a "stereotypical" picture of Americans. From impressions formed in their homelands they expected to find America to be a "land of plenty," with a classless and technically advanced society. The students thought of American family life as "loose" and lacking in depth. They believed Americans were too much concerned with materialistic values.

"Materialistic," often used to describe Americans unfavorably in the first interview, was replaced by "hard-working" in the second interview, Dawson reported. Several expressed the idea that many foreigners picture Americans as being rich without having to work very hard, but these students said they had personally observed that Americans work very hard for what they have and deserve their material possessions.

American "riches" commanded less awe during the second interview, Dawson found. Students were less inclined to impute riches to the average American. Homes were considered more comfortable than magical, Dawson said.

After their arrival in the U.S., a small number of the students expressed disappointment at being in Iowa rather than in a more populous area, Dawson reported. A Yugoslav complained that he could not really see the U.S. from Iowa.

During the second interview, a Yugoslav--perhaps the same Yugoslav--said, "I found out that the United States are not New York or Los Angeles but that its most part represents 'one-floor America.' Whenever the name of the country was mentioned, I would imagine the city life of New York. From now on, I will always imagine Iowa City, Osage or Cedar Rapids, for I think that such towns are what America is made of."

Mrs. D. R. Kinney
OPEN, Inc.
P. O. Box 16406, Southeast Station
Baton Rouge, La.

Dear Mrs. Kinney:

Although I do not know of any recent articles directly pertaining to the subject of your letter of February 8 (instances of desegregation with little or no violence), the enclosed materials will provide documentation showing violence to have been minimal indeed when contrasted to instances of peaceful desegregation.

As you will see from the Southern School News table "Segregation-Desegregation Status," 770 districts are known to have desegregated since 1954; in only 11 of them has there been intimidation or violence of a serious nature (i.e., serious enough in most cases to have resulted in property damage or temporary disruption of either education or the desegregation process). These 11 include:

Hoxie, Arkansas
Clinton, Tennessee
Sturgis, Kentucky
Clay, Kentucky
Mansfield, Texas
Baltimore, Maryland
Milford, Delaware
White Surphur Springs, W. Va.
Nashville, Tenn.
Little Rock, Ark.
New Orleans, La.

(See "South Marks First Year Without Violence," from Southern School News, for detail on these and a few lesser incidents.)

However, in only 4 localities has there been really spectacular violence: Clinton, Little Rock, Nashville (night-time dynamiting of school; mob action minimal), and New Orleans. So, depending upon what is termed "violence," desegregation with little or no violence can be said to have occurred in 759 out of 770 desegregated districts (or, if only the four more spectacular ~~stitutions~~ situations are counted, in 766 out of 770 desegregated districts).

Several items which may provide useful sidelights are also enclosed.

Please do not hesitate to call on us if we may be of future help.

Sincerely,

Mr. George McMillan
Box 299
Aiken, South Carolina

Dear George:

Keep in mind that we want this to be an essay which will point to the typical problems surrounding college desegregation, particularly in the deep South; and that will offer some comment on how experience and intelligence suggests that these problems be met.

You will hang the discussion on the Athens incident, and, I understand, contemplate a minimum of 6,000-7,000 words (this ought to be also about the optimum). Your suggestion that about half of this be narrative, half comment (or interpretation, or conclusion) is good, though you are entirely free as to whether the comment follow or be woven into the narrative or both.

Remember that the problem is, "How to desegregate successfully." Here are, pedantically stated, some issues which would seem pertinent:

Attitude (hostile, friendly, or resigned) of administration.
Efforts by administration to influence, one way or the other, faculty and student opinion and conduct.
Counselling given by university officials to the Negro students (their likely problems, desirable conduct, etc.
Rules and arrangements (e.g. housing and feeding of Negro students, social affairs, restrictions on protests by white students, etc.)
Policies and attitudes of governing body (You are writing about a state university; its Board of Regents is less free to determine policies than is the Board of Trustees of a private university: the whole state government gets involved. Maybe this is a point you can develop.)

Handling of relationship with town press, outside groups. (Alumni too, if you can get anything on that; e.g. how has the alumni magazine reported the change and later developments?)

Role of faculty; of student government; student newspaper; student clubs; fraternities and sororities.

The above isn't meant to be a prescription; you know what the objective is, and you'll know how to handle it: these are only some questions which seem interesting to me.

You should, I think, go to Athens; I would hope your visit could be held to one day, two at the most. As I told you, we can't be of help in setting up interviews. A couple of suggestions: Mrs. Beverly Downing, 395 Hampton Court, telephone LI 8-1010, Athens, is state president of HOPE; W. H. Benson, Benson's Bakery; both might be good informants, and might be able to steer you to campus contacts. Mrs. Tilly is an old family friend of Dean Tate; would you like for her to write?

We would like to think of this for publication in early Spring.

Good to have you on board again.

Mr. Douglas Rogers
4717 Camden Avenue
Pennsauken 8, New Jersey

Dear Mr. Rogers:

In reply to your letter of Feb. 8, to the best of our knowledge segregation in private colleges is not required by law in any of the Southern states; however, certain measures do exist in some Deep South states which discourage desegregation. (Mississippi is the only state about which there is some question as to the existance of laws actually forbidding desegregation in private colleges; we do not have conclusive information for this state. You may wish to write to the State Board of Education in Jackson for their comment.)

In Georgia, for an example of the type of measure which discourages but does not forbid, the legislature "may" revoke the tax exempt status of private colleges which do not observe segregation.

In South Carolina desegregation inprivate colleges has been said to be not against state law, but "against public policy." (See the enclosed clipping from Southern School News concerning an instance of desegregation and its aftermath.)

A report on desegregation in previously white public and private colleges is enclosed. Such desegregation as exists in private colleges in Georgia is in previously all-Negro schools and does not appear in this report.

In regard to your second question, state segregation laws are not thought in any case to distinguish between graduate and undergraduate levels. Some colleges, however, have desegregated graduate levels exclusively; others have begun desegregation with graduate classes and later extended the policy to undergraduate classes.

We are happy to know our materials have been of use to you.

Sincerely,

Marge Manderson

Dr. Albert W. Dent

Dear Dr. Dent:

As we discussed when you were here for the Executive Committee meeting, I was most interested in your remarks about the economic effects on New Orleans of the school disorders. I think there would be reat interest in an L-Report which collected as many indications of economic loss as there now are. I do not have in mind a scholarly survey or analysis; that may come later. Just the sort of things which you mentioned, provided they can be satisfactorily documented, would be enough: hotel vacancies, as shown by newspaper advertising; decline in attendance at the downtown church frequented by tourists; fall-off of department store sales; etc. Nor would the presentation have to be polished. Indeed, I think the most effective thing would be a series of short paragraphs, each one reporting a fact. There would need be no analysis: the facts could speak for themselves.

I wonder if someone on your faculty could, in fairly quick order, pull together such a collection of illustrative facts? If so, I think we could pay a modest honorarium, $25.00 - $50.00, depending on the time and effort required.

Dear George:

You will have to use your own judgment regarding Bill Collins. I find him an unsatisfactory person. His name is "Horace"--I think his initials are M.W.H.

I assume you prefer to do this rather than have Mrs. Tilly write to Dean Tate. Or you could write to Tate and say that you were doing so at the suggestion of Mrs. Tilly; I am sure she would not mind. I am not recommending this; merely indicating the alternative. Frankly, my guess would be that you would do just as well going in cold. But this is up to you.

Sincerely yours,

Professor Donald Dewey

Columbia University
New York 27, N. Y.

Dear Professor Dewey:

Good things do not necessarily come in large packages. "Some Economic Costs of Discrimination in Southern Industry" is written with skill and authority. After careful reading, I do, however, believe that you will want to look it over again yourself before it is published. I have made some more or less technical revisions on the manuscript itself (all of which invite your reaction), and shall indicate below several more substantive questions. But principally, I think there is need for more explicit development of the main point; viz., that discrimination is costly to the South or, as you put it in a phrase on page 11, "this slow progress is not good enough for the South." I don't mean that this has to be documented with detailed research; I do sense a need for a paragraph, or perhaps several, which will say, with the authority of your scholarship, that discrimination is not only hurtful to the Negroes but to the regional economy. Your approach is that Southern wealth is held down by the low per capita incomes of Negroes; I believe that all that is required is that this fact and its consequences be somewhat more spelled out toward the end of the article inorder to fulfill thepromise of the first paragraph, of a showing that discrimination "makes the American economy less efficient."

I know well and sympathetically your problems of time, and we do not expect or desire any heavy work on this. I take heart from your stated willingness to do a "little more qualification, elaboration, and polishing," and hope that you can find time to give it a final work-over. If you can, we shall be delighted to publish it (though at the moment we are not clear as to the best form).

The other questions which occur to me:

4, first paragraph--What of Florida? Are Arizona and Nevada good comparisons? don't too much of their wealth depend on on retirement income, tourists, and Nevada's peculiar institutions? Why not a simple statement affirming that the South has abundant natural resources? (After all, against Pennsylvania's coal and Minnesota's iron, there is the oil of Texas and Louisiana--as well as the oil of Oklahoma and the coal of West Virginia.)

4, second paragraph--"They are prevented from doing so, etc." This is a key point, if not the key point. It is offered, however, without demonstration or discussion.

7, line 21--can the sentence be continued as follows: "... better jobs in the South, and there has been little narrowing of the gap between white and Negro income."

With very best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar
Director of Research

reports on legislative and regulatory trends

NEW TRENDS IN STATE, COUNTY AND MUNICIPAL GOVERNMENT . . .

throughout the nation can be followed in minimum time and expense through our FROM THE STATE CAPITALS reporting services, available by selective topical listings according to your own specialized needs and interests.

Issued in concise mimeographed, time-saving news digest form, these reports provide a continuing source of wholly impartial, factual data ahead of that elsewhere available—where otherwise available at all—on current and prospective legislative, administrative and judicial action at the state and local levels.

Every effort is made to furnish this information at the point most useful to our subscribers—while developments are still in their formative stages.

With emphasis on how common problems and pressures are being met, the reports point up the significance of action both locally and as part of incipient trends likely to spread from state to state and city to city. A continuing picture also is given of trends already in progress.

A descriptive listing of our various reporting services is given in the following pages, together with annual subscription rates and special introductory rates open only to new readers to permit evaluation of the usefulness of the reports at nominal expense.

Also included for your convenience is a coupon through which any of the listed reporting services may be ordered at either the regular annual rates or, if a new reader, at the special introductory rates.

Any new subscriptions may be cancelled without obligation upon receipt of first issues if the reports fail to prove fully satisfactory. In such instances, if advance payment has been made, full refunds will be granted.

About FROM THE STATE CAPITALS Reports—

FROM THE STATE CAPITALS reporting services are designed to meet the needs of those already aware of the importance of developments in state capitals and of the fact that such trends cannot be adequately followed merely when legislatures are in session.

Our readers know that pressures resulting in legislation work constantly and must be so watched. They know, too, that the activities of interim committees, special legislative sessions, courts, administrative agencies and other key factors cannot be fully understood on a part-year basis.

We neither have nor seek any so-called "inside" sources of information for unreliable predictions. Every effort is made to keep our reports entirely factual and impartial, and to base our forecasts, when offered, on careful analysis of actual developments.

Our information sources are no different than our readers could obtain from the various states for themselves, if they wished to spend thousands of dollars gathering such material and more thousands for a staff to analyze it. Our sole function is to do that job for them at a mere fraction of such costs.

In addition to the various types of factual source material we purchase, we also receive extremely helpful cooperation from agencies and officials in many states, as well as private research groups, who voluntarily forward useful data to us and who have been of invaluable help in promptly answering our queries for information sought by our readers and the public generally.

Although designed primarily for current business and professional use where reliable data is needed ahead of that generally obtainable elsewhere, if otherwise available at all, FROM THE STATE CAPITALS reports also are being used increasingly for research reference purposes.

Backed by more than a quarter-century of experience in this field, FROM THE STATE CAPITALS reports are being increasingly recognized as a reliable source of information by a growing list of public and private research agencies and libraries; general and specialized publications; state, county and municipal officials; trade, professional and civic organizations; legislators, lawyers, engineers, manufacturers, investment bankers, businessmen and others.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

This will confirm my willingness to go along with the project we discussed in yesterday's telephone conversation. I shall expect to hear from you later concerning the exact time and place of the meeting.

If you supply me with this additional information by letter, I wish you would at the same time clarify for me whether the initiative for this matter comes from the northern end of the line or from us locally. In other words, are the people up there asking us to visit them as a group of expert advisers who have knowledge of the local situation, or are we going up there to urge upon them a particular course of action? If it is the latter case, we may need some meeting of minds as to what course of action is to be urged.

Also I am curious who else will be in the group.

A letter could be addressed to me either at the above or at my home: 525 35th Avenue East, Tuscaloosa.

Dear Mr. Maslow:

Harold has asked me to send you what information we can in regard to your letter of February 17. On the attached sheet you will find enrollment figures for five of the ten larger cities plus two others. I don't think there is any simpler way to obtain complete coverage than by writing to the school board or superintendent in each city; I am fairly sure they would answer you promptly. We are sorry that our files are not completely satisfactory on this question, but we have never tried to keep up with these figures.

Dear Dr. Dunbar:

The monograph, When a City Closes Its Schools, was our first venture in the publication of paper bound monographs. We have had fewer requests for it than we had anticipated and we are eager to have this volume distributed before its relevance declines. We had hoped to make up some of our deficit in the handling charge of $1.00 per copy, but we are more concerned with getting copies into circulation. We are wondering if you might have use for the book in connection with your educational or research activities. If so, we would be very pleased to send you up to 100 copies free of charge.

Dear Professor Sovern:

We are very glad to hear of your grant from the 20th Century Fund. I hope that we may keep in touch as your study progresses, for it is a field in which we are of course greatly interested. Actually, however, we have not published anything on the question of employment discrimination. In January we did submit to President Kennedy and his administrative leaders, and subsequently released to the press, a discussion of possible executive actions to protect the civil rights. I am sending you a copy of this, together with a research memorandum by Daniel Pollitt, of the University of North Carolina law school, from which it grew.

We have added your name to our mailing list. We have a listing of back materials available, but it is now under revision. When it is completed a copy will be sent to you, and if you will return it to me personally with checks beside the things you would like to have, I shall see that you get them.

Dear Miss Dickson:

I am very glad to respond to your letter of February 13 by recommending Miss Elizabeth Waters as a candidate for Community Service abroad. She would, I believe, be an excellent representative of her country and an able contributor to the program of your organization.

Miss Waters has worked under my supervision since October, 1960. Her duties, while not exciting, are inestimably important to us, and she has discharged them well and, I believe, has derived from them much instruction for herself. She is in charge of our files, which means that she reads a number of newspapers and magazines, decides what is to be clipped and in which category filed, and similarly classifies and files the mass of reports and other current material which comes through. She usually has a part-time assistant. Her judgment in her work is good. She is also one of the most cooperative and responsible of office members. To recount the details would not be rewarding, but I would like to note, for what it indicates of her qualities, that Miss Waters has made a special contribution to our office by her ability to cope with a most trying personality situation.

Miss Waters is a person deeply motivated toward putting her life to good use for others. She is a faithful Catholic, but also a willing worker now and in times past with the Friends. She is active in various concerns of Atlanta's Negroes. She is an inveterate hobbyist (stamps, coins) and also--unusual for a girl--fond of fishing and hunting.

Her principal handicap is her speech. Not only is she characteristically quiet, but she is not easy to understand when she does speak. I have, however, had occasion to hear her speak before a group, and was pleased to find that the hesitancy which she exhibits in conversation seemed to disappear, and that she spoke confidently and clearly.

We are sending you under separate cover a complimentary copy of our report, The Federal Executive and Civil Rights.

Our research staff is small, consisting of myself, two assistants and a filing aide. Our files are rather extensive and include chiefly newspaper clippings, government reports, and other current materials, plus a small library. A number of our publications are commissioned, and I am sending you also a copy of a recent pamphlet as an illustration. We have not attempted to print a bibliography of articles and books relating to Negroes; we do have a list of our own materials which is currently in revision and we shall send you a copy in a few days.

Dear Sir:

Your organization has been suggested as a good source for materials and literature on the subject "The Problem of Race Relations in the Southern States". I am a senior at Andover Newton Theological Seminary in Newton Centre, Mass. and am doing a project on the above subject in a course on Racial and Cultural Conflicts. Since I was reared in North Carolina, attended school in Virginia and worked in Georgia for three years, - I am particularly interested in the problem in the South. Would you send me any available material and literature that you feel would be helpful?

Since there is a deadline on the date due of my paper, I would like the material as soon as possible. Any suggestions that you might have of other possible sources of information would be appreciated.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm terribly sorry to be so long in replying--we have begun talking about the employment situation again, and I wanted to wait until after a planned meeting, in order to give you the latest. The meeting was postponed because of ice on the streets, etc. and has not yet been held. However, I did sit in on a meeting chaired by Paul Rilling, and he has undoubtedly written you about it.

I'm enclosing a copy of the report given by Dr. Cothran and I to the Greater Atlanta Council. This was March, 1960. After that, we kept writing Dr. Clinchy, asking if and when the survey would be made. It was made, eventually, and a report was issued on the Atlanta survey by the President's Committee on October 24, 1960. I can send you a thermafax copy if you do not have a copy.

The Greater Atlanta Council is beginning March 1 with a paid, full-time executive director, and this will, we hope, increase the effectiveness of the group. Volunteers with limited time just cannot accomplish very much without a professional executive to keep the wheels turning.

Best wishes.

Dear Sirs:

I am a senior at Austin Presbyterian Theological Seminary in Austin, Texas; at the present time I am taking an intern year at a neighborhood church in a low-income Negro community in Cleveland's inner-city. In the past few years I have become increasing aware of the difficulity which the Church has had in relating itself positively to urban society and in particular to the low-income and minority groups within it. I believe that the Church can and in many specific instances is carrying on an effective ministry in various neighborhoods.

Wishing to prepare myself for inner-city work in the South and in preparation for my thesis requirements, I am writing you for information concerning the Church's inner-city ministry with which you may be acquainted. I have recently subscribed to New South; do you have any pamphlets or back issues which may be relevant? Are there any particular persons, projects, articles, periodicles, or books which you would suggest I make myself acquainted?

I appreciate your cooperation.

Dear Sir:

In a study group to which I belong, this year's theme is, "Dixie - Looking Back and Looking Forward". The topic which has been assigned to me for discussion at the March meeting is, "Dixie - Today and Tomorrow". Stated briefly, we have heard much about the South's illustrious past; now we need to know what the South is really like today, and what should be her plans, her aspirations, and strategy for the future.

Our public library has a wealth of material dealing with the South's past, but practically none that gives an up-to-date look at the present or a challenge for the future, except from an economic point of view.

If you can furnish any material that will be helpful in preparing my talk, I assure you that it will be greatly appreciated.

Will subscribers receive a copy of the Report to the new President which was so well publicized recently ? I should like to have the text.

Do you have any reports, or information, or bibliography on the subject: the effect of desegregation on the Negro teacher and on the related subject of the Negro and the teaching profession, that is, the barriers, and the extent, if any, to which they have been crumbling.

Dear Mr. Brickman:

The best source for the information you request in your recent letter is the Statistical Summary "Status of School Segregation-Desegregation in the Southern and Border States," published by Southern Educating Reporting Service, P. O. Box 6156, Acklen Station, Nashville 12, Tennessee. The Summary contains listings of school districts desegregated in each of the Southern states; in most instances it will be possible to determine which districts encompass cities and then, by checking Census or any more recent population data to which you have access, you will be able to determine which cities of over 100,000 population have desegregated schools. The amount of desegregation within districts is also indicated by the Summary for many, but unfortunately not all, of the states.

Under separate cover we are forwarding materials concerning the process and other circumstances of desegregation in several larger cities.

Sincerely,

Marge Manderson

Dear Joe Dennis:

I have not been able to find a copy of Brady's Black Monday on the news stands here, and we do not have one. However, you might be able to get a copy by writing to The Citizens' Council, 813 Plaza Building, Jackson, Mississippi. I am enclosing a thermafax copy of some of their "recommended literature". We have ordered one copy each of some items, for our files, but do not have any on hand.

Good luck with your study and discussion group.

Dear Mrs. Albright,

thank you so very much for the wonderful cooperation you have given me, and by going out of your way by sending us several dollars worth of excellent free material. We want you to know that we appreciate it very much. I am reading as much of it as I can before the new University semester begins. The only one I had previously read was South Carolina Speak.

Our group is entirely pro-integration in view, some liberal and some moderate. But we feel we can best combat segregationists propaganda by studying and discussing it. You said the Council had a few extra copies of some things. Do you have Black Monday by Brady? If so, I would like to know the price. I have Talmage's book, along with King's book and another one. I thought with that, plus your material along with Haselden's book, would certainly be a fine start.

If you don't have a chance to write me before Jan. 24, write to the following address,

Tuscaloosa, Alabama

Otherwise, my Bessemer home address would be fine.

thank you again for helping us far beyond our requests and expectations.

For answers to some of the questions you posed, note "Problem for the Entire Country" in the December 1957 issue of New South, and the abbreviated and less technical version of the Report mentioned, Emotional Aspects of School Desegregation. In a number of the writings which are being sent you will find comments on why Southerners react the way they do.

Southern Regional Council
Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

As of late, my interest in the work and progress of integration has increased a great deal. I have read a number of articles on this great problem which confronts us, but have yet to achieve any amount of satisfaction or real enlightenment as to the procedure of integration.

I am certain we all know the Christian principles concerning the matter, and that precisely is the only thing these writings may be reduced to — that all men are created equal.

Being from the South myself, I am especially interested in the problem as it exists there; this is mainly because I will live there after my education in the North. It will no doubt be at this time that the crisis will have reached its height, and I will be face to face with it. Hence it is, that I strongly desire to face the problem with sufficient knowledge and understanding in order to deal with it successfully.

So, I am making this appeal to you for whatever assistance you are able to extend in the matter. My major question arises: What is the Southern attitude toward integration, why do they feel this way, how may we go about explaining and making them accept the inevitable; and how may we make the North understand the deep-rooted prejudice as it exists in the South, and that only time, trials, and hardships will win out in the end to remove these prejudices — and not a mere order issued by the Supreme Court?

If you are able to answer any of my questions, it will be most deeply appreciated.

You are assured my prayers for continued success in a most worthy apostolate.

I remain

Most sincerely yours,

Jos. A. Morrow

We now have offset reprints of our report, The Federal Executive and Civil Rights, and a copy is being mailed to you. The cost is .50¢.

Regarding the requested information on the effect of desegregation on the Negro teacher, we are sending you several things and listing, on an enclosed sheet, bits of information and the sources. For your information, also, we suggest the following:

Southern School News, Vol. III, No. 5, November, 1956 has a feature titled "462 Negro Teachers Out, Many Land in New Jobs."

A 1958 Louisville Defender series, "A Study on Teacher Integration," has been published in pamphletform and is available from that newspaper at 714 W. Chestnut Street, Louisville 2, Ky.

The Civil Rights Commission 1959 report, pp. 265-70, "The Minority Group Teacher," gives data on Negro teacher displacement. (The 1960 report deals with public higher education.)

P. 29 - statement by P. A. Tanksley, Supt. of Schools, Del Rio, Texas, that all four Negro teachers lost jobs when schools integrated.

P. 36 - statement of Frances Tuttle, Supt. of Schools, Holdenville, Okla., "...the two Negro teachers will be dropped from the staff" when the Negro elementary school (55 pupils) is closed and pupils i integrated into the four white elementary schools.

P. 46 - statement of J. L. Darnell, Supt. of Schools, Creek County, Okla., "...a total of 19 teachers have lost their teaching positions in the county as a direct and indirect result of integration. One Negro teacher was rehired to teach in an integrated school where the enrollment is 90% Negro. Two other Negro teachers were given positions in an integrated high school that has six other white teachers. ... There is little liklihood that many Negro teachers will be employed in the county as long as boards of education are made up primarily of white people.

P. 56 - statement of Ralph W. Osborne, Supt. of Schools, Paducah, Ky. "We have no plans for the integration of colored teachers." (Negro teachers in all-Negro schools increased from 33 to 37.)

P. 178 - statement of C. Taylor Whittier, Supt.of Schools, Montgomery County, Maryland, "We have 107 schools, and each year we have had to open new schools, which has meant we have a great need for teachers and an ample opportunity to absorb any of the Negro teachers who would be displaced because of the closing of Negro schools."

Dear Harold:

Since I have not heard from you, I infer that your return to Atlanta may have been postponed.

Our executive committee met yesterday afternoon and eagerly endorses Mr. Dabbs' recommendation that we have you and Mr. A. J. Clement as speakers at the state-wide meeting to be held, presumably on a Sunday, here in Columbia in March, if possible, and if not March as early in April as you may be available.

We sincerely hope that you may find it possible to present an analysis of the national scene as it relates to areas of our concern, as we know of no one who might do this so well.

We shall anticipate a favorable response at your earliest convenience.

Dear Leslie:

Your summary of the press coverage given your report on executive action arrived just a few minutes ago. It looks first-rate but what impresses me most is the substance of the reporting. The nub of your recommendations did get reproduced, and in some influential and important places. Reading over your list of the 18 southern dailies which reproduced at least some of the AP story made me wonder about omissions from the list. Do you guess that the absence of references to papers in Arkansas and Tennessee, for example, is attributable to the nature of your news clipping service or to the fact that no dailies in those states picked up the story?

I'm glad, too, that you sent me a list of the materials that the Council now has available. In the next day or so I plan to check this against the file of documents I have and return the list to you with the request for those I don't have. Incidentally, if I neglected to do this while in Atlanta, I do wish you'd see that Dr. John Letson, the Atlanta Superintendent of Schools, gets a copy of my Saturday Review article. And Judge Hooper, of Atlanta, has written me that he's sending his copy of my article to other judges. I have told him he could either ask me, or have his secretary ask the Council, to have single copies sent to any judge whom he feels would like the article. So you may get a call from his office.

In the next few days I hope to have caught up on a back-log of correspondence that has taken so much of my time since getting gack to San Francisco. With that done I'll try to send brief notes to various judges, telling them I've asked the Council to put them on the mailing list - and will send copies of these letters to you as they go out.

Finally, there are millions of things I'd like to report to you about my trip and its developments. These will have to wait for a bit beyond reporting that I'm still sitting tight to hear from Lloyd Garrison, as Harold has suggested I should do for the moment. So nothing has developed further on that front, though I remain hopeful.

Thanks again for the wonderful hospitality which came from the Dunbars. I'll be in touch soon.

Faithfully,
Bill

Dear Nat:

I shall have to hold off for another week or two regarding the NAIRO Regional Meeting. I would like to come, but I cannot commit myself just yet. You will be hearing from me again.

Enclosed is a listing of our file divisions of newspaper clippings. It is pretty elaborate as it stands and we frequently have tommake it more so. For example, from 1957 through 1959 we have in addition to an"education, Arkansas" folder an "education, Little Rock" file which was broken up into separate folders for each month. Since last September our "education, Louisiana" file has had a folder for each month. We had to set up a separate folder for the University of Georgia crisis. Etc. Our sit-in file is a special and at the present rather unhappy case. For 1960 it consisted of a whole drawer, filed by day. Sometime when we have some extra help I hope to get it reorganized on a locality basis. But this will give you an idea of our system.

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Leslie Dunbar:

Will you permit me to include two interests in this one letter: your participation in the regional NAIRO conference and suggestions as to a system for filing news clippings.

The regional conference of NAIRO is scheduled for Thursday-Friday, June 1-2, at Camp Aldersgate, west of Little Rock, beginning at noon Thursday and running through Friday evening. One topic which holds most interest for professionals is "What Can the Federal Administration Do to Help?" We wanted you to kick-off this discussion with a presentation. So, keep it on your calendar.

The question which I did not get to put to you is this: Do you have a descriptive breakdown of your system for filing newspaper clippings? This does not assume that you will trouble to write an analysis just for us; but rather that you might send us what you have already.

It was good to see you.

Harold has asked me to reply to your letter of March 3. We don't have much additional material to send you regarding race relations committees. As you may know, the State of Kentucky has recently created one; it is still in the stage of getting started, but I would suggest that you write for more information to Galen Martin, executive director, Kentucky Commission on Human Relations, 311 Capitol Bldg., Frankfort, Ky. You might also write for information about the Oklahoma commission established by executive order of the governor. I have seen little on it yet and know of little it has done, but it has got together some good people. Write to Oklahoma Commission on Human Relations, c/o Executive Chambers, Oklahoma City, Oklahoma. I recently read the annual report of the Missouri Commission on Human Rights and thought it was a most interesting job. We have only one copy, but I would think you could get a copy by writing to: Gregory E. Shinert, Executive director, 705 Walsh Street, Jefferson City, Mo. The Fowler Commission in Florida has, as you probably know, expired. I am enclosing a couple of things they put out which may interest you. Let me know if we can be of any other help.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

The Literature Committee for the 13th annual National Civil Liberties Clearing House Conference, to be held here March 23 and 24, invites your organization to bring its publications to the attention of the conferees.

The Committee is arranging for the distribution of literature related to the Clearing House fields of civil rights, civil liberties, intellectual freedom, and international human rights -- particularly material dealing with intergroup relations in the community; work towards equality in voting, housing, education and employment; censorship; mass communications media in relation to the public's right to know; the relationship of church and state; and academic freedom.

If you wish to accept this opportunity, we ask you to send us between 50 and 100 copies each of not more than three pieces of cost-free literature that you consider to be timely, attractive, and related to the areas noted above.

We do not have facilities for posters or displays, and we cannot undertake responsibility for material for which a charge must be collected. However, if you have bibliographies of your publications, we will be glad to include them on the literature tables.

Your materials should be mailed so as to arrive on or before Monday, March 20, to:

The National Civil Liberties Clearing House,
1637 Massachusetts Avenue, N. W.
Washington 6, D. C.

We will welcome your cooperation, and we are glad to be of service in bringing your publications to the attention of the wide inter-organizational audience which the conference will offer.

Feb 28, 1961

Dear Mr. Dunbar,

I'm up here for a few days with Moreland who's here on business. Several friends suggested that I go by the Dept. of Justice to talk about the Montgomery situation. Mr. Burke Marshall wouldn't see me because he hasn't been confirmed yet. His hearing comes up tomorrow, and he has to face Sen. Eastland! At any rate, I saw the first assistant, Mr. John Doar, a Mr. Gumbaugh (I'm not sure of the spelling) and Mr. A. B. Caldwell. I spent about two hours with the latter two and they want me to go see the Civil Rights Commission tomorrow.

I left your report with Mr. Caldwell. He read pages 22-28 while I was there, but he emphasized that there is very little his department can do unless southerners (negro and white) are willing to testify. I told him that we did not know if your report had actually reached the president. He assured me that if it hasn't, it will. He said that the backlog of work for the new administration is simply overwhelming. I came away with the definite impression that Mr. Caldwell is a dedicated man, a real liberal with an understanding of the false nature of the accusations against us in the south. I also felt encouraged because he seems to feel that the new administration will take positive action. I feel sure that your report will get to the top and be given serious study. Of course the Dept. of Justice isn't the place for its implementation, but there seems to be good liason between interested parties, and I think the report is going to have a terrific impact.

We enjoyed having you in Montgomery and hope to see you soon.

Dear Dr. Walker:

I am enclosing verifax copies of two items which seem to us, after reviewing what we have, best suited to your needs. The brochure, "The Citizens Council," came out in 1954 but is still the handiest statement. You will notice that it speaks specifically for the Mississippi Council. Mississippi has always been the center of the Citizens Councils, and this particular document is used all over.

If we can be of any other help, please let me know.

Dear Leslie:

Thanks very much for your letter of March 9 and the enclosure of the photostatic reproductions of press coverage of the federal executive and civil rights. I am pleased to have it not only because of the accounts of the reception of Pollitt's excellent report as redrafted skillfully in your offices and also because the clippings are useful for my general files on the subject of Negro Rights in the South.

The Southern Regional Council and Professor Pollitt ~~ought~~ are to be congratulated for the invaluable services they have rendered to the country and to the cause of civil rights in this particular undertaking.

With all best wishes, I am

Dear Mr. Fleming,

At the present time I am an Associate Professor in Philosophy at Los Angeles State College and shall receive my sabbatical leave during the coming academic year, 1961 - 1962. I am writing you in connection with a research project that I should like to undertake, at least in pilot form, during this period.

Briefly, the research is in connection with racial prejudice and the proposed topic is:

> The philosophical bases for racial prejudice and their relations to the philosophies of education operative in the American schools today.

The method of approach would be to interview teachers, students, and general population in representative areas. The extent of this, of course, depends on the amount of money that becomes available.

I am enclosing a more detailed description of the research I have in mind and a brief resume of my background and experience.

I shall look forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely yours,

Gabriel A. Zimmerman

RESEARCH EXPERIENCE

FORD FOUNDATION RESEARCH: Associated with the Institute for Philosophical Research Under the directorship of Dr. Mortimer J. Adler. One of the original fourteen members when the Institute was founded in San Francisco in 1952. Responsible for the positions on the subject of human freedom of Alfred N. Whitehead, Spinoza, Leibnitz, Plato, Plotinus, and Eddington. Contrubuted to certain sections of the publication, Idea of Freedom, published by Doubleday in 1959. Aided in the development of a neutral language and constructed research techniques which helped in the success of the project.

MOTIVATION RESEARCH: Associated with Facts Consolidated as Research Consultant in the areas of sample design and motivation research. Responsible for the sample design of many complicated research programs. Developed motivational research techniques which allowed the motivational approach to be more objective and to yield more significant results. Prepared work which was to be the basis for legal decisions by the United States Government.

PHILOSOPHICAL RESEARCH APPLIED TO SOCIAL RESEARCH: Conducted a research program which produced an essay in an attempt to apply philosophical concepts as a principle of organization of social research data. Showed that a knowledge of philosophy and the ability to use philosophical concepts is a decided aid in the organization of research data especially in relation to human behavior.

TEACHING EXPERIENCE: Associate Professor in Philosophy at Los Angeles State College. Courses include: Applied Logic and Scientific Method, Theory of Knowledge, American Philosophy, Philosophical Ideas, and Metaphysics.

Instructor at University of Virginia. Courses included: Graduate Seminar in Descartes, a course in the works of Sigmund Freud.

Instructor at St. Louis University. Courses included: Logic, Philosophy of Man, History of Philosophy, and Epistemology.

PURPOSE OF THE PROJECT:

To determine the:
Philosophical bases for racial prejudice and their relations to the philosophies of education operative in the American schools today.

TYPE OF INFORMATION TO BE OBTAINED:

I. From the general public:

A. In relation to the Negro, do they object to :

1. Inter-marriage
2. Co-education
3. Living in the same neighborhood
4. Associating in a business way
5. Mixing in social circles
6. Eating in the same restaurants
7. Riding in the same public transportation
8. Visiting the same night clubs or places of entertainment
9. Watching the same sport events
10. Shopping at the same stores

B. Why do they feel the way they do about these particular activities and others of the same nature?

C. What are the reasons for their feelings--how much of their attitudes are based on sociological conditions, home or schools?

D. What areas have had the most influence in shaping these opinions?

E. A determination of the significant factors which are relevant as causative in relation to the attitudes toward Negroes.

II. From students (Both high school and college)

A. In relation to the Negro, do they object to:

1. Inter-marriage
2. Co-education
3. Living in the same neighborhood
4. Associating in a business way
5. Mixing in social circles
6. Eating in the same restaurants
7. Riding the same public transportation
8. Visiting the same night clubs or places of entertainment
9. Watching the same sport events
10. Shopping at the same stores
11. Attending the same schools
12. Sitting in the same classrooms
13. Living in the same dormitories
14. Participating in the same gym activities

B. Why do they feel the way they do about these particular activities and others of the same nature?

C. What are the reasons for their feelings--how much of their attitudes are based on sociological condition, home or schools.

D. What areas have had the most influence in shaping these opinions

E. A determination of the significant factors which are relevant as causative in relation to the attitudes toward Negroes.

III. From teachers (both high school and college)

A. In relation to the Negro, do they

1. Object to having them in classes
2. Do they grade them equally--How do their grades compare with the average white student
3. Do they consider them inferior or superior to the average white student
4. Do they feel in any way that the Negro has to be given special or different consideration as a student
5. Do they in any way actually discriminate between Negro and white students
6. Are they conscious of any desire to discriminate between Negro and white students
7. In relation to the Negro do they object to:

   a. Inter-marriage
   b. Co-education
   c. Living in the same neighborhood
   d. Having them as colleagues at the same school or university
   e. Mixing in social circles
   f. Eating in the same restaurants
   g. Riding in the same public transportation

B. What "philosophies of education" are actually operative in their teaching methods.

C. A determination of the correlation between the operative philosophies of education and the attitudes toward Negroes.

D. A determination of other significant factors which are relevant as causative in relation to the attitudes toward Negroes.

Method to be used:

1. The first step in development of the methodology to be used is the organization and testing of a questionnaire. This questionnaire will be partially structured in order to allow for some controlled response data which will be primarily factual and also unstructured in order to allow for a great deal of depth and motivational interviewing.

2. Upon the completion of a well-tested sensitive questionnaire, a sample will be developed which will depend upon the extent of the interviewing which will be allowed. The sample can be either local, regional or national and could vary in size from 100 to 2000 in each category mentioned previously (general public, students, teachers). The desire, of course, is to do a national study, but this will depend on the amount of funds alloted.

3. The questionnaire, of course, would have to be just as good regardless of the size of the sample and, for this reason, at least a regional sample is recommended.

4. Upon the completion of the questionnaire and the drawing of the sample, interviewing can be undertaken in the field. The interviewing will be undertaken only by those skilled in motivational research. The applicant himself has a great deal of experience in this field and can, if necessary, train others although this will probably not be needed.

5. When the interviewing data is received from the field, it will be organized statistically into appropriate tables revealing the statistical content of the material.

6. With the statistical analysis of the data, qualitative analysis can then begin. Hypotheses can be tested and scientifically sound conclusions can be drawn from the material. This, of course, is the most important part of the work and can yield significant results if all the previous steps are followed with precision.

7. The completed analysis can be presented in report form prior to publication or can be presented in any way that seems desirable by those concerned.

Time and Costs:

1. The time and costs will vary with the size of the sample.

2. The applicant can definitely begin his project in June and continue until it is completed

I assume that you saw the census figures printed in the New York Times on March 15. These gave the Negro population for Houston, Dallas, New Orleans, San Antonio, Memphis, and Atlanta. We have put on the attachment Negro population figures for the other large cities of the South. All of these come from state sources except the ones marked "official"; these were special censuses.

Incidentally, you should be able, I hope, to get the full 1960 census figures soon. The Advance Reports for Mississippi and North Carolina have already reached us and I know that at least the Alabama and Florida ones are out, though we don't have them yet. In case you need to look for them, they are titled "Advance Reports, General Population Characteristics," PC (A2).

Dear Les:

CONGRATULATIONS !!! I just heard from Harold and Paul Rilling that SRC's Executive Committee had elected you as successor to Harold. You stand in a noble line of good men, each particularly adopted to their time. I believe the time is ripe for the type of leadership I know you will offer.

I have known for some weeks that HCF was leaving, I did not know until he told me that the decision of succession was settled. I believe in promotion from within when there is a well qualified professional who is "within." I fully believe that you fit that description.

My very best wishes in this new and important post; I offer my cooperation and pledge my continued interest in the well-being of SRC.

All the best.

Dear Mr. Sherrill:

We have not recently done or published any legal research on pupil placement laws or interposition resolutions. For your possible interest, I am enclosing a couple of items which may be useful to you as background.

In addition to Race Relations Law Reporter and its occasional reference articles, I have found the following articles to be of special value:

Daniel J. Meador, "The Constitution and the Assignment of Pupils to Public Schools," Virginia Law Review, Vol. 45, p. 517, 1959.

G. F. Foster, Jr., "Turning Point for Desegregation?," Saturday Review, December 17, 1960.

Robert J. Steamer, "The Role of the Federal District Courts in the Segregation Controversy," (I have this in manuscript form and cannot place my hand on the citation. It appeared, however, some time during 1960 in the Journal of Politics.)

On the related question of private schools, there was a useful article by Walter F. Murphy in the Journal of Politics, Vol. 20, p. 635.

On the doctrine of interposition, you will of course have seen the opinion of the three-judge court in Louisiana of November 30, 1960 (5 Race Relations Law Reporter, p. 1008). As good as anything, I suppose, in outlining the regional doctrine of interposition, is a report, The Doctrine of Interposition, Its History and Application, A Report on Senate Joint Resolution 3 General Assembly of Virginia, 1956, and related matters, Commonwealth of Virginia, Division of Purchase and Printing.

Dear Dr. Bevin:

When Mr. Dabbs was here, he asked that we send you anything related to the post-desegregation experience at southern colleges and universities. I would like to recommend, first of all, that you take up this question with Dr. Guy Johnson, at the University of North Carolina. Dr. Johnson has maintained a continuing interest in the area; although he has not, I believe, published anything in the last couple of years, I am sure he is the best informed person. In the recent report of the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights, Equal Protection of the Laws in Higher Education, 1960, there are only a few pages which bear on your interest: see pp. 168-170.

The best thing which we have in our files is the document enclosed. Although it is a couple of years old, and was done by students (under the supervision, however, of Lewis Killian), it does present an interesting and informative picture.

Dear Dr. Atwood:

I am afraid we cannot be of much help in regard to the quieries in your letter of March 25. Merchants do not customarily make their sales figures public and are especially cautious when there is delicate and controversial situation. I am enclosing one of our reports as well as an interesting news release. These touch on the subject. Several newspaper reporters have similarly skirted around the question, but none have, to my knowledge, collected good facts. The Federal Reserve Board does circulate a monthly index of department store sales in the larger cities of the country. I have found it impossible, as yet at any rate, to document from the indices the dollar effect of the sit-ins, boycotts, or the resumption of buying. One problem is, as you undoubtedly know, that throughout the period of the protest retail sales generally have lagged.

But on the whole I should assume that the best evidence is silence. The fact that merchants who have desegregated are not complaining must indicate that they find desegregation more profitable than refusal to do so.

I am sorry we cannot be of more help and I wish you well in your efforts in Frankfort.

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar

Mr. Melvin L. Bergheim

Washington 6, D. C.

Dear Mr. Bergheim:

We have discussed your letter of March 16, and are prepared to assist with the July 12-16 visit of the foreign correspondents to Atlanta. There are enough excitement and interesting people here to make this a worthwhile occasion for them, and it ought to be instructive for us also.

We will not accept the honorarium, though we thank you offering it. On the other hand, we will gladly let you reimburse us for expenses, up to $300, in connection with the visit; we shall submit an itemized account.

I assume that the correspondents's itinerary may be crowded, and so I would doubt the usefulness of a seminar in Pittsburgh on race relations generally, which will certainly be the big topic here. There would be an opportunity, however, to get before them a fuller sketch of what is a national problem if a seminar were held in Pittsburgh, focussed on race relations in northern cities, and followed by the discussion here in Atlanta on southern issues.

We shall sometime before the event draw up plans and forward them to you for critiquing. We can do this more intelligently after participants are selected. If you know anything about specific interests of any of the participants, that would be helpful information.

If the group is all-white, putting them all up at one of the downtown hotels would be the most convenient thing; and the Atlantan would be an all-right choice. If there are non-whites included, the matter gets more complicated, and we'll have to work it out as best we can.

We are in a period of organizational flux, which explains why I, rather than Harold, am replying to you. By July we ought to be well settled, however, and able to do the honors for these people.

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar

Dear Mr. Currier:

I thank you for your letter of March 21. It was very good of you to write.

Although you and the Taconic Foundation have been already of inestimable assistance to the Southern Regional Council's work, I think your part in the creation of the Potomac Institute may well be an uniquely valuable contribution, not only to the solution of problems in which we are all interested but to the Council itself. The Institute will help bring on a climate of reasonableness and good will which will powerfully aid our efforts here in the South.

I trust you will continue to call on us whenever the need arises. We have some rather hard problems of reorganization to get over in the next few weeks, but we should soon be functioning smoothly--and, I hope, effectively--again.

With all best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

I was so glad to hear from you. I haven't quite wrenched my mind into focus on the darn job--like Scarlet, "I'll think about it tomorrow"--but when I do I suspect there will be more than a few occasions when I shall want to lean on your experience.

Because I have thought for some time that SRC's most energizing and fruitful days are just opening up, I am all the more sober about the change. Our assets, though, are strong: an accumulation of good will, a good staff, and the momentum which Harold and you and others have imparted.

Hope to see you sometime soon.

Dear Sirs:

As a graduate student at the University of North Carolina and a native Georgian, I am most interested in the problem now facing the south.... that of, integration.

One of my projects in getting my Master's degree in education is to study this problem from its beginning until now. Dr. George Simpson, my professor, suggested that I write you in connection with this research.

I would be most appreciative of any literature you have along these lines and of course, would be willing to finance this service.

Gentlemen:

I write this on an urgent telephone request from my daughter who is a student at Brandeis University. She asked simply for your address but I am speeding the process up by writing direct. She is writing a major paper in sociology on the sit-in movement seeking both an overview and sociological analytic penetration. This is a request that you send her your special reports and other materials relevant to this subject. Perhaps not incidentally she is not just another student with an assignment. She has been active and a leader in The Movement at Brandeis from the onset.

On checking the files of the National Student Christian Federation here I was able to identify three reports that would be very helpful, the April 1, 1960 "Student Protest Movement, Winter 1960," the May 10, 1960 report by Kenneth Moreland and the May 31, 1960 report by Margaret Price. I am sure this does not exhaust the materials you have.

MC While I am about it I would appreciate a spot on your mailing list for myself.

Dear Mr. Oliver:

Mr. J. M. Dabbs directed your letter of February 17 to this office, asking that we provide you all available information from our reference files. In answer to your questions:

1) Our most recent listing of Southern cities with desegregated city transit systems is enclosed. Note, however, that it is not a complete listing, but rather the results of a spot survey of 30-odd cities which was conducted in 1959, with a few more recent additions from press reports. We have indicated the latest of these.

2) In lieu of more comprehensive material (which, unfortunately, is not available), we are sending copies of newsclips from our files for the last year pertinent to your questions 2, 3, and 4. In regard to lunch counters in public transportation facilities, the situation is, of course, currently in a state of flux as a result of the student protest movement. Bus and train station lunch counters have been very obvious targets for sit-ins during the past year and in several instances desegregation has resulted. A spate of new litigation in connection with such facilities is another consequence of the protest movement.

I hope these materials will be of help in answering your questions.

Dear Sir:

I'd like to get some reliable information, please.

1- What are the latest Southern cities to "integrate" their city transit systems?

2- What progress has been made in abolishing "Jim Crow" in public transportation, station & airport waiting rooms, lunch counters?

3- What Southern States have had their "Jim Crow" laws for air, bus & rail passengers voided by Federal Court decisions?

4- Rigid enforcement of the I.C.C's ruling banning "Jim Crow" of interstate passengers on trains, buses & waiting rooms etc.
This needs much better enforcement.

I won't comment on this further.
I hope you will urge the President to ban "Jim Crow" on all trains, buses, planes etc. also on city transit systems — Waiting rooms, lunch counters etc.
I hope this can be done by Presidential order, soon.

No publicity please + thanks for this favor.

John Constable has referred your letter of February 28 to this office, and I am enclosing herewith all available material pertaining to your area of study.

From friends in the New Orleans area we have learned that even at the height of Mardi Gras festivity some lesser known hotels had available rooms -- an unprecedented circumstance -- but, regretfully, other than the two enclosed Times-Picayune stories (and the Wall Street Journal article you indicate you have already seen), we have nothing in our files showing the economic effect of racial tensions on the carnival. Note that the enclosed statement hailing "the greatest Mardi Gras ever celebrated" comes from White Citizens Council officials and was, of course, to have been expected.

Dear Sirs:

I am a ministerial student at Drake Divinity School here in Des Moines, attempting to do research on the theme of "The Negro in Contemporary American Religious Life."

#2 Questions I am attempting to find help on are: Are there any discernible trends toward or away from religion: Christian or non-Christian, Catholic or Protestant? Does secularism, skepticism, superficial religiosity, new spiritual depths, or something else characterize the American Negro? Is any significant impact being made by Mohammedanism?

M. L. King quote - Sat. Journal

look article Pike

#3 I wonder if there is a growing disillusionment with Christianity, feeling that it always favors the status quo and is an enemy rather than ally of the oppressed. I wonder if there is any decided difference between the attitude of intellectuals and that of ordinary Negroes. I would like to determine something of the effectiveness or ineffectiveness of the churches in the gains made by Negores in areas of desegregation.

Any material available on any of these questions would be of considerable help and deeply appreciated. In the Journal of Inter-Group Relations I saw a list of materials put out by or distributed by the Southern Reginal Council. Amon g the pieces of literature were:

Dear Miss Seipel:

One of the reasons that segregation has persisted in the South is that so many Americans have felt, as you said your fellow students feel, that it does not concern them. However, there is increasing realization that segregation is a national problem that concerns all of us; it is, moreover, an international problem which concerns all nations. I am, therefore, sending you two items which stress this: an article by Chester Bowles and another by Frank Graham.

As to what you can do, the first objective would seem to be to become informed. I am enclosing a list of our publications, and a suggested reading list also. The second objective might well be discussion groups on some of these readings. Once you gain insight into the over-all problem, courses of action will occur to you, according to your own community and the interests of your group. Why not write to Washington for information on the Peace Corps? The Friends Service Committee has for many years promoted summer work camps for students, some here in the United States and some abroad. Through religious groups, you might be able to invite a Negro speaker on some occasion.

Good luck. And write again if you wish additional information.

Dear Sir:

We are now considering the inquiry on Minority Groups in our Young Christian Students Group. While we have no negros attending Marian, and hardly any, if any at all in the surrounding community, we have observed that there exists in the attitudes of some of the students here a definite prejudice toward the negro race. In addition to this there are many, who although they have no definite prejudice, don't feel or realize the importance of the racial problem as they feel it doesn't and never will concern them.

We feel that this prejudice in the minds of some of the students and the indifference in the minds of others are definite problems worth our consideration.

Could you possibly recommend a suitable action in this case or send us information from which we could draw ideas for action. Any information on the negro question which you could supply us with would be greatly appreciated.

Thank-you very much!

I am currently writing a paper for a course entitled "The Supreme Court and American Society" on legal barriers to integration raised since the 1954 and 1955 Supreme Court decisions in Brown vs. Board of Ed. I would appreciate, in particular, any information you might be able to send me on pupil placement laws and the doctrine of interposition in each state. I would also appreciate any other information you think necessary and useful, and any suggestions for further study.

I cannot emphasize enough that I need material on the action of each individual state.

Thank you very much.

Dear Sir:

I am a sophomore at Guilford College and am majoring in sociology. In the last few years I have become very interested in the tremendous racial problem with which our country is faced. Many adjustments have taken place and many are yet to take place in the future.

At the present time, I am making a study of integrated churches. I want to find out how the Quaker Church feels about integrated churches and also at what churches throughout the country (perhaps a percentage) Negroes have attended, invited or uninvited and what the reaction was. How far has the Quaker Church come toward integrated churches? If you do or do not believe in integration, how do you propose to face the present problem?

If you would please answer some of my preceeding questions or send me any information concerning this topic, I would be indeed grateful.

Thank you.

Dear Miss Smith:

In reply to your question regarding the Quakers (the American Society of Friends), the group in Atlanta is integrated and I know of none that bar membership because of race. It is probably true that in some parts of the country there are no Negro members because there are no Negro Quakers. The American Friends Service Committee has published a pamphlet, Race and Conscience in America, which discusses race relations from their point of view. It can be obtained from American Friends Service Committee, 160 N. 15th Street, Philadelphia 2, Pa..50¢

May we suggest that you look up the New York Times series of articles on "Churches of the South Facing Dilemma on Segregation," by John Wicklein, July 5-8, 1959. We are enclosing one of our publications, The Church in Areas of of Racial Tension, by Cornelius C. Tarplee, which may be of interest to you.

The Southern Regional Council is an organization of white and Negro Southerners formed in 1944 to advance "equal opportunity for all the South's people." The enclosed leaflet will inform you briefly as to how we face the problem, now and since the formation of the Council.

Dear Mrs. Fenn:

Some of the most significant differences between Georgia and North Carolina's tuition grant acts appear to me to be these:

(1) In North Carolina, grants may be made to every child "for whom no public school is available, or who is assigned to a public school attended by a child of another race against the wishes of his parent or guardian...." In Georgia, every student is automatically entitled to receive a grant.

(2) North Carolina's grants would be standardized in amount on a statewide basis; Georgia's would vary in amount from local system to local system.

(3) The North Carolina Act contains elaborate safeguards. For example, (a) payments shall be made upon receipt of evidence that the child is attending the private non-sectarian school; (b) grants are only available if the private school which is involved is approved by the State Board; (c) checks are made payable jointly to parent and school, unless there is certification that parent has already paid the tuition; (d) parent or school official or employee mis-using grants is guilty of a felony. The Georgia Act contains virtually no safeguards, except against mis-use of grants by parents.

Alabama does have a tuition grant act: Act No. 652 of the 1959 regular session. A copy is enclosed, together with the North Carolina Act for your further comparison.

Dear Paul Anthony:

I have found a great deal of interest in all the material you gave me last winter when Phern Stanley brought Zoe Savage and me to your office. So many things developed to do before I left your city, I had no chance to look over all the publications until I reached home. That is why you have not heard from me sooner.

Recalling your offer to send some copies of useful material to Kenya, I would be able to place in the hands of interested persons, these:

6 copies, School Desegregation the first six years
6 " Three Views of the Segregation Decisions
6 " A Report on School Desegregation for 1960-61.
6 " Changing Patterns in the New South

This material may be addressed to me, c/o Friends Africa Mission

If you send it by surface mail, marking it prints, it will go cheaper. I believe each parcel must be 6lbs. 9 ozs or less. Probably this will all go in one parcel. Three months should be allowed so please send it off May first, as I will be able to use it by August first or soon after that.

I am enclosing a check for subscription to New South and the blank from one of the copies you gave me. If you issue lists of your publications and reports periodically, I would like to receive them. Then I would be glad to order those I may be able to use.

If there is a charge for the material going to Kenya, please let me know what it is.

Thanking you again for your talking with us ,

Re paragraph 2: the article by Will Campbell and the enclosure by Bishop Pike may help you with these questions. Here in the South it seems to me, from what I have read and heard and observed, that religion for the American Negro does have new spiritual depths; on the other hand, some of the intellectuals have turned from the church. In the South Mohammedanism has not made much impact: see Atlanta Journal story enclosed.

Re paragraph 3: I believe you would get better information on this from the following persons than from me: The Rev. cities have done as they faced this problem. Whatever information you can send me regarding the method of integration, problems encountered & solved, weakness or strength of plans used, will be greatly appreciated.

In these days when there's so much talk and so little real effort to understand each other & face the problem together, we thought this was something we could do.

Thank you for any help you can give us.

Gentlemen:

Thank you for sending me your excellent study on "The Federal Executive and Civil Rights."

I should like very much to use this in connection with a senior course here at the College during the present term. Could you send me six (6) copies by return mail so that they would arrive in time to be used as assigned reading? They will be read by some 30 students this spring, and will undoubtedly prove useful for subsequeut course work as well.

In any case, would you please let me know promptly so that other assignments may be planned if your material cannot be supplied.

Dear Dr. Dunbar:

I read with great admiration the speech which you made at Earlham College on Feb. 7. I am impressed with the scholarship which went into this speech and upon which I will draw heavily in the future. I am a professional literary kleptomaniac.

Let me add to your authorities the following quota tion from a letter written by Thomas Jefferson to J. B. Colvin on Sept. 20, 1810.

> "A strict observance of the written law is doubtless one of the high duties of a good citizen, but it is not the highest. The law of necessity, of self-preservation, of saving our country when in danger, are of higher obligation. To lose our country by a scrupulous adherence to written law, would be to lose the law itself, with life, liberty, property and all those who are enjoying them with us; thus absurdly sacrificing the end to the means."

I found this, of all places, in Mr. Workman's quaint little volume entitled The Case for the South where it appears on page 7.

I may say that Dr. Frank Graham in a recent speech at Rock Hill, S. C., spoke up manfully in favor of the sit-in group. The South Carolina legislature is now after his scalp.

Best regards.

Yours sincerely,

M. A. Wright

I wish the enclosed contribution might be larger. D. N. Beach

The report enclosed comes to you from the Southern Regional Council, an organization of Southerners devoted to interracial cooperation in the South. The Council is an outgrowth of the Commission on Interracial Cooperation, established in 1919.

The Southern Regional Council itself was formed in 1944. The incorporators were Dr. Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University; Dr. Charles L. Johnson, president of Fisk University; Ralph McGill, then editor of the Atlanta Constitution; Bishop Arthur J. Moore, of the Methodist Church; and Dr. Howard W. Odum, professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina.

Its president now is James McBride Dabbs, of Mayesville, S. C., author of The Southern Heritage and other works. Dr. Clement is chairman of the executive committee. Its executive director is Harold C. Fleming, of Atlanta. Its board, or the actual Council, consists of some 80 Southerners, drawn from the major religious faiths, both races, and the 13 states of the region. Its financial support has come from many individuals, foundations, and other organizations.

The Council's present functions may be summarized as follows: 1) providing consultative services to private and official agencies; 2) conducting research and publishing reports; 3) publishing a monthly magazine, New South, and cooperating with press, radio and television; and 4), serving as a clearing house and coordinator for other agencies concerned with Southern problems.

Further information regarding the Council's reports, publications, and services will be furnished on request.

Many thanks for your letter of March 30. You need not at all mind stealing anything which you will favor from my civil disobedience speech. I am sure that you are not unmindful of the fact that I had already stolen a bit here and there from your New South article. Both you and Harris Wofford have written first-rate dissertations on this question. It is a big problem though, and one which has always bothered me. When I got the invitation to speak at Earlham I yielded to temptation and paraded my own questions and worries.

Best wishes.

Dear Dr. Dunbar:

I appreciate very much the information in the enclosed materials you forwarded to me on March 28th. As Dr. Dabbs probably told you, we are vitally interested in the post-desegregation experience of southern colleges and are now presently involved in a study of our own. Next week a questionnaire will be sent out by me to many of the colleges that have desegregated in the past several years. We are asking a variety of questions, the answers to which we consider quite vital to our own situation. Most important is the particular question regarding the effect of such a move on the financial picture of such institutions. Personally I feel that this is a straw man, and I hope that the replies we receive indicate such. If you are interested, I will forward to you the results of our survey.

Thank you again and with all best wishes, I am

Dear Mr. Boyles:

Shortly after I last talked with you, our Executive Committee chose me to succeed Harold Fleming when he leaves the Council, which will be, unhappily, very soon. This time of transition is very demanding of time and attention, as you can imagine. I cannot accept a lecture engagement on May 5. I have accepted a couple invitations to speak during this period, but they are of the sort that don't require much preparation and I am fulfilling a Council obligation by substituting for Harold later this month at Tuskegee. What your occasion requires is an address prepared with considerable thought and preferably written, and I cannot at this time do it.

Mr. Leslie Dunbar
Southern Regional Council
5 Forsythe Street, NW
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Dunbar,

The rain check to the college workshop conflict is coming more rapidly than I had expected, and hope it will be possible for you to take it up.

Following a most successful conference last year on the New Agenda for the White Southerner (out of which the New Agenda pamphlet grew) requests have continued to come in suggesting that we hold another. We have scheduled a weekend workshop on the New Agenda for the Southerner for May 5-7.

We would like for you to do an opening speech on Friday evening, May 5, on "The Dynamics Creating a Fluid South" -- a discussion and survey of the emergent factors since 1960-the growth of the new alliances, the new administration, the sit-in movement, recent legal decisions, southern political developments, etc. In short, a background statement on the present melieu of the South within which any working agenda must develop. This opening speech will be followed on Saturday morning by four short speeches by an economist, a psychologist, a sociologist, and a political scientist discussing the "Impact of the Dynamics on Southern Institutions and Individuals".

The changes of staff here have resulted in this particular conference being planned at the last minute. I apologize, therefore, for the lateness with which this invitation comes. I do hope it will be possible for you to be with us. We feel that you are one of the few persons in the South qualified to do the kind of job we've outlined.

We will, of course, care for your travel and entertainment.

We hope to hear that you will be able to be with us.

Sincerely,

Charles H. Boyles

Professor Vivian Henderson
Department of Economics
Fisk University
Nashville, Tennessee

Dear Professor Henderson:

A mutual friend has suggested that you might possibly be interested in a position with the Council as Director of Research. Because I have recently been elected to succeed Harold Fleming, when he departs, as Executive Director, we need to appoint a person to this position.

I was the Council's first research director, in recent years, and have since February, 1959 found it an exciting and demanding spot. I do not believe that I have begun to exhaust the potential of the assignment. I have become steadily more convinced of the great advantage there would be in having a economist on our staff, and for this reason in addition to others I was most receptive when your name was suggested. I believe an economist could to more here than perhaps any other brand of social scientist.

As the job has developed, the principal functions have been:

1. to originate, plan, and edit the Council's publications, including the commissioning of researchers and writers;

2. to service the numerous persons who turn here for information and interpretation of events: this includes governmental agencies, scholars, newsmen, and a host of others;

3. to maintain liaison with academic and other researchers in the field;

4. to supervise the files.

In addition, there is under contemplation the transfer of the editorship of New South to the Director of Research. We are mindful, and indeed would welcome, the possibility that under a new man the job would have dimensions other than those which I have been able to give it.

My present research staff consists of a research assistant, a secretary who is also an administrative assistant, and a fulltime and an occasional part-time file clerk. Some strengthening may be in order.

If you believe you might be interested, would you give me a call, collect?

With best wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Courtney:

I am enclosing the latest data I have on South Carolina registration and you will see that it is for the 1958 re-registration; as I don't have to tell you, this event occurs i in South Carolina every ten years and so the figures have had the fat eleminated quite recently and should still, therefore, be fairly good. I would imagine that you could get the up-to-date figures from the Secretary of State, but maybe not.

Many thanks for your good and consoling words in your letter of March 31. Keep the tranquilizers but keep your sympathies open also.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Les:

Alice Spearman asked me to send you the enclosed list of names which was drawn up recently by the South Carolina advisory committee for the statewide research project. A number of these persons were listed as contacts who might have suggestions for research director, rather than as candidates for the position themselves.

We have been hearing some interesting rumors about you and, when the appropriate time comes, we would like to be in line to offer congratulations -- interspersed, possibly, with sympathy and a large batch of tranquilizers.

Sincerely yours,

From: Courtney Siceloff, Secretary

I have just received a call from Cornelius Cotter of the Commission on Civil Rights concerning the latest figures on registration and voting for Negro and white persons, preferably by county, in South Carolina. I am wondering if you have in your files information on this, or know where it could be obtained. If the information is not available for 1960 or 1961, do you have this information from the re-registration in 1958?

If you do not have information on this, do you know if the Secretary of State keeps an up-to-date registration and voting record by race and county and, if so, how such information might be obtained?

Best regards.

What has been your experience? What facts can you show us in regard to losses sustained, if any, and over what period of time? In short, if public eating places which opened up eventually regained their original volume, how long did that take? Dear Mrs. Durr:

Many thanks for your letter of April 11 and your warm congratulations.

I wish I could hear Mrs. Roosevelt also, as a matter of fact I am speaking at the same affair, but a day earlier and I doubt that I can stay over. I am also, incidentally, speaking at Miles College May 9. So I continue to get quick exposures to Alabama.

About Hardeman, I think we had better leave this one alone for the present. This opinion is strengthened by the fact that I know that Reporter magazine will be doing a piece on Montgomery in the near future. I expect this could be the most effective means of calling attention to any sins of commission the new administration may have made in Alabama. The writer's name is Barbara Morgan. She will be in Montgomery early in May. We have advised her to see you and Mr. Durr, and are also helping her with background. Incidentally, I think Judge Johnson was devilishly clever in ordering the local district attorney to represent the government in future civil rights litigation. This will put Mr. Hardeman squarely on the spot.

I have had an opportunity to convey the gist of your remarks about Maxwell Field to an appropriate government office.

The educational TV thing is a tough one. Frankly, I don't know what the situation is; but will find out.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I saw in the WASHINGTON POST where you had been elected to take Mr. Fleming's place and Isend you my congratulations. I never met Mr. Fleming, but I am sure you are sorry to see him go, and so am I, as I think he has done a fine job, but I am also delighted to see that you will take his place, as I have great confidence in you.

I wish you could get over to hear Mrs. Roosevelt at Tuskeggee on the 25th of April, when she is to speak at the John Andrew Clinic dinner. A good number of us from here and from Auburn are going and will be there.

I am sorry I did not have a chance to see you when I was in Atlanta at the WILPF meeting. There were three things I wanted to take up with you and I only took up one, which was the appointment of the Judges and the District Attornies. Ben Hardeman still has not been officially appointed and the FBI men have been investigating but I know of my personal and private knowledge that the FBI men who have been investigating him are the local men who are old friends of his and who served under him when he was the Assistant District Attorney, and he and they have made a huge joke of it and he has given them a list of names to call, all of whom have been instructed to say, if asked about his race views," I never heard him discuss it." But owing to pressure from Washington, I think from Frank Reeves, one did go and see Fred Gray, the Negro lawyer, who gave him his frank opinion of Hardeman, but he and I wonder if it will be in the final FBI report.

The second thing is the matter of the military installations here in the South, the power there is not being used to the extent it should by any means. Last Monday a week ago they had Chaplains Day at Maxwell Field and only invited the white ministers and left out the Negro ones, which is certainly not according to Federal policy, In fact, two of the Chaplains stayed away, B. C. Trent who is a Baptist and a member of the Council and the Catholic one, Father Carlin. Also the same thing happens continuously about the foreign officers sent here and who are often Jim Crowed if they are dark and if they are not themselves, they see it all the time. For instance, General White of the U. S. Air Force came here to speak at the annual dinner of the Chamber of Commerce, but the Negro officers were not allowed to go to the dinner although the foreign officers were and were introduced and made much of, but I know that the Negro officers were asked not to go. Mrs. Charlotte Lewis of Tuskegee whose son is an officer there told me so and she would tell you all about it, although she is afraid to tell the authorities for fear her son will get into trouble. But this goes on year after year and does us so much harm and I do think it could be stopped if an effort was made.

Thirdly, is the matter of the Educational TV systems in the various Southern states. We tried, as you will remember, to take this up with you at Mrs. Smith's but did not have time nor the proper privacy. Mr. Durr is convinced, after his long service on the FCC, that the Educational TV systems could be and would have to be integrated if the Negroes really made an effort. These systems exist by virtue of Federal grants (Mr. Durr knows this as he was the one who putup the fight to have thechannels for educational radio and TV set aside) and if the Negroes said to integrate the systems they would have to do it, so he believes. The whole procedure is segregated, even to the teachers, at least here in Alabama, and everywhere else that I am aware of, although the pictures and lessons are piped into the Negro schools, but the Negro children are given no teaching by Negro teachers and the whole business is entirely white.

I talked about this to Professor Horace Mann Bond of the Department of Education at Atlanta University when I was in Atlanta and also to Dr. Charles Gomillion of Tuskegee, and Dr. Gomillion said the matter was coming up at the meeting of the Board of Tuskegee this Spring. Dr. Bond is also very much interested in the possibility and I think this is a very fruitful field if it could be pushed.

As the SRC so rightly insists, the Federal government could change the whole pattern of segregation in the South if it would only use its powers, and certainly these two areas of the Military personnel and of the Educational TV systems would be less controversial than the immediate integration of the Federal services although tha could easily be done too if they really wanted to do so. But there is so much good talk and so little real action. I write to Harris Wofford who is the President's Assistant at the White House on Civil Rights but I don't hear anything. I hope you have better contacts that will respond. I still don't think the Federal government nor the liberal forces in the North understand how dangerous this situation down here could become, as it is the difference between what you are promised and what you get that makes the big disappointments and the Negroes have been promised an equal opportunity and an end to segregation and they are certainly disappointed. I really don't think the U. S. can stand the burden of segregation much longer, or we will end up like South Africa. Let me know what you think of these suggestions.

Sincerely yours,

Virginia Durr

Dear Mr. Fryer:

Harold has passed your letter of March 17 on to me, and so it happily falls to my lot to express our gratification regarding your new program at the University of Tennessee. So far as we know, Miami is the only southern university offering training for careers in intergroup relations. What you are planning is welcome and interesting indeed.

We are pleased that you think of SRC as a desirable spot for student training. The four specific points you raised I have talked over carefully with Paul Rilling, who, as our Field Director, would be probably the key figure here in any arrangements that might be worked out. We would answer your questions this way:

1) We definitely will be on the alert for programs which might be suitable for field work placement. I suggest you also communicate with Wilton Hartzler of the American Friends Service Committee (P.O. Box 1307) in High Point, N. C.

2) We will be on the lookout for graduates who might be likely candidates for the program.

3) We have no immediate ideas concerning sources of funds for training scholarships for the human relations field. You probably know that NAIRO is exploring the possibility of renewing its internship program and is seeking funds for this purpose.

4) We would be willing to talk further of the possibility of SRC as a field work location and, if we participated, might be able to manage some pay for a student during the field work period. This would seem possible, however, only if you would approve one of our professional staff members as the supervisor. I don't believe it would be feasible for such a student to be working with us with an outside social work supervisor involved.

Sorry, but we cannot do a think for Dick Taylor. We must have had six or seven very able students--undergraduate and graduate--apply for work this Summer; we have engaged two, and are afraid we already have over-committed ourselves.

Your New South subscription ought to be now straightened out; if there are any more slip-ups, please let us know.

Sincerely yours,

INTEROFFICE MEMO

Date 4/13/61

To: lwd From: pr

Subject: Gid Fryer letter

We are most interested in your ideas concerning special graduate training for the human relations field at the University of Tennessee. I believe that preparation for human relations work as a career would require some significant changes in the curriculum of the average school of social work, but that is another problem. At present, I believe that Miami is the only Southern university which is making any conscious effort whatsoever to provide training for human relations careers.

Concerning the four specific points you raised: [1) we definitely will be on the alert for programs which might be suitable for field work placement. ~~In the human relations area,~~ I suggest you also communicate with Wilton Hartzler of the American Friends Service Committee (P. O. Box 1307) in High Point, N. C. 2) We will be on the lookout for graduates who might be likely candidates for the program. 3). We have no immediate ideas concerning sources of funds for training scholarships for the human relations field. You probably know that NAIRO is exploring the possibility of ~~reactivating~~ its internship program and is seeking funds for this purpose. 4). We ~~believe we~~ would be willing ~~here~~ to talk further of the possibility of SRC as a field work location. We might be able to manage some pay for a student duringthe field work period. ~~I think~~ This would seem ~~be~~ possible, however, only if you would approve one of our professional staff members as the supervisor. I don't believe it would be feasible for such a student to be working with us with an outside social work supervisor involved.]

Mr. Harold Fleming, Executive Director

Dear Harold:

I am here on leave from the University of Tennessee School of Social Work for about a year's experience "in the field" before beginning a specialization in community organization at the U. T. School. We will train people for executive positions in the community fund and health and welfare council field, which is traditional for this specialization, and also we hope to get some people interested in training for the human relations council field.

I don't recall whether I discussed this with you, but I'm sure you agree that the University efforts in such training have left something to be desired. We feel that the techniques and skills used in community organization for social welfare are applicable to the human relations field and we hope to implement that idea, but some development is necessary. Briefly, the program goes like this within the two year masters program in social work: first year consists of general courses in understanding people and communities, methods of social work and two days a week field work in an agency such as public welfare, community center, clinic, etc.; at second year the student specializes in casework, group work, administration or community organization. They have full-time course work periods of six weeks each fall and spring, with a six months "block" of field work from mid-October to mid-April during which they are in an agency full time. In this way we can place students at various places outside of Nashville. We have used Family Service Society in Atlanta on this plan.

The program being within social work, we have certain standards to meet as to the personnel who can supervise the student's field work. Usually we require an experienced graduate social worker as supervisor. We would have this in Kay Jones in TCOHR. However, there has to be an ongoing, constructive program to which the student can relate. Needless to say, I see the SRC as the program which would be most valuable to a student training for the human relations field.

You come into this in four ways. Would you: (1) be on the alert for programs in the central South (Carolinas, Tenn., Ky., Ga., Ala., Miss., and Ark.) which might be suitable for field work placement; (2) refer to us any bright and promising people, with BA degree, whom you feel might be likely candidates for the program; (3) let me know of any leads for contacts to secure training scholarships for the human relations field; and (4) look at your own operation as a potential field work location, including the possibility that you might be able to pay a student during the field work period and what we could do about getting social work supervision.

I realize that this is a pretty big order for one with as much to do as you have, but if you had been at hand every time I've needed and wanted to discuss this with you, you would have been involved all along. I am counting on your counsel and assistance heavily in developing the human relations emphasis in this program.

While I have steam up, here is another, though not unrelated, matter. Here in this office we have a field work student from Bryn Mawr School of Social Work who is headed for the human relations field. This is his first year in the two-year graduate program. He is Dick Taylor, a native of Philadelphia (but with a pleasant accent), in his late 20's, tall, handsome and single. He has a rich and varied background. Graduate of Haverford College, where Ira Reid is; did a year of graduate work at each Yale Divinity and Cornell in Anthropology; ran work camps in Mexico for American Friends Service Committee for two years; and for the last two years was with Friends Suburban Housing, an agency doing residential placement of Negroes in this area. Part of the last position was as a NAIRO intern.

I have been acquainting him with the way things go in the South and recommending that he get some experience there. After reading about you in the New York Times recently he said, - OK, he was interested. Now, do you have a summer job or know of one? He will be one more year in School of Social Work, but I thought we might lure him South through the summer employment medium.

I watched the CBS Report "Crossroads Africa" last night and what with daily encouraging news like the UN votes, I'm feeling this is a good time to be alive. The NBC White Paper on the "sit-ins" was good too, but inside news from the South I'm short on. I can't even get a letter out of Will Campbell.

If you're in this area (Philadelphia), call me at the number on the letterhead or LO 6-7436 at home. I'm not even receiving New South, although an occasional contributor to SRC and a steady contributor to TCOHR. Please pass the card along to your subscription people for checking. If I must be billed, then bill me.

I may be through Atlanta next month; I'll call you if possible.

Sincerely,

Gid

Robert Michaelson, Professor and Administrative Director of the School of Religion at the University of Iowa, is preparing to go to India and would like background materials on desegregation developments in the South. Will you please send him your leadership series, the reports which you have prepared annually on school desegregation developments, your special reports on the sit-in movement and reprints of statements by southerners, such as "This I Believe" by Haywood N. Hill. Don't be afraid to send too much because I know Robert Michaelson will make good use of this material. He anticipates sharp questioning and would like to be able to give a fair picture of what has been happening since 1954. If there is any charge for any of these materials, please bill the American Friends Service Committee.

Dear Mrs. Hamilton:

From time to time we receive from you a bundle of newspaper clippings, and we always find items we would not be able to get from any other source. These add to our extensive files, and we want to thank you for your thoughtfulness and your faithfulness.

We do not, however, subscribe to the Chattanooga Times and clip it regularly. So you can at least save yourself the chore of clipping it for us.

You may be interested to know that we are considered to have one of the best collections of newspaper clippings, magazine articles, etc. on all aspects of race relations. Many authors, newspaper reporters, academic researchers, etc. visit us to use our files. It is, of course, with the assistance of people like yourself that it has been possible for us to accumulate this material. We value your cooperation highly, and hope that you will continue to help us.

We thank you again for your kindness in our behalf.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

Thank you very much for your two letters of April 11 and April 13.

You have given me much useful information in these two communications. I am delighted to have the material which you have forwarded.

Naturally there is still more information about the integration process in various Southern communities that I would like to have in my possession. I realize, however, that it is quite difficult to obtain accurate and up-to-date information from many different points on such a subject as this. Judging by our own experience here in Louisville, I realize that many businessmen and merchants do not like to talk about the exact condition of integration in their own business establishments. This makes it doubly difficult to get a full picture of what is happening in any single community.

I am delighted to know, however, that the Southern Regional Council is keeping up a file of material on this subject, which is as full of useful information as you have demonstrated to me. I am sure that all the material you have sent me will be useful in many ways.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mr. Bingham:

Notes regarding a few cities, comparable in some ways to Louisville, are set out below. I thought this might be helpful to you in regard to the questions in your letter of April 7. To the extent that we can, we shall be glad to look into any other specific questions or general areas you may suggest.

Richmond (Va.). All of the downtown variety and department stores have desegregated all of their eating facilities; some neighborhood drug and variety stores have done likewise. Richmond has two large department stores: Thalhimers and Miller & Rhoads. In both, rest rooms for customers and for employees are now desegregated. Some, but not extensive, demonstrating for theatre desegregation has occurred, but Negro endeavor is now represented by a suit in federal court for an injunction against segregated seating in the Mosque (city auditorium). At issue here is the constitutionality of a state law requiring segregation in places of public assembly. I understand that the baseball park (owned or leased--I am not sure which--by the N. Y. Yankees) will be made a co-defendent; my information is that this is being done at the instigation of the park which, even though it has already announced desegregation, would like its legal status clarified. Conferences with theatre owners have been held and apparently have not been discouraging to the Negro spokesmen. The Virginia Teachers Association (Negro) issued in February a list (enclosed) of stores throughout the state which have opened lunch counters; a revised list is supposed to be released in a couple weeks, and if it is I shall send a copy to you.

Austin (Texas). There is only one downtown department store--Scarborough's--and it closed its single eating facility rather than desegregate. A downtown drug store did also. Otherwise, variety and drug stores in downtown are desegregated. All stores at a large, outlying shopping center--Capital Plaze--are completely desegregated, including rest rooms; Montgomery Wards, e.g., opened a new store at the Plaza, non-segregated from the start. The municipal swimming pool operated last Summer in a contradictory manner: Negroes could not buy tickets, but the few who attempted were allowed to swim, thus doing for free what whites had to pay to do. There is a belief in Austin that this year tickets will be sold to Negroes. One wellknown but not large restaurant --Rome Inn--desegregated last Fall, and about a month ago re-segregated, claiming business loss. One large restaurant downtown has desegregated. In the University area, about half of the places which serve food have also, and this includes two "quality" restaurants. Austin has been the scene of intense pressure for theatre desegregation, and in fact a student group at the University has been the stimulus for much of the activity around the South, sending out circulars, including information about the ownership of theatres all over the region. Except for February 12, the students have concentrated on the two movies--Texas and Varsity--near the University, and have not demonstrated downtown. They are no longer standing in the box office lines, but are still picketing several days a week. They and their adult friends are also conferring with theatre owners, though they seem a bit despondent about progress; another conference is scheduled for April 14.

Nashville (Tenn.). All downtown department and variety stores are desegregated, and some drug stores as well. In at least one department store, rest room signs are down. The main effort of Negroes and their white supporters is directed now toward theatre desegregation. Nashville has four downtown movies, three of which are owned by one firm which also owns others in the vicinity. My understanding is that it has agreed to desegregation, on a controlled, (limited) initial basis, dependent on provision of what it regards as adequate police protection; perhaps, however, you will want to verify this yourself: it is, of course, information to be treated confidentially, for the present.

Knoxville (Tenn.). Considerable discussion with theatre managers has gone on, but there is no prospect of change. One "drive-in" movie in the area admits Negroes. There is one Negro movie, and Negroes are excluded altogether from the other six in town. The lunch counter situation is summarized in the column from the newsletter of the Knoxville Area Human Relations Council (enclosed).

Atlanta (Ga.). Desegregation of eating facilities in department and variety stores was agreed to by certain proprietors, effective not later than next Fall (see enclosed clipping); the long memorandum, also enclosed, was distributed at a Negro mass meeting on March 10; it had the silent approval of the principal white negotiators. "Other facilities" in the agreement is supposed to mean rest rooms. Some pressure is building up regarding theatres, but there have been no demonstrations yet, and hardly any talks. Some of the downtown movies will admit Negroes to special sections, but my impression is they do not go.

Room 201
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Constable:

I have been serving for the past several weeks on an emergency committee appointed by Mayor Hoblitzell of Louisville, to deal with a crisis that has arisen in our local integration situation. As I am sure you know, Louisville has had a fine reputation on this line because of the smoothness with which integration took place in our public facilities, including schools, public auditoriums, parks, golf courses and swimming pools. Late in February, however, a campaign began to promote integration in downtown business establishments, especially restaurants and motion picture theatres. A Negro buying strike against stores in the downtown area was instituted with the slogan, "Nothing new for Easter." The strike has now been extended under the new caption, "Nothing new for Derby." There also were demonstrations on downtown streets which resulted in a number of arrests.

Mayor Hoblitzell's committee began meeting in late February with a group of Negro leaders. Some progress has been made in the meanwhile, and we all hope that further advances are in the offing. One serious problem for all of us has been the difficulty of obtaining accurate and current information on the situation in other Southern communities in regard to integration of business establishments. Changes have occured in recent months, for instance, in Richmond, Nashville and Oklahoma City. It is quite a problem, however, to get exact pictures on where the integration process now stands. As an example, we might be informed that a certain moving picture theatre has been integrated. We would need to know, however, whether this is a downtown, first-run theatre; a neighborhood house; or an art theatre. We would also need to know whether Negroes who afe admitted are seated in segregated sections. I give this as one example of the kind of information which a conscientious citizens committee requires in order to do its job effectively.

I am writing to ask,how much current information is now available in the office of the Southern Regional Council, and how accessible it is to committees such as ours? I would further like to ask whether your organization has any plans for developing a service of this kind. I would appreciate any information you can give me.

Yours sincerely,

Barry Bingham

Dear Miss Shaughnessy:

Many thanks for your good letter of April 17. You will be interested to know that it brought the first news of the Rockefeller grant. After your letter was opened, Harold immediately put in a call to Dave Freeman, and got confirmation. Incidentally, Freeman was curious as to our informant on what he understood was still an unannounced decision; Harold was appropriately and characteristically close-mouthed.

The news was especially gratifying, coming as it happened on the day of a quarterly meeting of our Executive Committee.

Your efforts in our behelf with the labor unions are highly appreciated. This is support which, for a variety of reasons, we particularly like to have. Your lack of progress approximately equals ours. But this in no way diminishes our gratitude to you. I expect to be in New York sometime within the next two months: I hope that, when I am, it may be possible for me to see you to talk of this more.

We have entered your subscription to New South, and have also put you on a mailing list to receive other releases.

Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Dr. Dunbar:

I was delighted to learn that the Rockefeller Foundation grant came through. Congratulations! And congratulations as well on your recent appointment as Executive Director.

During my visit with you in Atlanta, I mentioned the possibility of getting some union support for the Council. So far nothing has developed - but I haven't given up hope yet. Meanwhile, I think I had better keep in touch with your work via New South, for which I enclose the two-dollar subscription fee.

Thank you once again for the literature you gave me during my Atlanta visit. It is being put to good use.

Sincerely yours,

Mina P. Shaughnessy

AN OPEN LETTER TO THE ATTORNEY GENERAL OF THE UNITED STATES ON INCREASED NEGRO PERSONNEL IN FEDERAL INVESTIGATIVE AGENCIES

HENRY BRAMWELL

ATTORNEY AND COUNSELLOR AT LAW

SLOCUM 6-3111

NINETY UTICA AVENUE
BROOKLYN 13, NEW YORK

April 24, 1961

Hon. Robert F. Kennedy
The Attorney General of the United States of America
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Sir:

I have recently resigned as an Assistant United States Attorney for the Eastern District of New York after serving in both Civil and Criminal Divisions for more than seven years.

This letter is written requesting that you use your good offices to obtain increased Negro Personnel in Federal Investigative Agencies as Investigators and/or Agents. May I respectfully submit the following proposals:

1) The hiring of qualified Negro Personnel in appreciable numbers in Federal Investigative Agencies, should be made established policy.
2) The Agencies should be urged to obtain Negro Personnel by recruiting qualified and dedicated individuals from Colleges throughout the country.
3) Federal Investigative Agencies should be urged to place qualified Negro Investigative Agents throughout the entire United States.

These recommendations are based on the following:

1) The need to provide equal opportunity for Negroes in Federal Investigative Agencies.
2) The present lack of an appreciable number of Negro Investigative Personnel in Federal Agencies.
3) The large number of Negro Defendants apprehended by Federal Investigative Agencies, might, with greater understanding be interrogated and handled by Negro Investigative Personnel.
4) The benefits to the Federal Agencies which will result from the hiring of skilled and qualified Negro Investigative Personnel.

The above information is based upon my experience as an Assistant United States Attorney, and an observation of the acute shortage of Negro Investigative Personnel. I trust that these recommendations may prove to be of value to you and your Administration.

Respectfully yours,

Henry Bramwell

Would you send a copy of "Racial Crisis and the Press" to Ed Guthman, office of the Attorney General, Department of Justice, Washington, D.C.?

I could use a dozen copies here as the demand continues, though slowly. Thanks very much.

I hope the tactics on the Prince Edward County case weren't advised in your executive department memo! That one has suspended a lot of good arguments for local option.

Dear Harold:

By way of this letter, and its copy, permit me to express my sincerest congratulations to both of you. While I recognize that Harold's leaving is a severe loss to the Southern Regional Council, I am more than gratified by the knowledge that his new position will cause him to live in Washington - a city much closer to mine and one which I visit with some degree of frequency.

I could go into all sorts of hackneyed phrases about "The Council's loss is the Institute's gain", but I'll spare you. Suffice it to say, I've enjoyed working with you, Harold, in your capacity as SRC's Director and I look forward to this ongoing pleasureful relationship in your new post.

I feel certain, Leslie, that I shall continue to work closely with the SRC and realize a continuation of a gratifying and productive spirit of cooperation.

Sincerely,

Dear ~~Dr. Dunbar:~~ Leslie:

Welcome to the distinguished list of people who have served as Executive Director of the Southern Regional Council, and its predecessor, the Interracial Commission!

Wilma and I, in our recent occasional writings about various aspects of the Southern scene, have found SRC one of the most useful and cooperative sources of accurate and detailed information on subjects of interest to us. As a member of the SRC board I have found it stimulating to work with the other board members and the staff. It has been a pleasure to make your acquaintance in the past, and we shall look forward to knowing you better in the future.

With all good wishes for success in your work at SRC,

Sincerely,

Just a note to congratulate you on your new position. I can't think of anyone better qualified to handle the job during these years of crisis.

Thank you for your suggestions in your recent letter about material for my November paper. I would very much appreciate your telling your successor in the research directorship to keep me on the mailing list for any material which I might use on the present Administration and desegregation.

With every best wish for success in the new job.

Dear Professor Einaudi:

I was glad as always to hear from you. It was very kind of you to wire congratulations. The South right now is an interesting place to be and the Council is an interesting spot in which to work.

I recently was asked to do an article for Il Ponte to which possibly you subscribe. I hope it comes out fairly well in translation though I will not be able to judge.

Before inauguration, we did an analysis of executive powers that could be used to strengthen civil rights and submitted it to the new Administration, later releasing it to the press. Perhaps you would like to look over it sometime; I am enclosing a copy.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

May I congratulate you on your appointment as executive director of Southern Regional Council. It has been my pleasure to know both George Mitchell and Harold Fleming, and so I'm aware of the size of the shoes you have to fill.

I plan to be in Atlanta the first few days of next week, and already have written Harold to say that I would like to see him while I am there. I trust that I shall have the opportunity to see you, too.

I am interested in discussing with you any ideas you might have about the job that Southern Education Reporting Service is doing, or should be doing. Since our work overlaps to a certain extent, I have wondered whether there is any way in which we should establish closer relationships.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I am delighted to congratulate you on your recent appointment as Executive Director and I wish you much gratification from your service during the years to come. I cannot resist the impulse to suggest that your new duties bring you even more into the orbit of NAIRO's activity. May we look forward to welcoming you soon as a new member?

Your request for suggestions of candidates to replace you as Director of Research brings one name quickly to mind: Dr. Robert B. Johnson, Department of Sociology and Anthropology, Antioch College, Yellow Springs, Ohio. I am sure that I do not need to tell you anything about Bob, and I have reason to believe that he fits your qualifications rather well. An outside possibility might be Dr. James Kirk of the Department of Sociology at Loyola University of Los Angeles, but I am not sure that he is of Southern origin. He would meet your other qualifications. A third name would be that of Dr. Charlotte Epstein, late of the Greenfield Center for Human Relations, who may still be reached at that address: Greenfield Center for Human Relations, University of Pennsylvania, 3439 Woodland Avenue, Philadelphia 4, Pennsylvania.

I had hoped to get to Atlanta in April, but fear now that my visit must be postponed until May or even June. I look forward to seeing you when I do get there and I again congratulate you on the new challenge.

Best wishes.

Dear Leslie:

The press release announcing your appointment as executive director of the Southern Regional Council has just arrived: this result is the nicest thing I could think of for everyone involved.

And I meant every word of it when I told you in Atlanta that I believe organizations like the Council do need occasional turn-overs in top management. This is a matter, some years from now, you'll have to bear in mind when you're asked to come somewhere else and turn things over a bit.

Meanwhile, though, I'm excited as can be for the Council that you've become the man in charge, with opportunities to do some turning over within the organization on your own account.

Dear Mr. Hyman:

We are forwarding several publications to you (under separate cover) which relate to desegregation of public and private facilities in the South. We are not able to provide copies of the many laws pertaining to the areas you mention; however, a very good source for the complete texts of these laws (or, rather, those laws passed during the last six years) should be available to you in the public library: Race Relations Law Reporter, published quarterly by Vanderbilt University School of Law. "Race Relations and American Law," by Jack Greenberg (Columbia University Press, 1959) is another excellent source; it provides background and an overview of the entire area, and its appendices capsulize major legislation. A third source is "States' Laws on Race and Color," by Pauli Murray (published by the Women's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Church, Cincinnati, in 1950) and its supplement (published: 1955).

We hope our materials will be of some help to you in your research.

Thanks for your letter of April 10 answering my questions about the UNIVERSity of Georgia. I'll follow the leads you gave me.

All goes well here. I have been definitely given the assignment to do THE GIANT GOLDEN BOOK OF HORSES. That takes some of the financial anxiety out of our lives. Ginny has heard nothing more from the government abo8t teaching in Iran. We had a wonderful vacation with Kit. We were sorry to see him go. Dear Miss Wilbur:

We have not put out anything in pamphlet form on your subject, Racial Awareness Among Children. I am enclosing a small pamphlet, of which we happen to have an extra copy, put out by the Public Affairs Committee, Fear and Prejudice, by Selma Hirsh.

I would suggest that you try to find one or more of the following books in your local library:

Clark, Kenneth B., Prejudice and Your Child. Boston: Beacon Press, 1955. Deals with ways children learn about race and the harmful effects of prejudice on children of both races.

Frazier, E. Franklin. Negro Youth at the Crossways. Washington, D.C., American Council on Education, 1940. Study of the dilemmas and problems facing Negro youths who grow up in the middle, or border, states. The influences of various social and community factors are discussed as they affect the feelings and attitudes of the youths toward themselves as Negroes.

Goodman, Mary Ellen. Race Awareness in Young Children. Cambridge, Addison-Wesley Press, 1952. Study of the emergence of racial awareness, identification, and bias in four-year-olds at an interracial nursery.

Gentlemen:

I am writing to secure information on the purpose and activities of your organization. If you should have pamphlets or other material dealing with this subject, I would appreciate your sending them to me.

I first took notice of your organization in a pamphlet, "Changing Patterns in the New South." If this pamphlet is still available, I would like a copy.

I am a Protestant clergyman, and honestly desire that my sympathy for the cause of social justice and equality be intelligent and informed. I hope that your organization may have something to offer me.

Dear Father Foley:

For publication in New South, we are attempting a brief survey connected with the employment of Negro city bus drivers. We have written to the Superintendent of transit companies in Nashville, Tampa, Mobile, Jacksonville, and Kansas City, Mo. (those cities we know to have begun employing Negroes as drivers during the past year); thus far we have received no reply from Mobile.

At this point, we believe a personal call or telephone call by a local resident might be the only way to obtain an answer. We would be grateful if you, acting in your capacity as Chairman of the Alabama Council, would contact the supervisor (or some other authority) of the local bus company and ask him directly for his observations. The specific questions we would like answered are outlined in the attached copy of our earlier inquiry.

If adequate answers can be obtained, we feel that the published survey will be sure to provide useful persuasive material for use in other cities. Thank you very much for your help.

SUBJECT: The Southern Negro Voter in the 1960 Presidential Election.

I am presently collecting information on the above topic for a graduate course in Southern Politics at the University of Alabama. I would appreciate any information, statistics, or comment you might have. I would also be interested in your suggestions concerning any further contacts I might make.

I am especially interested in the following: (in each of the 11 Southern states)

1. Did the vote go to Kennedy or Nixon? What percentage to each?

2. Registration of voters statistics. How many of those registered actually vote?

I would a preciate any help you might be able to give me.

To whom it may concern :

I came to America as a Barbour Scholar of the University of Michigan in September,1958, after finishing my master's course at the Political Science Department of Doshisha University in Kyoto,Japan. I have been continuing my graduate work at the Political Science Department of the University of Michigan since February of 1959, with keen interest in American democracy, how it works in the American political system, in what are the motive power and the characteristic of American democracy and also in what direction it will take in its future development.

Now I have come to desire in earnest to have the chance to observe and contact with real political movement in American society in order to further deepen and broaden my knowledge on American politics which I have gained through the study at the University of Michigan these past two years.

Especially I am deeply interested in observing and researching the actual operation of the existing and potential political parties in the deep south in connection with social conflict between segregation and integration,especially in Atlanta, Georgia.

I believe,throughout this research, I can observe not only one of most distinguishing nature of American political party system which is considered as the function of harmonious adjustment and integration, but also the very key point to know the future development of Ameirca democracy.

Another reason for this move is to place me in better position to properly translate the book of " Black Bourgeoisie " into the Japanese language, also to learn first handed of their non- violent manner of resistance which we Japanese have much to learn. The auther of the book,Dr. E.F. Frazier who is professor and chairman of the Sociology Dept. of Howard University , and the publisher have granted me permission to make this translation with thought that itwill give the Japanese people a vivid understanding of the problems the American are facing in this struggle for integration.

I would be very grateful to you if you could give me any kind of assistance and advice to encourage and help this plan.

MR. LESLIE DUNBAR

DEAR MR. DUNBAR:

CHRISTIANITY AND CRISIS, AS OUR SUB-TITLE INDICATES, IS A CHRISTIAN JOURNAL OF OPINION. FOUNDED BY REINHOLD NIEBUHR TWENTY YEARS AGO TO PROTEST SIMPLE CHRISTIAN PERFECTIONISM AND UTOPIANISM, AND WITH THE AVOWED AIM OF GETTING THE UNITED STATES INTO THE WAR AGAINST THE NAZIS, WE HAVE, AS THE YEARS PROGRESSED, MORE AND MORE ATTEMPTED TO CARRY ON A DIALECTIC BETWEEN CHRISTIAN FAITH AND CULTURE IN ALL ITS DIMENSIONS. ONE OF OUR CENTRAL CONCERNS THROUGHOUT THESE YEARS HAS BEEN RACE RELATIONS.

I WAS SPEAKING THE OTHER EVENING WITH A MEMBER OF OUR EDITORIAL BOARD, KENNETH THOMPSON OF THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION. HE TOLD ME THAT HE HAD BEEN READING AN ARTICLE OF YOURS, "THE ANNEALING*," WHICH HAD APPEARED IN AN ITALIAN MAGAZINE. HE SUGGESTED THAT I WRITE AND ASK YOU IF WE MIGHT HAVE THIS ARTICLE FOR PUBLICATION IN OUR JOURNAL SINCE IT HAS NOT APPEARED PREVIOUSLY IN THIS COUNTRY.

OUR OPERATION HERE, LIKE YOURS, IS A NON-PROFIT ONE AND I REGRET THAT WE ARE UNABLE TO OFFER AN HONORARIUM TO AUTHORS. HOWEVER, WE BELIEVE WE HAVE A UNIQUE AND SIGNIFICANT ROLE TO PLAY IN PROTESTANT JOURNALISM, AND WE HOPE THAT IT WILL BE POSSIBLE FOR US TO USE YOUR ARTICLE.

WITH BEST WISHES FOR YOUR MOST IMPORTANT WORK AND CONGRATULATIONS ON YOUR NEW POST.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I have completed the honors thesis which I mentioned in our correspondence this time last year. Entitled "Beale Street Politics," it is a 227 page study of Negro politics in my home town, Memphis, Tennessee. The study is based on newspaper clippings from both white and Negro papers, a mail survey of Memphis voters, voting and registration statistics, extensive personal interviewing, and what literature is now available (including your two excellant booklets).

A feeling which I share with the professors here who have read my thesis is that it contains much data which should be made available "to the profession." Remembering that you mentioned in one of your letters that you planned to do further work in the field, I thought that you might be interested in reading the thesis. I could send you a copy which will be free sometime within the next month. If you would like to read it, I would appreciate your considering its possible publication (in whole, in part, or in revision) by the Southern Regional Council or some other agency which you might suggest.

Thank you again for your continued help and interest.

The Street and Drainage Division spent 642 hours "topping, trimming and removing trees", removed 114 tree stumps, spent 825 hours "patching holes with asphalt" while using 27½ tons of asphalt, spent 412 hours "repairing curbs gutters and sidewalks" and used 33 bags of cement and 1,350 brick while constructing 88 new street name signs.

4. Memo from Chief of Police "... protection shield has been installed in new Plymouth...fits nicely...we invite Council to see it...will be of great protection to police officers when transporting prisoners."

5. Yesterday, the 27th, Police School ended...subjects stressed included "How to Prepare a Case for Court" and"How to Testify in Court". Appreciation is extended to the FBI for its assistance. Agent Corbett acted as instructor.

6. Al Burnett "brought in" Well #18 on Gulley Branch...says it is a real "Lulu". Mr. Leggette will be here from New York next Wednesday and Thursday to discuss further details.

7. Bad news from the Ballard Street Well. Through no fault of city equipment (so far as we can tell) the electric controls burned up along with a motor the first of this week...Mr. Pope busily worked with the power company and the G.E. people ...thinks it will be back in operation by this week end...also trying to get it repaired at no cost to the city.

8. While at the Municipal Management Institute last week at the University of Georgia I made notes of various subjects under discussion which might be of interest to you. I have attached such notes to this memo in case you would like to review them. Any questions which might arise in your mind will be more than welcome.

IMPROVING MANAGEMENT THRU BETTER ACCOUNTING & AUDITING -- by M. Ellis King, C. P. A.
Atlanta, Georgia

1. Use Accountants for:

   (a) Bond Issues -- Most manager cities use for this.
   (b) Insurance)
   (c) Fidelity Bonds) Most manager cities do without.
   (d) Budget Preparation)

2. Several cities here entered into "centralized" accounting.

3. External Audits (Use Persons Outside City Government) -- by Fred Gantt, C. P. A.
Cola, South Carolina

   (a) Tends to discourage thefts.
   (b) Proves to public city's attempt at efficient organization without bias.
   (c) Rotate every 4-5 years.

4. From a Finance Director's Viewpoint -- by Carl Derrick, Chief Finance Director
Cola, South Carolina

   (a) Freedom from politics necessary to do proper job.
   (b) A realistic business approach to city government.
   (c) Gives strict study and adherence to budget appropriations.
   (d) Effective control of expenditures.
   (e) Invest surplus funds.

PURCHASING -- by Ernest J. Brewer, Purchasing Agent, Atlanta, Georgia
Forrest Gee, Assistant Purchasing Agent, Atlanta, Georgia

1. Feel free at any time to write for specs, forms, etc.

2. Atlanta gets sealed bids $300 up to $1,000 -- award by Purchasing Agent. $1,000 up -- Purchasing Committee awards.

3. Emergency Orders -- Use "Pick Up Order" -- prenumbered vendor HAS to call Purchasing Agent and get data for purchase order.

4. Atlanta uses Annual Contract for 79 items which greatly simplifies bidding procedure.

5. Atlanta uses recaps on all but emergency vehicles.

6. Complete Tire record by an employee -- each tire is numbered.

7. "Cooperative purchasing" is best thing that's happened to city purchasing to conserve tax dollar.

   NOTE: (In Florence this might include City Schools, County, City, University library.)

8. Always use state contract to save $. Sometimes local "situation" makes this difficult.

9. Service and parts availability very important to cities when buying equipment.

10. Waxes -- write for types used in Atlanta.

11. Atlanta purchases 195,500 aspirin tablets, 50 gallons Cod Liver Oil. (NOTE: How 'bout that?)

NOTE: Was glad to learn that we follow many practices that Atlanta bragged on as being good ones.

INTRA-CITY PUBLIC RELATIONS

(Between Departments & City Employees)

1. Try to make sure:

   (a) Responsibility & Authority (R & A) are clearly spelled out.
   (b) That once you DO pass the ball to someone else, DON'T GRAB IT BACK!
   (c) To improve your communications --up↑ down↓.
   - Two-way street.
   - More listening on your part.
   - Give and take with you taking the lead.

   (d) That you give more credit and appreciation (C & A) for EFFORT and GOOD JOBS DONE.

   (e) To make allowances for the "human element".

   (f) To remember that MAYBE other people are not always so dedicated to public business as you are. This is naturally a hard thing to do.

* * * * * *

NEW TRENDS

- "The mind can absorb only as much as the seat can endure." -- Robert Spear, Assistant Director, Sanitation Department Atlanta, Georgia

The meeting adjourned.

- Atlanta "is guinea pig for garbage units" and can "give data on most any kind of body that is worthwhile".
- "Business organizations are steadily 'going over' to machines in office responsibilities to avoid replacing personnel.....PROGRESSIVE CITIES are fast catching on and following suit." (Mr. Gibson - IBM)
- "Such machines reduce time to get info to those who need it" and
- "Reduce paper work -- thus reducing errors." (Such as this! Did you get this far?)
- Feasibility study (1st step) by qualified personnel to work up and install equipment.
- Project automation over 6-10 years (not 6-10 months) to be realistic.

-TENSIONS-

Mr. Crandall
Institute of Law and Government
University of Georgia

I.

Little Rock -- Planned well.
Chattanooga -- Almost planned too late, but solved "problem".
Montgomery -- Planned too late -- "problem" only put off awhile longer.

II.

Savannah, Georgia (City Manager John Hall)
-Put one man in over-all charge.
-Training and organization.
-Department must have respect of white and negro.
Q: (Do you feel you have it?)
-Attitudes bear on the problems.
-Low salary scales attract "rural attitude" type personnel.
-Willingness to plan ahead but to act speedily to prevent trouble.
-Avoid loitering and congregating.
-Constant contact by council with negro leaders.
-Don't arrest sit-inners except on complaint of owner.
-Discourage mass arrests.
-Show force but slow to use force.
-Separate mobs and disperse -- but go slow on arrests.
-Avoid making martyrs out of people.
-Make use of public address systems to talk to mobs.
-"Well-placed statements" by mayor or manager..
-Back the Police Department while enforcing fair and impartial law.

III.

Rock Hill, South Carolina (City Manager Bill Kennedy)
-Instruct police in what the "law was".
-Used Attorney General and City Attorney -- (Bar Association)
-Met with Police Department and decided on program of approach.
-Hoped to avoid mass arrests but couldn't.
-Talked with local press who soft pedaled -- out-of-town played it up.
-Both groups have better understanding of role of police because of "fairness of police" in arresting both white and negro.
-Bi-racial council not effective in Rock Hill. Didn't perform a real function and it gradually died for lack of interest before tensions hit (for which it was originally set up).
-Mayor refuses to set up new Council but maintains open door for those interested.
-Learned a lot in past 15 months, but it sure causes lots of ulcers.
-Strong Mayor played STRONG role in such cases.

IV.

Orangeburg, South Carolina (City Manager A. T. Brown)
-The more I explain it to you the less you understand it.
-STRONG policy is necessary to be established by Council.
-Manager implements policy.
-Clearly outline to department heads and delineate scope of authority.
-FBI trained chief TREMENDOUS help.

Orangeburg, South Carolina (Continued)
-Planned in advance to know in advance.
-"Forewarned is forearmed" was trueism.
-1924 ordinance denied demonstrations without permit from mayor--applied to mayor--refused--did any way.
-Didn't want to "mass arrest" but demonstrators "asked for it" and we couldn't deny their "right to be arrested".

V.

Sumter, South Carolina (City Manager Wade Kolb)
-Manager's role is in prior planning.
-Profit by experience of other cities.
-Local ordinances vs. individual rights must be decided by COUNCIL.
-Keep council informed daily of plans of action.
-Get council to agree IN ADVANCE as to who will take control.
-Include county officials (city and county attorney's) in planning.
-Inform individual police and fire chiefs as to their duty in case.
-As long as sit-in is peaceful and owner doesn't protest, "we don't make arrests" -- but if we are asked to arrest, we enforce law and arrest.
-Publicity seems to be desire of demonstrators.
-Get public address system for chief's car (or portable).
-Local news played up big at first but city asked their cooperation and when they got it demonstrations shut down in proportion to news

SUMMARY TO TENSIONS

1. ADVANCE PLANNING is KEY to easing tensions.

2. The better the planning, the easier tensions can be controlled.

NOTE: I have discussed the above "TENSIONS" with Chief Adams and have gone over these notes very carefully with him. He is now considering an individual to place in over-all charge of this matter to make plans so that Florence will be ready -- when and if.

Oh yeah -- Don Wray, City Manager of Beaufort, South Carolina, became interested in total time spent during official sessions at the Institute and came up with:

Class Sessions (listening) (78.40%) 17 hours 15 minutes
Coffee Breaks (4.5%) 1 hour

Room 1003
The United Nationa
New York, N. Y.

Dear Dr. Graham:

I write to ask your participation in a venture by the Council. Some time ago Mr. Dabbs and I began discussion the desirability of the Council's making some contribution to the public discussion of the Civil War Centennial. Not all of us are happy over the Centennial plans, and many more are unhappy about the way the Centennial is progressing. Nevertheless, we have it with us, now and for the next several years. It was our thought that SRC, as a body of liberal Southerners, ought not let the point of view of the South be expressed solely from the usual quarter, and had a responsibility to make some effort to influence the manner in which the Civil War would now be re-thought and re-discussed. At the same time, we have no wish to argue the War, but rather to use the occasion of the Centennial to raise questions about the present situation and direction of the South.

Bell Wiley joined our discussion, and later the idea was ~~even~~ fully discussed with the SRC Executive Committee. The resulting plan is for a symposium, to be published as a pamphlet, which will take the form of an exchange of letters between Mr. Dabbs, as President of SRC, and five or six Board members. The Executive Committee discussed and left open the additional possibility that it might preface the letters with a corporate statement.

I am asking you to be one of the persons who contributes. Paul Green, Benjamin Mays, and Marion Wright have agreed to do so, and invitations will be going to two or three others. Mr. Dabbs has already drafted his introductory letter. It is, I think, a beautiful statement, which begins by raising the question of whether the Civil War should be regarded as an epic or a tragic event, indicates his belief that only if we can see it as the latter can we hope to build a true community on a bi-racial foundation, and there invites response. The letter is so constructed that the symposijm participants will find plenty of freedom for stating their own interests and concerns. Each reply might run anywhere from 1,200 - 2,000 words.

I hope you will feel that you can do this. If so, the Dabbs letter will be got to you as soon as it is in final shape. We are aiming toward a publishing date around mid-summer.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Gaston:

The best flight I can get into Charlottesville seems to be Piedmont #343, arriving from Washington at 5:46 P.M.; I'll take Eastern $514 from here to Washington, reaching there at 3:23 P.M., and wait over until 5:00 P. M. for Piedmont.

This is cutting corners close to make your 6:00 dinner, but there appears to be no better arrangement possible. Perhaps you can have someone meet me at the Charlottesville airport and whisk me off to the meeting.

I have promised Dan Bowers that I'll be at his office in Richmond about noon on Friday, and will ride to Norfolk with him. Dan tells me that there is a good flight from Charlottesville to Richmond.

For a title: "The Tradition of Change." Honestly, I haven't had time to think much about what I'll say, but I have some inclinations that ought to fit under that title.

THE RACE PROBLEM IN THE USA: SPECIAL DOUBLE ISSUE

THE MORAL, SOCIAL AND POLITICAL ASPECTS OF RACE RELATIONS IN AMERICA WILL BE EXAMINED IN DEPTH IN THE MAY 29th DOUBLE ISSUE OF CHRISTIANITY AND CRISIS. THROUGH REPORTS AND ANALYSES, THIS SPECIAL ISSUE PRESENTS THE SHAPE OF THE PROBLEM TODAY AND SOME OF THE BEST CONTEMPORARY THINKING ON EFFECTIVE RESPONSES TO IT.

CONTENTS

"UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE FOR NEGROES," BY HAROLD C. FLEMING, EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE SOUTHERN REGIONAL COUNCIL.

"OUR CASTE-RIDDEN PROTESTANT CAMPUSES," BY THOMAS F. PETTIGREW, ASSISTANT PROFESSOR OF SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY, HARVARD UNIVERSITY.

"RESIDENTIAL SEGREGATION: A MAJOR CONFRONTATION FOR THE CHURCHES," BY S. GARRY ONIKI, ASSOCIATE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR OF THE DEPARTMENT OF RACIAL AND CULTURAL RELATIONS OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF CHURCHES.

"PROBING THE ETHICS OF REALTORS," BY KENNETH UNDERWOOD, PROFESSOR OF SOCIAL ETHICS AND PUBLIC AFFAIRS AT WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY, AND ELDEN JACOBSON, EXECUTIVE SECRETARY OF THE WESLEYAN INSTITUTE OF ETHICS AND POLITICS.

THE BLACK MUSLIMS IN AMERICA, REVIEWED BY ROBERT W. SPIKE, GENERAL SECRETARY FOR PROGRAM OF THE CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

EDITORIAL BY ROGER L. SHINN, PROFESSOR OF CHRISTIAN ETHICS AT UNION THEOLOGICAL SEMINARY.

SPECIAL QUANTITY RATES

FOR STUDY GROUPS, CONFERENCES, BOARDS, INTERGROUP RELATIONS PERSONNEL, MINISTERS, ETC. 1-10 COPIES @ 35¢; 11-99 @ 20¢; 100 OR MORE @ 15¢. TO INSURE AVAILABILITY, ORDERS FOR 100 OR MORE SHOULD BE PLACED BY MAY 13.

HAROLD C. FLEMING DISCUSSES "UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE FOR NEGROES": ". . . WE HAVE NOT YET BEGUN TO MEASURE THE CORRUPTING INFLUENCE ON OUR WHOLE NATION OF THE CYNICAL DENIAL OF CITIZENSHIP RIGHTS TO NEGROES FOR SO MANY YEARS. SOUTHERN POLITICS. . . HAS BEEN CONTORTED INTO STRANGE AND UNDEMOCRATIC SHAPES IN THE NAME OF WHITE SUPREMACY. IN CONSEQUENCE, THE POLITICAL LIFE OF THE NATION ITSELF HAS BEEN CRIPPLED."

LOOKING FIRST AT THE "FRUITS OF DISENFRANCHISEMENT," MR. FLEMING DISCUSSES THE ONE-PARTY SYSTEM IN THE SOUTH, CONGRESSIONAL "BONDAGE TO BACKWARD LOOKING SOUTHERN OFFICEHOLDERS WHOM SHRUNKEN ELECTORATES RETURN AGAIN AND AGAIN TO POSITIONS OF POWER AND TENURE"; "OPPOSITION TO PROGRESSIVE MEASURES JUSTIFIED ON RACIAL GROUNDS"; AND THE "SMALL SHARE OF PUBLIC BENEFITS"ALLOTTED TO NEGROES.

WHILE "PROSPECTS FOR FULL ENFRANCHISEMENT ARE FAR FROM BRIGHT . . . THERE ARE POWERFUL FORCES -- ECONOMIC AND CULTURAL -- THAT ARE MAKING FOR GRADUAL CHANGE IN THE 'BLACK BELT' AND MORE RAPID PROGRESS IN THE LESS DIFFICULT PARTS OF THE SOUTH . . . . THE CHIEF REMAINING BARRIERS TO NEGRO SUFFRAGE WILL BE ELIMINATED WITHIN THE NEXT TEN YEARS."

THOMAS F. PETTIGREW SURVEYS "OUR CASTE-RIDDEN PROTESTANT CAMPUSES," WITH A STATE-BY-STATE REPORT ON 49 SOUTHERN COLLEGES. "IF YOU VISIT A SOUTHERN COLLEGE CAMPUS TODAY AND SEE BOTH NEGRO AND WHITE STUDENTS, THE CHANCES ARE THAT YOU ARE NOT AT A PROTESTANT INSTITUTION . . . . BY AND LARGE THE SITUATION IS NOT ONE OF CHURCH SCHOOLS MERELY REFLECTING THE RACIST NORMS OF THE CULTURE; RATHER, IT IS ONE OF THEIR ACTUALLY LAGGING BEHIND SECULAR SCHOOLS. IRONICALLY, MOST STATE UNIVERSITIES IN THE SOUTH ARE BEGINNING TO OFFER POSITIVE WITNESS TO CHRISTIAN TEACHINGS, WHILE PROTESTANT UNIVERSITIES CAN USUALLY OFFER ONLY NEGATIVE WITNESS TO THESE SAME TEACHINGS."

S. GARRY ONIKI VIEWS "RESIDENTIAL SEGREGATION: A MAJOR CONFRONTATION FOR THE CHURCHES": "ONE OF THE MAJOR ASPECTS OF THE STRUGGLE FOR HUMAN RIGHTS IN THE SIXTIES WILL BE THE ISSUE OF EQUALITY OF ACCESS TO HOUSING ON THE BASIS OF ABILITY TO PAY AND NOT ON THE BASIS OF RACE, RELIGION OR NATIONAL ORIGIN. TO BE AN INCLUSIVE FELLOWSHIP AND TO SERVE THE DEMANDS OF JUSTICE, THE CHURCHES WILL HAVE TO UNDERSTAND THE SCOPE AND SOCIAL CONSEQUENCES OF RESIDENTIAL SEGREGATION. THEY WILL BE FACED WITH THE PROBLEM OF IDENTIFYING AND COMBATTING FORCES THAT MAINTAIN SEGREGATION AND PROMOTING THE FORCES TENDING TOWARD DESEGREGATION. FORTUNATELY, THERE ALREADY EXISTS A SUBSTANTIAL BODY OF RESEARCH AND EXPERIENCE TO GUIDE THEIR THOUGHT AND ACTION AT MANY POINTS."

KENNETH UNDERWOOD AND ELDEN JACOBSON REPORT ON "PROBING THE ETHICS OF REALTORS": "HOW DOES THE LOCAL REALTOR SEE HIMSELF IN THE CONTEXT OF HOUSING RESTRICTIONS BASED ON RACE, RELIGION OR ETHNIC ATTACHMENT? WHAT DOES HE CONCEIVE HIS ROLE TO BE IN THIS AREA OF SOCIAL UNREST? WHAT OUGHT TO BE, WHAT IS HIS POTENTIAL ROLE AS A FORCE FOR CONSTRUCTIVE SOCIAL CHANGE? WHAT SOCIAL, ETHICAL AND THEOLOGICAL INSIGHTS CAN THE CHURCH AND UNIVERSITY HELP HIM BRING TO BEAR UPON HIS SITUATION?

RECENTLY, A GROUP OF THE FACULTY AT WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY'S PUBLIC AFFAIRS CENTER SOUGHT SOME ANSWERS TO THESE QUESTIONS. SEVERAL NEW ENGLAND REALTORS WERE INVITED TO PARTICIPATE IN A SMALL COLLOQUIUM OF PROPERTY LAWYERS, POLITICAL SCIENTISTS, ECONOMISTS, SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGISTS, SOCIAL ETHICISTS AND THEOLOGIANS. HERE, IN AN ATMOSPHERE OF FORTHRIGHTNESS AND MUTUAL CRITICISM, EACH SOUGHT TO BRING HIS PARTICULAR INSIGHTS TO BEAR UPON THE QUESTION OF DISCRIMINATION IN HOUSING AND THE PART EACH MAN PRESENT PLAYED IN IT."

* * * * *

ABOUT CHRISTIANITY AND CRISIS: FOR MORE THAN TWENTY YEARS THIS CHRISTIAN JOURNAL OF OPINION, PUBLISHED UNDER THE EDITORIAL GUIDANCE OF REINHOLD NIEBUHR, JOHN C. BENNETT, AND OTHER LEADING THEOLOGIANS AND LAYMEN, HAS ENJOYED A UNIQUE REPUTATION FOR WHAT SENATOR EUGENE J. MCCARTHY CALLS "ITS WILLINGNESS TO TAKE UP THOSE PROBLEMS IN WHICH IT IS MOST DIFFICULT TO DISTINGUISH RIGHT AND WRONG, TRUTH AND ERROR."

CHRISTIANITY AND CRISIS SEEKS TO APPLY THE INSIGHTS OF PROPHETIC FAITH AND THE DISCOVERIES OF SECULAR THOUGHT TO SUCH CRITICAL AREAS AS THE CONTROL OF NUCLEAR ENERGY, THE CRISIS IN AMERICAN EDUCATION, US RESPONSES TO THE NEW NATIONS, PROTESTANT -- ROMAN CATHOLIC TENSIONS AND NEGOTIATING WITH THE RUSSIANS.

NOW, WITH THIS SPECIAL RACE-RELATIONS ISSUE, THE JOURNAL BRINGS UP TO DATE THE ANALYSES OF TRENDS AND INTERPRETATIONS OF CHURCH AND CITIZEN RESPONSIBILITY FOR EFFECTIVE ACTION THAT IT HAS PRESENTED SEVERAL TIMES IN RECENT YEARS. BY BRINGING TOGETHER CLEAR-SIGHTED REPORTING OF FACTS AND COGENT THINKING ON A BROAD SCALE, THE JOURNAL AIMS TO FOCUS DISCUSSION AND SUGGEST ALTERNATIVE COURSES OF ACTION ON THE PART OF CONGREGATIONS, CIVIC GROUPS AND ALL WHO FEEL AN IMMEDIATE CONCERN FOR THE PLACE OF THE NEGRO IN AMERICAN SOCIETY.

Mr. Vernon A. Eagle
Executive Director
The New World Foundation
475 Riverside Drive
New York 27, New York

Dear Vernon:

We have read the "Prospectus for a Southern Sit-in Leaders Seminar," and can offer a few comments which, hopefully, may be helpful to you.

The objective of bringing sit-in leaders into serious reflection on their movement is first rate. I do not imply that they have acted or are acting thoughtlessly, but only that self-analysis is as necessary as it is hard during a hectic time, and there is a strong prima facie case, therefore, for a seminar directed toward such an end. The seminar ought, I should think, not become another pep meeting. The objective would be, as we understand it, quiet study and reflection: advisers, staff, lecturers, and site should be carefully chosen with this in mind.

(Parenthetically--and gratuitously--, I might observe that one hopeful outcome of the seminar would be an awareness of at least some of the mistakes and misstatements in the "Background" section of the Prospectus.)

In selecting the 15 student leaders, an effort should be made to get beyond the handful of persons who have to date received the most attention. The southern office of the National Student Association would be particularly well able to advise here.

There are a number of excellent people who could be involved either as advisers or lecturers. Some of them are:

Carl Holman, Professor of English, Clark College, and Editor, The Atlanta Inquirer, Atlanta

Kenneth Morland, Professor of Sociology, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg

Stephen Wright, President of Fisk University, Nashville

John Hope II, Race Relations Institute, Fisk University

Dear Eric:

James Moss has received a year's leave of absence from Union College to serve as our Director of Research. He will report near July 1st. Jim will have to take a month's leave of absence the month of September in order to deliver lectures on race relations at Salzburg, Austria. I am hopeful that you and he can meet sometime soon.

There is the possibility that Jim's stay with the Council will be prolonged beyond the year. I would like for you to know, however, that one factor which caused me to be interested in a temporary appointment was your statement that you might be interested next Spring in the position. I want you to know that I would not for a minute presume that this will be the case and I shall not importuen you again regarding it.

If, however, you are next Spring interested in discussing the matter with me, or would be interested before then, I am as close as your telephone--and as receptive.

Miss Audrey E. Wurch
Box 496
821 Temple Avenue
Knoxville 16, Tenn.

Dear Miss Wurch:

I've been away on vacation for the past ten days, and this has delayed a reply to your request for information. Because you are a friend of Andre Hammonds, I wanted to do an especially thorough job of suggesting materials for you to look into, since we do not have on hand material that goes as far back or is as detailed as you will need. I am sending you a few things, but they will not be very helpful.

If you would call at the local NAACP office in Knoxville, you might be able to borrow from them copies of The Crisis, the NAACP magazine since 1910. They should at least have on hand copies of the issues March through August-September, 1959. In each one of these issues you will find an article with references to the early beginnings of the NAACP, since this was during the 50th anniversary celebration.

The NAACP annual reports would be your very best source for material, since they yearly summarize activities of the NAACP in all areas. I am also listing some books which would be helpful. Some you may find at the local library; some can be found only at such places as Fisk University, Atlanta University, or the NAACP offices in New York or Atlanta. In the Journal of Negro Education, Fall 1959, Elliott M. Rudwick has an article "DuBois versus Garvey: Race Propagandists at War"; in the Spring 1960 issue of the same journal, Rudwick has another article, "Booker T. Washington's Relations with the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

One of the items being sent you is a reprint of an article by Chester Davis. Mrs. Ruby Hurley, of the regional NAACP office here tells me that there was some criticism of this and that the facts were not all carefully researched. So use it with care, and a critical eye. Mrs. Hurley said too that Langston Hughes is working on a complete history of the NAACP, but she does not know when it will be published. If you write to him he might have some suggestions as to resource materials.

These are the books which would be helpful to you:

John Hope Franklyn, From Slavery to Freedom
Walter White, A Man Called White, A Rising Wind (or any of his early books)
Dubois, From Dusk to Dawn
James Weldon (out of print), Along This Way - chapter on The Beginnings of the NAACP
Myrdall, An American Dilemma

If you want to follow through on references to early cases, to see how they finally came out, a good source would be Jack Greenberg's Race Relations and American Law. Some help on this point may be found in one of the things being sent, "A Chronology of Segregation Court Cases," in New South, October 1959.

If you are unable to get the copies of The Crisis mentioned, write to us again. We could copy the articles for you, but it would take some time.

Good luck. Give our regards to Andre.

As you probably know, SURVEY is the official magazine of the Presbyterian Church U.S., and circulates to some 230,000 homes largely in the 16 southern states. Some readers will have seen it, of course, in NEW SOUTH, but we think we might be able to reach others who would be willing to read what an elder and Presbyterian layman had to say to them on the subject.

At the request of your secretary, we are happy to provide you with information on the Southern Regional Council.

Enclosed is a brief description of the origins and aims of SRC and a current listing of Council Members. The Council is not a general membership organization therefore this is, in effect, the board of directors.

To give you some idea of our interests and methods we are also enclosing several of our recent publications.

For a number of years the Council has attempted to work responsibly in the complex area of Southern race relations. The great majority of this work is done quietly with public and private agencies where the particular skills and resources of the organization can be utilized.

Dr. Leslie W. Dunbar, the Executive Director, is out of the city. However, I am certain that I speak for him in offering any possible assistance.

Dear Miss Carper:

Paul Anthony, to whom you talked with by telephone yesterday, has asked that I reply to your request for information regarding the economic effects of sit-ins and boycotts. Good information is very difficult to get. Variety and department stores of course do not make public such data. The Federal Reserve Board does circulate a monthly index of department store sales in the larger cities of the country. We have found it impossible, as yet at any rate, to document from the indices the dollar effect of sit-ins, boycotts, or resumption of buying. The problem is, as you undoubtedly know, that throughout the period of the student protest, retail sales generally have lagged. We are enclosing copies of some news clips and also sending you some of our publications regarding the student protest movement. In each of them there is some reference to economic effects.

Most particularly, we would like to know:

(1) How many Negro drivers are presently employed by your company?

(2) Are they assigned to predominantly Negro runs? Are they restricted from any runs?

(3) What is your evaluation of the success of the program?

Any additional observations would, of course, be of interest.

Sincerely,

Mr. Joe Dennis, Jr.

Tuscaloosa, Alabama

Dear Mr. Dennis:

Thank you so very much for the clipping from your campus newspaper, The Crimson White, and the additional information in your letter. We had only meager reports as contained in the AP and UP press reports. Anyone doing research in this area will appreciate this local sentiment and information very much--and we have such people frequently. Our information files are available to students, professors, writers, journalist, etc. who are researching.

The editorial is indeed a good one, and especially to be published (and thought) in Alabama, where it takes real courage to express liberal ideas--or even to advocate fairness and moderation.

Gentlemen:

A local group called OASIS - Organizations Assisting Schools in September (its membership represents the various organizations concerned with preparing the community for orderly integration in Atlanta) is compiling a bibliography of resource materials for use with community leaders. Herbert Hill's earlier New Leader article, "Violence Checks Southern Industry Boom" (April 14, 1958), would be particularly useful persuasive material, if it is still available in reprint form. I would be grateful if you would let me know at your earliest convenience if you now have reprints of this piece, and at what price it could be purchased in quantity by OASIS.

Mrs. Will W. Griffin
City-wide Committee for Equal Services
4256 Holloway Drive
Knoxville 19, Tenn.

Dear Mrs. Griffin:

We have not made a survey on hospitals and health facilities in the South, and so the information we can send you is woefully incomplete and inadequate to your purpose. Such as it is, we hope you will find it of some help.

The North Carolina Advisory Committee to the Commission on Civil Rights has made a survey in North Carolina. It is to be published soon (it includes more than health); you might write to the chairman, McNeill Smith, and request a copy when it is available. In the meantime, I am sending you a thermafax copy of that committee's "outline" and the accompanying letter that went out to doctors requesting their cooperation. This may be of help in working our your own project.

The Atlanta Council on Human Relations has recently sent out letters to hospitals with questionnaires regarding their policies and practices. Not all hospitals replied, and a follow-up is in progress. When the results are tabulated I will send you a copy. I do know that Negro nurses train at St. Joseph's Hospital (Roman Catholic) and that the nurses serve as nurses to any patient who is admitted. The new DeKalb County Hospital has a ward for Negro patients and has Negro nurses for them.

I wonder if you know Mrs. John Hitch, director of the Knoxville Council on Human Relations? Her address is Box 1011, Knoxville. I believe she would be interested in this project and would be helpful both in the planning and the survey itself.

For background material, you might wish to read Dietrich C. Reitzes, Negroes and Medicine. It is a report of a survey on opportunities for Negroes in medicine, and the status of medical care for and by Negroes on the basis of a comparative analysis of 14 communities. Southern cities included are: Atlanta, Ga., New Orleans, La., Nashville, Tenn. The summary and conclusions are interesting. This does not include all the information you want in your own project, but it does give a fairly comprehensive idea of some factors and I believe you will find it helpful. If it is not in the public library, it probably would be in the university library. It was published in 1958 by Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Mass., and is $7.00.

We would be most interested in hearing the outcome of your survey, and if we can be of any further help please write again.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. McClung:

All of us here are so horrified and heartsick over the week-end events in Montgomery that it is difficult to concentrate on routine efforts to make some progress--but I guess the only way to have any sort of hopeful future is for all of us to just keep working at it in all the ways that we can. I sometimes wish I could just resign from the human race!

Enclosed is the material you requested on Negro police employment in the South. The latest, and most complete, is the article by Elliott M. Rudwich which was published in the Spring, 1961 issue of The Journal of Negro Education and which I mentioned to you. He has used our own material as background in reporting his own study, but I am sending you the statistical tables so that you can compare the past with the present. I hope this will be helpful. Dear Mr. Sideboard:

In response to your request of May 19 regarding information on Negro policemen and Negro firemen in Southern cities, I am enclosing some material which I hope will be helpful. Also, under separate cover, I am sending an old publication of ours, Changing Patterns in the New South, which contains an article written in 1947 on Negro police. The accompanying table gives statistical totals for the years 1945 to 1954.

The latest information we know about is the enclosed thermafax copy of an article by Elliott M. Rudwick in the Spring, 1961 issue of The Journal of Negro Education. It is fairly complete and includes most of the older material (which he obtained from us before beginning his own survey).

The information on Negro firemen is not as complete, but is all we have at this time. I'm also enclosing some information on Negro municipal employees.

If we can be of any further help, please write us again.

Dear Sirs:- Will you please send me your material "School Desegration: The first six years", also any other you have on your work

I am one who firmly believes that knowing facts on issues such as that of segregation, as individuals, we can speak a word here & a word there to those we contact, that will cause them to stop & think even though they may not, at the time agree. I find that attitude of a change taking place in the segregation issue, in the minds of many of the Southern Baptists people (rural) in this neighborhood. They are seeing desegration as something bound to come & that it is as right to be so, even, though most of them still have a feeling of wishing it didn't ~~that~~ have to be, they are getting over, even that feeling more & more.

I don't believe this can be forced, too rapidly, but, do want to help what I can in bringing it about by peaceful means.

Sincerely Yours
Mrs. G. D. Sullivan

If the statistical information on employment is the kind you had in mind, you may wish (when you are in Washington, D. C. on June 22) to get the complete booklet with additional information. You would ask for it by the following title: The Economic Situation of Negroes in the United States, U. S. Department of Labor publication, October 1960, Bulletin S.-3. Mr. Andre Hammonds suggested that I write to you for information concerning a graduate research project in which I am presently engaged. I am searching out information regarding the early years of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, from 1910 or before, through the 1930's. I am primarily interested in the organization as an historical force: its background, early organization, and activities. June 10th

Dear Mr. Dunbar,

I am writing to you on the recommendation of Miss Bonnie Stretch, who met you last year as she was travelling around the States with a group of foreign students.

I am an English student abroad and have been doing graduate work in Political Science during this past year, and now am making a trip, somewhat similar to that made by Bonnie Stretch, accompanied by an Italian, a German, a Japanese and an American.

The five of us will be arriving in Atlanta at about 7.00 pm, on June 12th and will have to leave about 8.00 am on June 14th. Alas this is a ridiculously short time in which to visit ~~[illegible]~~ somewhere as important and interesting as Atlanta, and yet we would very much like to learn as much as possible in our short time.

I have not been able to write to you in time for you to answer, but I was hoping that perhaps you would give us some advice about where we would go and what we would do, if we get in touch with you when we arrive in Atlanta.

Of course we realize that it would be laughably presumptuous to expect to understand the colour problem which faces America from our short trip, and yet we would all be happy if we could even begin to see some of the problems involved. That is why I am writing to you, both for myself and for my friends.

I am sorry I can give you no address in Atlanta ... but as yet we ~~don~~ do not have one.

I do hope that we shall be able to get in touch with you

Yours Sincerely
Judith Armitage.

Dear Mr. Oliver:

I had a chance to discuss with Taconic people your request to them for a grant to assist the work of the Inter-Citizens Committee. Frankly, the prospects do not look bright. I was assured, however, that your request would not be kept hanging much longer, that some action would be taken, and that you would get a reply.

I cannot promise anything at all, but I am interested in what you are doing and will be glad, however I can, to put in a good word. It would be helpful if you could send to me the financial statement of your first year's operation, an indication of the amount of money which you think you need to carry on, and the uses to which it would be put.

Could you send me another set of your stories? The reason I request this is that I have given away all our copies. I gave part of them to a high official of the Department of Justice and the remainder to a high official of the U. S. Commission on Civil Rights. Neither man had known about them, and both men are now reading them. In the long run I think this attention may be more valuable to you than money.

As I indicated yesterday, there is a very great need for assistance in the work we are seeking to do in the Inter- Citizens Committee, and we will greatly appreciate whatever assistance we may receive from you. If a financial statement of our first year's operation will be of any value, I will be glad to send it to you. Presently we are awaiting word from Morris Abram concerning our request for assistance in the form of a grant. I am also awaiting word from you on that.

Wishing you the best success in your new duties, I am

Mr. John W. Davis
Special Director

N.A.A.C.P. Legal Defense & Educational Fund
10 Columbus Circle
New York 19, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Davis:

Your letter of June 7 presents a big order, one that perhaps no one can adequately fill. Mrs. Albright send you a copy of a paper in which, last August, I made a few disconnected stabs at interpreting the student movement. Phylon will some day publish it, and I view that prospect with apprehension simply because the movement is so fluid and really so diverse that it is not a single movement but rather a series of operations connected by common ideals and symbols.

Certainly there is more than one cake of yeast at work, including what Adlai Stevenson calls the revolution of rising expectations. There are economic factors: an enlarged Negro middle class; the restlessness of people who realize that job opportunities under racial segregation don't equal their education; growth of Negro capital and income; etc. There are educational and psychological causes, such as the evident fact that Negro youth believe that the Western ethical and political principles taught them in schools should be observed in practice; and the disillusionment over the results to date of the 1954 school decisions. There are at the same time, the victories of the N.A.A.C.P. and others, which encourage students to seek other victories. There is also the appearance of new organizations, such as S.E.L.C. and C.O.R.E., which cross-fertilize and stimulate each other as well as the older agencies. There is the wind of African nationalism, blowing, I am sure, seeds of new self-respect and determination among African descendants here. There is the realization by Negroes of their present political importance, and a natural desire to get leverage from it. All this and, undoubtedly, more.

You ask, "To what end is all of it?" This I don't know in specifics, and won't speculate. But in general, the end of it will be an extension of democracy in America. My own main concern is the South, and somehow I am optimistic that out of this can come a South whose sense of community has been strengthened and which will be a pace-setter in world race relations.

There is on my desk an as-yet unread book titled Christian Ethics and the Sit-In, by Paul Ramsey (Association Press, N. Y., 1961). Perhaps this supplies some of the answers you seek.

It was a pleasure to sit on the platform and hear you address the Georgia Teachers & Education Association recently.

With best regards.

Since Leslie Dunbar, our executive director and former director of research is out of the office until next Wednesday, I am replying to your letter. Mr. Dunbar undoubtedly will wish to write you within the next week or ten days and will have more and better suggestions of reference material.

Under separate cover I am mailing a few things which may give you some helpful references or suggestions.

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I am wondering if you will help me to secure information which will treat the fundamental, psychological and basic issues involved in so called sit-in, wade-in, kneel-in, squat-in, and bus freedom rides which have been recently manifest in the south particularly and in other sections of the country as well. What underlies all of this? Has anyone treated fully the significance of this sort of thing in this country? What brought it about? To what end is all of it?

I am sure that you have on file references and perhaps documents which will relate to the questions herein presented. Please send me such documentary evidence and references as you may easily have at hand on this subject. I will appreciate your early attention to this matter.

Dear Mr. Richman:

We are enclosing a listing of cities in which some lunch counters have been desegregated since February, 1960. I am fairly sure the list is not complete, but it does represent all the places of which we know at the present. We are hopeful that later this Summer we may be able to release a more or less definitive recapitulation of the results of the sit-in movement.

Most of the places on the list are known to us to have desegregated and we have some supporting documentation in our own files. The remainder, however, have been taken from a list issued some months ago by the national offices of the variety stores. While having no reason to doubt them, we are not able to confirm them out of our files.

We are enclosing also several reports which we have done on the sit-ins. After reviewing this material, if you should have other questions we should be most happy to help with them.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Sirs:

In connection with a proposed amicus curiae brief in the lunch counter "sit-ins" cases before the Supreme Court of the United States, I am seeking factual information on the extent to which the "sit-ins" have resulted in peaceful elimination or reduction of racial barriers to use of the lunch counters in various Southern cities. Jack Greenberg of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund has suggested that I write to you as a source of such information. Citation to published statistics or other information would be preferable, but if published materials do not tell the whole story, I should appreciate the opportunity to see any unpublished reports or memoranda you could let me have.

Please bring me what you have

Sincerely yours,

Martin F. Richman

Dear Capt. Brown:

About the time you wrote, Harold Fleming was leaving the Council and I was stepping into his job. This is the only reason I can give you as an even partial excuse for the fact that somehow your letter got misplaced in the office shuffle. I am terribly sorry and apologetic.

We are enclosing one or two things which we have done on the student protest movement, which you apparently have not received.

Here are some tentative answers to your questions.

1) The cities which are having or seem likely to have law enforcement difficulties: New Orleans, Birmingham, Jacksonville, Tallahassee, Montgomery, Jackson; perhaps Pensacola.

2) Cities where the police are doing or are likely to do a good job: Atlanta, Dallas, Little Rock, Louisville, Lexington (Ky.), Nashville, Charlotte, Knoxville, Savannah (?), Rock Hill are some.

3) Cities in which a poor job is being done or is likely to be done: Birmingham, Montgomery, Jacksonville, New Orleans, Tallahassee are some.

I haven't answered question No. 4. I think it would depend pretty largely upon what kind of help were available and under what auspices.

Let me know if we can be of any further help to you.

Sincerely yours,

Leslie W. Dunbar

Dear Mr. Fleming:

It has been some time since our conversation at your office on the subject of a conference for police officers on the police problems and lessons in the desegregation issue. At that time I hoped for a conference in June or September of this year, but I find that the academic mills grind exceedingly slowly and now that the project has received definite approval, it is tentatively scheduled for next February.

The conference format that has been worked up is similar to that which we discussed but there is going to be an even more intensive effort to involve the participants, than I had originally anticipated. Their number is to be reduced to twenty-five; they are to be hand selected with a view to getting the optimum combination of experience, problem solution and carry-back; every effort will be made to, "Warm them up" before, and to raise them to a highly participative spirit during the meeting. It is anticipated that they will leave suffused with inspiration and ideas. Frankly I am most interested in seeing just how far this approach can be carried.

In the period since our meeting I have been ordered to Washington, D. C., for a three month training stint with the F.B.I. The stay is proving most rewarding, but until June 7, I shall be rather restricted in my movements. I hope, therefore, I may presume upon your courtesy for some advice and assistance, which would be most helpful.

First of all, I should appreciate any of your S.R.C. Reports on the Movement. During my visit I picked up S.R.C. 13 and S.R.C. 15 and I am sure that later reports will prove as informative as they were. Any fees involved will be promptly paid.

With all of these devious plans in mind I should appreciate your opinion on several points, I would welcome even your rough impressions and your answers, would, of course, be for my guidance. Answers to the following questions would be very helpful.

1. Which of the larger cities (approximately 50,000 population or over) are having or seem likely to have difficulties with desegregation issues?

2. In which cities do you feel that the police are doing, or are likely to do a good job in meeting these problems?

3. In which cities do you think a poor job is being done, or is likely to be done?

4. Are there any cities or areas where help would be particularly needed or accepted?

I am in Washington from Monday thru Thursday evenings, every week until early June; if you should be in town, I would be very happy if you could be my guest for dinner and a show.

I look forward to hearing from you,

Sincerely,

Bill Brown

Dear Mr. Dunbar:

I hope that you will excuse this long delay in replying in kind to your letter of April 28, 1961, with its useful information regarding voter registration. As you will understand, the Louisiana Hearing and preparation of the final report of the Commission have been keeping us hopping.

I am enclosing a photocopy of the news article published in the Birmingham News giving voter registration figures. We do not mind what use you make of these figures, inasmuch as they were published in the newspaper.

I am also enclosing a photocopy of the Virginia registration figures by race and by county. You may note that the breakdown does not check with the totals given at the bottom. The Commission has been informed that the county breakdown is more reliable than the totals given. There are no figures given for the independent city of Warwick, as this city has been absorbed into another surrounding city. I must also point out that these figures are official estimates only.

You will also find enclosed a thermofax copy of Dr. Aaron Henry's report concerning Negro registration figures for sixty-five out of eighty-two counties in Mississippi. The Negro population figures that he uses are not accurate when compared with the results of the recent census. The Commission would ask that you not publish any of the figures from Mississippi before the Commission's report is published in September.

Our statistical survey for Tennessee and Texas is not yet compiled, and I am unable at this time to give you any information on these States. As soon as they are complete, I will try to get them to you. We should appreciate having a copy of your Tennessee statistics on county totals.

We have made no appreciable headway in getting racial breakdowns for Georgia or South Carolina, and we would be glad to have any information that may have come your way for these states. We have total registration figures by county for each of these states. The Georgia Advisory Committee has been requested to obtain these figures for their state, but we have no results yet.

I hope that this information will be of value to you.

Dear Galen:

It was good to see you in Little Rock. As an old Reuther partisan myself, I thrilled every time you rushed to the defense of him and his knights of toil.

We are interested in your summer plans. I have some hope that late this Summer we may get out another report on the Student Protest Movement, concentrating pretty much on adding up the score and getting the facts straightened out. I really have little to suggest to you in the way of materials. The two things enclosed may be of some value (we helped subsidize the Westfeldt job). I am not quite clear what you mean by our report on the North Carolina sit-ins, inasmuch as we never did one. You probably are referring to the Margaret Price report, but in case you aren't I am enclosing that too. We do not have any interview schedules.

The teacher desegregation study is, if anything, even more interesting and I am glad to see that not only Lee Coleman but Willis Sutton is being put to work (I don't know Dr. Kaplin). I assume you are in touch with Dr. John W. Davis, Special Director, Teacher Information and Security, NAACP Legal Defense & Educational Fund, 10 Columbus Circle, New York 19). A couple of things have appeared in the Journals; you may want to look at:

The Journal of Negro Education, Vol. XXIX, Winter, 1960, No. 1, Daniel C. Thompson, "Problems of Faculty Morale," p. 37.

The Journal of Negro Education, same issue. Albert W. Spruill, "The Negro Teacher in the Process of Desegregation of Schools," p. 80.

Dear Les:

I think you will want to know about two types of field studies which the Commission is undertaking, and there is the possibility that you might be able to be of some help. I enclose an outline regarding them.

We have engaged an expert graduate student from the University of Kentucky to study and report on lunch counters. The Sociology Department at the University will assist in structuring and writing the study and report. We hope to interview managers of all the counters desegregated in Kentucky outside of Louisville, and a selected number in Louisville. We contemplate a printed report to be released publicly. Copies of the SRC Reports on the Texas cities and on North Carolina cities as well as the printed report of Lunch - Counter Desegregation in Winston Salem, North Carolina have been given to those at U. of K. who will be involved.

If you know of any other reports that they ought to have, please send them or tell me where I can obtain them. If by any chance you have any outlines suggesting methods used in the other studies or providing "schedules" of interview questions, please let us have those. We will have the outstanding assistance of Dr. Lee Coleman at the University of Kentucky, but we might benefit from the experience of others as well.

The other study will be of teacher desegregation in Kentucky, and will report on the results in thirteen districts, twenty-three schools and twenty-five teachers plus additional ones in Louisville where teacher desegregation has taken place. This study will be conducted by Dr. Lee Coleman, Dr. Willis Sutton and Dr. Joseph Kaplin of the University, and will also be printed and released.

If you have any suggestions please let us know.

Sincerely yours,

Galen

FIELD STUDIES FOR THE COMMISSION BY TRAINED SOCIAL SCIENTISTS

To provide the basic information which the Commission and the public needs, the services of social scientists might be used during the summer of 1961 to conduct interviews, make studies and prepare reports on certain areas of desegregation. As an example one or more persons might be asked to interview managers of desegregated lunch counters throughout the state and to assist in the preparation of a composite report. A summary report could be released publicly and the material could be used in the annual report of the Commission.

As background we know generally that at least some lunch counters are desegregated in:

Henderson	Paducah	Lexington
Ashland		Hopkinsville (1)
Owensboro	Louisville	Richmond (1)

Each of these cities should be visited, as well as others we will identify in the meantime by mail. Information learned there would be of considerable assistance in other places like Frankfort which have not desegregated. Such information should be written up in reports like those produced by the Southern Regional Council for several areas.

For Commission funds now available to be used, personal service contracts would need to be entered into during June to encumber the necessary money and permit payment to be made later but still well before the legal deadline of September 30.

While lunch counters are mentioned as the best example, such field studies might also include:

Teacher Desegregation

1960 Census Data Analysis
(No interviews)

~~Equal Employment Practices~~

~~Use of Negro police in Kentucky~~

THE COMMISSION NEEDS TO AUTHORIZE SUCH FIELD STUDIES GENERALLY AND PROCEDURES FOR OBTAINING AND CONTRACTING WITH PERSONS TO CONDUCT THEM.

Dear Sirs;

I noticed in the N. Y. Times on Wednesday, May 31, some excerpts from your special report on the Freedom Riders. I wonder if it would be possible to obtain the complete report?

We are distributors of pamphlets to libraries, and it is in this connection that I am interested in your report. We feel that this subject has generated great interest throughout the country, and that perhaps there would be some way that we could make your report available to our libraries.

Thank you for your interest in this matter.

Yours sincerely,

thank you for the Klan articles. they were very informative.

I will be home for some time perhaps and not at the University. I wondered if you would have my subscription changed to my home address, as given above. I did not realize until I came home that I had caused a mix up in your office. I found New South coming to my Bessemer address as well as to my Tuscaloosa one. I am very sorry, it was undoubtedly my mistake.

Please send my subscription only to my Bessemer address, this will definitely be the address I will use for perhaps the rest of this year. We may move from our present location in Bessemer to another location, but I will notify SRC in that case.

We may begin a study of Race Relations in a college group in my home church here in Bessemer, First Presbyterian. There seems to be a good deal of constructive interest in the subject for every side.

Thanks again,

Dear Sirs:

I have been asked, as a member of the Political Commission of the World Student Christian Federation, to try to pull together some of these materials which reflect what the American student Christian movements are thinking about the whole problem of "civil disobedience."

I have learned that very few of the national movements have standing study commissions, and I get the feeling that most local consideration of this whole area is taking place in terms of strategy rather than basic statements of purpose or philosophy.

I would appreciate very much receiving any statements which the Southern Regional Council has published within the last year dealing with this general area, i.e. civil disobedience as a strategy for effecting social change.

Any other resources you can recommend would certainly be appreciated.

Does the Council have a relatively complete list of Southern communities where sit-ins occurred? I ask this question because I am thinking of making a study that would be directed at the question whether communication between the whites and Negroes increased or decreased in the period following the sit-ins in comparison with a comparable period prior to the sit-ins.

Dear Mr. Taper:

I have just finished reading Part One of "Gomillion vs. Lightfoot" and congratulate you on your acute perception of our conflicts and blind spots. It is a moving and forthright account. Two years ago I spent two days in Tuskegee, meeting some of the same people you mentioned and speaking at the Tuskegee Civic Association (as a substitute for the speaker they wanted and expected!).

I particularly admire the way you let the registrar speak for himself, and your account of the quiet persistence of the Negroes waiting to register. But the most telling insight of all is that on page 74: "Listen, if there's such a thing as hate, there's gotta be hate for the white man in the South!" This is the real clincher. It lurks beneath the surface of all the citizens councils and klans; I've never heard it frankly expressed before.

To me it is a constant source ofwonder, admiration, and gratitude that so many Negroes I know do not hate white southerners. It is this spirit that will eventually enable us to build a better "way of life" in the South, and in the nation.

You see us so clearly, but with compassion. Thank you.

Dear Mrs. Drew:

I am sorry to be so late in replying to your letter of June 1. We had the information you requested for 1950, from the 1950 census, but knew that you wanted the 1960 figures. Upon inquiry to the Bureau of Census, Department of Commerce, in Washington, D. C., we learned today that the census tracts of the cities will not be published until late summer--possibly even September. The Justice Department should be able to get the information they wish, or most of it, from the figures now being tabulated by the Census Bureau. As I understand it, the only thing holding up publication is the information on employment characteristics. I am sorry that we cannot, at this time, supply you with the information you need.

Professor Denison,

Thanks for the candy; all of us enjoyed it. You know, there IS something to be said for payola--

Enclosed is one of the items you wanted; the others should be coming alone and I will send them as they arrive.

Incidentally, you probably heard about the article in THE NEW YORKER by Bernard Taper, "Gomillion vs. Lightfoot, Part 1" when you were in Montgomery. I think you will be interested especially in page 74: "Listen, if there's such a thing as hate, there's gotta be hate for the white man in the South!" I believe that this fear lurks beneath the surface of all the citizens councils and klans; I've never heard it expressed by one of them before. And the Muslims prove there is some hate; I think it quite remarkable and wonderful that there is actually so little.

Good luck with the dissertation.

Dear Mrs. Albright:

I just arrived at Purdue to find your letter waiting. The candy, in only a small way, expresses my warm appreciation for your kindness and assistance. My trip to the South would not have been successful if it hadn't been for the materials I was able to gather at the Atlanta office of the Southern Regional Council. You and your organization have won a friend from Kalamazoo.

My days in Birmingham and Montgomery were certainly interesting and enlightening. My obvious Northern accent was somewhat of a hinderance in Montgomery where many people have become hypersensative on the subject of integration. Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Durr were charming people, and helpful as you suggested they would be. I am sorry that I could not spend a few more days there.

I shall look up the article in THE NEW YORKER which you referred to. I, too, think that it is remarkable that there is so little hate. But I believe there is a chance that there will be a good deal unless we can keep the radical elements in check. I pray that we can keep hate in check because it burns with such rage and destruction once it gets a good start.

Thank you for the Perez manuscript. I will be expecting others as the days pass.

Now the writing begins. I have much work to do.

Thank you again for your assistance.

Sincerely,

Dear Mrs. Albright:

Thank you very much for the copies of Racial Violence and Law Enforcement you sent me.

Since I knew that the local Chief of Police has been strongly opposed to any kind of prejudice or discrimination in law enforcement, I sent him one of the copies with a note commenting that I thought his department had done a good job in dealing with those minor incidents in Lexington which have arisen out of sit in demonstrations here over the past two years.

My name has been on the mailing list to receive copies of the Police Department's lessons in socio-legal problems which are a part of in-service training for supervisory officers in the department. About two weeks after I had sent the pamphlet to Chief Hale, I received the two lessons which I have enclosed. As you will note, McMillan's pamphlet was quoted at great length.

I was gratified to see this use of the material and thought you would be interested and pleased to know about it.

Dear Mr. Fleming:

Inter American University, by its nature and location, is assuming a growing obligation to train students from underdeveloped areas of the world. We have in our student body students from Asia, Africa and Latin America. Our primary aim, however, is to provide young Puerto Ricans with the opportunity for advanced education. Enrollment now exceeds 3000 students and is rapidly increasing.

We are extremely anxious to provide our students with material on social problems and especially the broad area of racial and religious discrimination. Unfortunately our collection is very weak in this subject and the ambitious expansion program of the University has severely restricted the book budget of the Library.

If your organization maintains a library we would be very grateful for any duplicate or other unwanted material you can send us. We will be happy to pay the postage on all shipments. If the Council can supply us free copies of any of its own publications we also would be very pleased to receive them.

Thank you in advance for your assistance.

Dear Mrs. albright,

I am interested in obtaining of copy of the book written by Rev. Uriah J. Fields, Dr. Martin Luther King opponent during the Montgomery bus boycott. I believe the book is entitled the Unhappy Consequences of the Montgomery Bus Boycott. A friend of mine is reading several books I have on the subject, including Stride toward Freedom, and we were trying to locate Rev. Fields book also.

I have enjoyed several of SRC's special reports, including the Freedom Ride. are all of these reports announced in New South, or are they sent out to interested people from time to time, as they are published? they are excellent, and I would certainly enjoy reading every one as they come out during the year. tell me how this operates, if there is a mailing list I would certainly like to be on it, with or without charge.

thanks again.

HARVARD LESSON ON AFRICA

Distressed by their own ignorance about Africa, a group of Harvard and Radcliffe undergraduates who edit a student magazine called Cambridge 38 decided to close what they believed was also a gap in the knowledge of the Harvard community. The result is a fifty-six-page special issue of the magazine devoted to tropical Africa.

The editors departed from their policy of using articles for the most part written and photographed by students. Contributors to the special issue include G. Mennen Williams, Assistant Secretary of State for African Affairs, representatives from five African countries and an exiled journalist from South Africa. Student contributions included comments by Africans studying in this country and an analysis of the potential of the Peace Corps.

Copies of the African issue are available at thirty-five cents from Harvard Yearbook Publications, Inc., 52 Dunster Street, P. O. Box 2, Cambridge 38, Mass.

Dear Leslie Dunbar,

At the suggestion of Pam Coe, who asked me to give you her greetings, I am writing with regard to a special project that the American Friends Service Committee is holding later this summer. We will be holding a seminar in Poughkeepsie, New York, that will involve a group of 40 mature graduate students from a number of countries, with a special East-West emphasis. Of the 40 participants, 12 will be Americans and 12 will be Russian.

The focus for the seminar will be general questions on international relations, and will include special sessions on disarmament, international co-operation, economic development, and so on. We can be certain, however, that the discussions will range quite widely, and that one area that will arise continually will involve the whole question of civil rights in the U.S.

We are presently gathering up-to-date material on as many areas as possible that we can share with the American participants as preparation for the seminar. We are interested to know if you have current material on special race questions that we might be able to make available to the American participants. Information on sit-ins, progress in school desegregation, and other studies or research that have been made would be very useful. I understand that there may have been some recent research done on the sit-ins by Margaret Price. I have also been told of your "L-Papers", which apparently offer background information in various areas of civil rights.

I don't know how much of the material you have available can be obtained on a complimentary basis. Unfortunately, we have a very tight budget for finding the material we need, so we are carefully restricted in the amount we can purchase. This would be particularly true if we had to buy a dozen or 15 copies for all the group. If you have things that could be had without charge, we would appreciate very much having a copy. It would perhaps be better to send only one copy at first; we can then indicate what ones might be useful to have in quantity for our 12 Americans.

I will be grateful for any help you can give on this matter.

Sincerely,

James Paton

July 2, 1961

Dear Mrs. Albright:

Thank you for the two new speech manuscripts. Do not bother to copy the James C.Davis speech as I can get along without it.

There are several things I want to ask you about. First, I have somewhat of a gap in my coverage from the standpoint of the governors. I was unable to locate anything by Marvin Griffin or Ernest Vandiver on the segregation issue. This was true of the S. C. governors, too. Do you recall any speech manuscripts by these men?

Second, my copy of the Attorney General Eugene Cook address, "The Ugly Truth About The NAACP," has a page or so missing. I have through page ten. Would it be possible for you to copy the remaining page or so? By the way, I notice on page ten that Mr. Cook accuses your organization of being a "front" organization. It is interesting for me to notice that about all opposing organizations or people are communists.

Finally, you copied the drawing of THE NEGRO for me. This was the one comparing the Negro with animals. I do not have the complete explanation. I have from "The Negro's head shows the archaic form..." through "The Negro carries stench glands as does...." If it would not be a problem, please copy the rest of that "interesting" explanation. Do you recall the insidious cartoon I pointed out to you -- the one showing two Negro boys and two white girls looking at a globe in a classroom and the second frame showing them embracing? My colleagues are having difficulty believing that materials such as that are really distributed. If that is handy, please tack a copy of it on the bottom of the other material.

Thank you again for all of the help you have so generously given to me. I have had the opportunity to mention your organization on several occasions, and to refer to it in my dissertation. I do hope, though, that in the future I will find a more meaningful way to repay your group.

My writing is progressing rather well. I am working for an early-August deadline. Therefore, as you probably well know I am very busy.

I hope the Citizens' Council is prompt in sending the material. In any case, I hope to hear from you soon.

Cordially,

Dear Professor Denison:

I think I'm enclosing the most of the materials you need: we do not have, and I have not yet been able to obtain, complete speeches by Griffin and Vandiver. However, I have copies excerpts of speeches (one by Griffin, several by Vandiver when he was running for Governor) for you and perhaps this will give you the insights and quotes you need. If I am able to find complete texts of speeches next week, I'll send them along.

The missing page of Cook's address is enclosed.

The text with the drawing of THE NEGRO is incomplete; I have sent what we have. I hope this is the right one, but saw nothing about "stench glands". If this is wrong, please send the part you have and I'll try to match it up.

The copy of the Negro boys and white girls is enclosed; I sent along another good one for you also.

Needless to say, the Council is always honored and pleased to be mentioned in dissertations as a source of material and research. We shall certainly be looking forward to receiving a copy of your paper.

I assume you have already received the pamphlets from Mississippi; I forwarded them several days ago. I am enclosing another extra one we have that I noted today: "Mixed Schools and Mixed Blood" and also an extra copy of the Augusta Courier. Your unbelieving friends should get a charge out of looking over our friend, Roy Harris's journalism.

Dear Mr. Steed:

We are mailing you today some selected materials which will answer some of your questions and provide material for the topics for your research paper on "The New Negro." There is not now much available in the form of statistics and facts on job opportunities for Negroes. The Southern Regional Council is beginning a survey in four cities: Atlanta, Chattanooga, Houston, and Miami. So, by this fall we hope to know just what the situation is so far as job opportunities for Negroes in the South is concerned.

The 1959 Report of the Commission on Civil Rights has good information on housing; the 1960 report was concerned with higher education.

The President's executive order (announced March 1, 1961) strengthening equal employment opportunities within and without the government. The President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunities is concerned with government jobs and employment in firms that have government contracts and has been doing a fine job recently. The Labor Department is now concerned about state-operated, federally supported state employment offices and their policies of job referrals. The NAACP has asked for an end of federal support to any employment office that practices segregation in any form. The association is preparing a study on discrimination at offices in nine Southern states which it plans to present to Secretary of Labor Arthur J. Goldberg by the end of July.

Dear Professor Denison:

The speech, "The Message from Mississippi," was delivered before the Rotary Club of Kalamazoo, Michigan on November 28, 1961. It was sent to us by Frederick Routh, now executive director of the Michigan FEPC and formerly employed by SRC. In his letter he only said that he was sending a copy of the speech that had been given at the Rotary Club and that he had been invited to speak the following month to reply to it--which is how he happened to have a copy, I guess.

Since the talk was prepared for the speakers bureau of the Public Relations Department of the Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission, I imagine it was prepared by the staff of this Commission as are most of the other publications. But which one would only be a guess. You might write to them, and you might inquire of the newspaper in Kalmazoo, Michigan (most newspapers have a research department) to see if they could look up the news story on the speech to see who gave it.

Sorry not to be more helpful.

Dear Mrs. Albright:

Thank you for the new materials; those from your office and those from Mississippi.

I have a rather urgent request for information. You made me a copy (12 pages) of "The Message from Mississippi," the talk prepared for the speaker's bureau of the Public Relations Department, Mississippi State Sovereignty Commission. Many of the arguments which occur in this speech are present in other speeches I am analyzing. I was wondering if this might be somewhat of a model speech. But specifically, can you tell me when this speech was written and who the author(s) is? If not, can you tell me when you folks received a copy of it so that I can determine an approximate date of origin?

I would appreciate any information you might have on this at the earliest possible date.

My work is progressing well, thanks to you. I'll send you a full report when the task is completed. My friends are amazed and somewhat sickened by the "cartoons." I am anxious for them to read the Roy Harris article.

Thank you again.

Thank you very much for your letter of July 6 and the materials mailed separately to us. We appreciated your generous offer to send us, without charge, twelve to fifteen copies of materials which might prove useful at our seminar.

We are planning to exhibit the sampling of materials in our reference library at the Seminar, and it appears to us now that this will be sufficient for our immediate needs. It will, therefore, not be necessary to send larger quantities of any of them.

Gentlemen:

As a matter of interest to our Sunday School Class here in Birmingham, several members of the Class are undertaking to report on the several Southeastern States on what has been done toward complying with the 1954 Supreme Court decision on intergration. I am gathering information on the State of Georgia and what steps have been taken in the Legislature to comply with or to combat the 1954 decision.

I have been referred to your group as having the most detailed factual information relative to what has taken place throughout the South since 1954. Do you have any condensation of this information as it might apply to the State of Georgia, or to the South as a whole?

We are not doing exhaustive research on the subject and will spend only a minimum of time presenting what information we do get. We are merely trying to collect some information on highlights of what has taken place with the hope that we may all become better informed on this subject. Our Class felt that a collection of information and facts on this subject, perhaps along with some evaluation of the results of the different actions by the different States, might suggest some solutions. I would appreciate hearing from you with any data you may have, but do not go to a lot of trouble unnecessarily.

Many thanks.

Yours truly,

Dear Harvey:

I read with some care the chapter of Will Allred's thesis on state organizations. With the exception of the few questions which I noted and Peggy delivered to you today, the treatment seems to me altogether unobjectionable from the Council's standpoint. As I told you, I did a year or so ago read an earlier draft of the whole thesis and, relying on Will's statement that Harold Fleming had read all of the present draft except the chapter on the state organizations, I did not think it needful to review more than the one chapter. I think it is a good job. As I told you over the telephone, we would like a copy of the final typescript and if Will could arrange this we would be grateful.

Dear Mr. McLemore:

We are extremely interested to know of your survey of the monetary effects of the Negro boycotts on various businesses. We cannot, I am afraid, be of as much help to you as we would like. It is very difficult to document this kind of effect. Variety and department stores do not make public information on their sales. The Federal Reserve Board does circulate a monthly index of department store sales in the larger cities of the country. We have found it impossible, as yet at any rate, do document from the indices the dollar effect of sit-ins, boycotts, or resumption of buying. The problem is, as you undoubtedly know, that throughout the period of the most concentrated effort of the student protest, retail sales generally lagged.

We are mailing you, under separate cover, some of our publications which touch indirectly on this phase of the sit-in movement. Next week we will thermafax several news clips which will give your some general background information. Mr. Bernie L. Burke, 2108 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore 17, Maryland, began last March a similar project as a student at Morgan State College and a candidate for the B.S. degree in Business Administration. He might be able to give you some leads in obtaining the kind of information you will need. Dear Mrs. Albright:

I very much appreciate your response to my letter to Leslie Dunbar concerning professional organizations and other groups which have taken official position of not meeting in the South at any hotel or related facility that discriminates against Negro participants.

Although the survey which was done in 1960 by the Southern Regional Council did not result in the compilation of a directory of such organizations, the information you sent is quite helpful. Certainly it is more than is available from any other source. Insofar as Nashville is concerned I am sure that our Mayor and Chamber of Commerce will be especially impressed by the statements you quoted from Mayor Hartsfield and from the Atlanta Convention Bureau.

I am glad to know that you are still with the Southern Regional Council and enjoying the challenge of the very important work which the Council is doing.

Dear Mr. Long:

Your letter to Leslie Dunbar was referred to James Moss, our new director of research; since Mr. Moss is leaving tomorrow, to be gone six weeks (delivering the Salzburg lectures), he has asked me to reply to your letter for him.

We don't really have a list of professional organizations and other groups which have taken the official position of not meeting in the South at any hotel or related facility that discriminates against Negro participants. The survey we tried to make, in 1960, was to compile a directory of convention facilities available in the South for biracial groups. This survey was a flop; not enough replies came in to issue a real report. The enclosed article in New South will give you the gist of the replies we did receive.

I have gone through our files for 1960 and 1961, to update the New South article somewhat, and also to search out any groups refusing to meet in the South because of discrimination. The short list follows:

American Association for the Advancement of Science
U. S. Conference of Mayors
Southern Sociological Society (about 250 delegates; 5% Negro)
Southern Psychological Association
Southern Political Scientists Association
International Convention of Christian Churches (Disciples of Christ) since 1953, reaffirmed in 1960. (13,000 delegates)
American Federation of Catholic Workers for the Blind.

Items to up-date New South article:

VIRGINIA, Norfolk, July 12, 1961

The Virginia State American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations reported yesterday that the new Golden Triangle Hotel had agreed to provide accommodations for Negro and white delegates without discrimination. A. Philip Randolph, the only Negro vice president of the national AFL-CIO, demanded last month that the charter of the Virginia unit be revoked if it held its convention on a Jim Crow basis.

TEXAS, Chattanooga Times, June 13, 1961

Texas hotels will integrate "in the very near future," Seymour Weiss, president of the Roosevelt Hotel in New Orleans, predicted here Monday night..."the South is being penalized and we might as well...prepare to take a real beating." He said he has visited Dallas and Houston within thepast three weeks and that he is convinced all large Texas hotels will soon integrate in order to attract large conventions.

TENNESSEE, Baltimore Catholic Review, January 13, 1961

The segregation issue has caused the American Federation of Catholic Workers for the Blind to disassociate itself with the 1961 convention of the American Association of Workers for the Blind. Father Robert J. Shea, president, in a letter to Hulan Walker, executive secretary of the American Association of Workers for the Blind, said the decision of the latter group to hold its 1961 convention in Memphis, Tenn., which would bar Negro membersof the Catholic organization from attending, makes it impossible for the Catholic asociation to be a part of the convention.

MISSOURI, New York Times, May 19, 1961

The St. Louis Board of Aldermen passed a bill today prohibiting racial or religious discrimination in restaurants, hotels, theatres, and other establishments offering accommodations to the general public. (20 to 4) ... The St. Louis Council on Human Relations will be authorized to initiate or receive complaints, attempt to adjust them through conciliation or to file charges in court. Fines for violations will range from $25 to $500.

GEORGIA, Atlanta Constitution, January 17, 1961

Segregation in hotels, restaurants and other facilities is hurting Atlanta's development as a convention city and international center, Mayor Hartsfield declared Friday. "We are losing one convention after another, simply because we cannot take a few Negroes in our hotels."

(From letter from official of Atlanta Convention Bureau, April 12, 1961) "Since Atlanta has not yet experienced an overall decline in convention business, it is impossible to estimate the additional business we would have enjoyed had many invitations not been rejected due to our particular social restrictions. In 1959 our business was up 12.4% and last year we showed an overall increase of 4.7%. At the close of 1961 we will have enjoyed an increase of approximately 15% over 1960. To offset our loss in market created by the increasing number of regional and national organizations who are not restricting membership according to race, this Bureau has intensified to a large degree its sales efforts toward the remaining market. Without making a thorough and detailed study of this subject, it is estimated that we can no longer bid on 25% of all National Conventions and 10% of all Southern or Southeastern Conventions."

Atlanta Journal, June 23, 1961

Three Negro Jaycee delegates were registered at the Dinkler-Plaza Hotel, but left under pressure after one night. Wm. D. Johnson, Negro President of Pennsylvania Jaycees, said Atlanta and other Southern cities that have segregated eating and housing facilities will find it hard to attract national conventions in the future ...because "Negro membership is growing"...and "the power states in most national organizations are in the North and West where segregation is not practiced."

I hope this information will be of some help. There must be many mose organizations that have agreed not to meet in the South without newspaper publicity. It would require a rather thorough mail survey to accumulate a really significant list, especially if this included the membership of the organization.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Ed. A. Albright

Dear Leslie:

This is follow-up to an informal conversation we had at the Regional NAIRO Conference in Little Rock. I inquired at that time about the availability of a list of professional organizations and other groups which had taken the official position of not meeting in the South at any hotel or related facility that discriminated in any way against Negro participants.

You indicated, I believe, that your file was not complete but that your office did occasionally add new information to your file when a new development came to your attention.

Could you send me the list of those you now have? If you also have the average number attending such regional meetings and the number of members in the organizations, this would also be helpful. In the event you do not have this latter information, I could follow-up by writing directly to the organizations listed.

With the successful desegregation of many of our lunch counters and the restaurant facilities in our two largest downtown department stores--and more recently the downtown theatres, there is considerable interest here in the hotels and motels.

Nashville is building a large, 10,000 capacity, auditorium. Its central location has convinced the business community of projecting the city as an excellent convention city. There is an over-abundance of motels on all highway entrances to the city, and now three excellent motel facilities have been constructed in the heart of the downtown business area. At the same time, several businesses are leaving the downtown area, and effort is being made by the Mayor to revise the downtown area for business purposes--loss of tax revenue is one major factor. These, in general, are the favorable factors which make the hotel field a timely one for consideration in the desegregation advance.

The information I am requesting, therefore, will be of immediate and practical use. Whatever you are able to send will be greatly appreciated.

With every good wish,

Sincerely yours,

Dear Dr. Moss,

Dr. Johnson told me that when he met with you recently he discussed my work and the possibility that I might be eligible to do some writing for your organization. Perhaps after your visit to Chapel Hill you lined up enough people to handle your research interests for some time to come. At any rate, I would be interested to know what you are planning and what you are already working on.

In the recent past I studied Negroes in police courts, and collected some material on the subject. I still think that this is important to examine, for it is perhaps at the local level, and in the sacred arena of the trial, that fundamental principles for organizing race relations are to be observed. The subtle changes in code and attitude will also be on display in such basic situations. Well, be that as it may, I did do some detailed work on the judge, although not from the point of view of his relationship to Negroes in court. At the time I devoted attention to the judge in his role capacity as court functionary. Nevertheless, the courtroom and trial are epitomic and symbolic of negotiative and bargaining processes that are validated in our society. In certain ways race relations are somewhat exaggerated occasions for negotiation and bargaining between juxtaposed groups. For this reason, whatever happens in courts might crucially reenact the rules of transaction between people who are socially defined and categorized as different on grounds of race.

Presently I am trying to organize some research on the internal migration of Negroes within the South. This would be a farm to town movement, and I am especially interested in occupational mobility. I would like to know whether status-improvement of Negroes hinges (1) on movement out of the Southern region to towns and cities elsewhere, (2) on movement to towns and cities anywhere, (3) on movement which also involves occupational mobility, (4) on occupational stratum (vertical) mobility, (5) on occupational situs (horizontal) mobility, or (6) on mixtures of the preceding possibilities.

Number 5 is an interesting possibility, for it suggests that initial Negro migration from farm to town and city involves a situs shift from agricultural employment to some other situs like construction or transport without much stratum escalation. However, situs shifts are certainly not negligible, for they might require shifts in spatial location, stimulating occupations opportunities, and disruptions in occupational stereotypicity. If these are beneficial experiences, then it would be important to know if Charlotte, or Raleigh, or any other Southern city is as good a location for Negroes to experience a status increment as would be Cleveland, Scranton, or Syracuse.

This is all conjectural, but it is hard to believe (1) that the South will ever be evacuated by all Negroes, and (2) that race relations in the South will remain unchanged. Instead, we know that Negroes do remain in the South, that they do migrate intra-regionally and experience status increments, and that race relations in the South are changing. How migration, mobility, stratum shifts, and situs shifts involving Negroes contribute to these changes is something I would like to discover.

Well, this has been in lieu of having a chat with you when you were in town. I hope you will write to me sometime about the work you are undertaking, and perhaps I might be of some help to you and the Southern Regional Council in the future. If you are ever again in this vicinity please arrange for us to meet.

Sincerely yours,

H. Collins

Congratulations on your new and challenging appointment. When I saw the notice in the Bureau Reporter, I was pleased to see that you were on the firing line in Atlanta. I recently got to know Bill Jackson who also took a job in Atlanta just a short time ago as the Dean of the School of Social Work. If you see him, give him my best.

I have just started to work on a study of a narcotic addiction treatment program run by the New York Medical College where I am in the Department of Psychiatry. I am also in the process of completing my disertation on the subject of southern attitudes toward school segregation as reflected in the statewide referenda of five states.

I have been receiving materials from your Council and find them interesting and helpful. I will shortly be sending a change of address form so that my mailing list address will be correct. There is one publication of your Council which I do not have and would be helpful if I could get a copy. This is the survey of progress toward integration in all fields during the two year period following the Supreme Court school decision of May 17, 1954. This is the survey, financed by the Fund for the Republic, which found nearly 1, 100 instances of desegregation. Thanks for any help you can give me.

I would like to hear from you sometime as to your experiences on your new job. If you ever get up to New York and have a chance, please look me up.

THE IMMORALITY OF RACIAL SEGREGATION

by James McBride Dabbs*

We have met here to consider the immorality of racial segregation. The fact itself is noteworthy. The South is not used to checking its racial customs against ethical standards. There are, of course, a certain number of people in the South who defend segregation on religious grounds, even quoting Biblical chapter and verse. There is probably a much larger group that maintains that segregation is not an ethical or religious matter, but is simply a matter of police action in the maintenance of law and order. The fact, however, that these people usually grow angry if their view is challenged suggests that they are stirred by something deeper than the advisability of a certain kind of police action. In my opinion, they seek to keep the question on the level of law because they fear they cannot argue it successfully on the deeper level of morality and religion.

It is this type of people who, questioning the leadership of the church--a leadership evident at least at the top levels--demand, "Why has segregation become sinful since 1954? Are the preachers now getting their instructions about sin from the Supreme Court instead of from God?" The proper answer is, We get our ideas about sin not only from the Bible but also from the Supreme Court and from any other voice speaking in the world. Since the voices of the world are continually changing, our ideas of sin are continually changing. Many of you, for instance, spend Sunday afternoons, your conscience sitting quietly beside you, in a way admittedly sinful two generations ago. But we may be misled by the voices of the world? Of course. But so have men been misled by the words of the Bible. We hear God's word where we can, and interpret it as we can, with many tragic mistakes. Often we don't hear it at all; often we misunderstand it; and ways of being lost and being saved change with the generations.

Consequently, there are many men today who believe segregation to be immoral who, twenty-five years ago, didn't give it a thought. Doubtless segregation produced essentially the same bad effects then as it does now, but the realization of these effects was far less clear and far more limited. The main events that have brought segregation under the ethical judgment we are expressing here today are, in summary, the growing education of the Negro, both academic and otherwise, the movement of the Negro population from Southern farms to the cities of the nation, the attendant enlargement of economic opportunity and political power, the social concern of the American public aroused by the Great Depression, with its most recent expression in the enactment of civil rights laws, and, finally, the worsening of the democratic position in the world with the rise of communism, and the weakening of the white position with the rise of the colored races. Believe me, a lot's been said in the last fifty years, and he who cannot recognize the voice of God in any of it is lost indeed.

A change is occurring right here in the South that helps to explain our concern with the morality of segregation. By and large, the public morality of the South, especially its interracial morality, has been a matter of mores, of custom. Things were right because they were done. This is still one of the main defenses of segregation: it is the custom of the country. Since it is part of our mores, how can it be im-moral?

Well, it is becoming immoral--or at least is coming under ethical criticism--because we are moving from a customary, a folk, a traditional society, where that which is done is right, into a self-conscious, modern, industrial society, the mobility of which continually erodes all customs and makes many obsolete. With this failure of custom, it becomes increasingly necessary that we become conscious of our lives and continually subject them to ethical criticism. Without such criticism, we are headed for anarchy.

Now, I'm not sure that we're wise in rushing into the highly mobile, the highly uncustomary society of the industrial world. The great Irish poet, W. B. Yeats, asks:

> How but in custom and in ceremony
> Are innocence and beauty born?

I don't know the answer. I'm in favor of industrialization, but I think we ought to be more critical about it. After all, it is only one way of making a living; whether we can really live in it remains to be seen.

Nevertheless, since our society is moving at present from custom to deliberate choice, we must learn to make deliberate choices; in regard to segregation as in regard to everything else. And now that the question of the morality of segregation has been raised by all the forces I have enumerated, it is immoral not to face it. I'm not speaking at the moment of the immorality of segregation, I'm speaking of the immorality of those who refuse to face the ethical question, who try to dodge the issue, who in effect decide not to decide but to continue in the old habits. This is actually a decision for the status quo, and the person who makes it is immoral in that he has failed to make a deliberate choice in a matter on which the times demand a deliberate choice. Such a person is trying to maintain the relative innocence of a generation ago, when the question hadn't yet been raised. But the question has been raised now, and he is not innocent, but guilty, if he refuses to face it.

Well, let's face it; that's what we came here for. I take it as a basic moral proposition that people should always be treated as ends, never as means. All institutions exist for people, not people for institutions. The great evil of Nazi Germany, and of the communist states, is the idea that man exists for the state.

I take it then, that segregation is immoral because it uses the individual as a means toward the race as an end. Segregation was established and is maintained for the purpose of keeping the white race in a position superior to that of the colored race. Of course, the official formula, stated by the Plessy v. Ferguson Supreme Court decision of 1896, was "separate but equal." (The Court was composed of nine--or at least eight--gracious gentlemen then!) But the South made practically no pretense of living up to this formula until it became frightened by its impending reversal in the Brown v. Board of Education decision of 1954. Even now, trying belatedly to equalize the two school systems, the South tries to maintain the separation because it believes the white race is superior, and is trying to guarantee this superiority.

This is a basically immoral position whether the white race is superior or not. For the focus is upon the race, not upon the individual. If it were true that every Negro were inferior to every white, there might be moral grounds for keeping the two groups separate. In such a case, all the individuals concerned, both white and Negro, might be benefitted by the separation, though even here it could be argued under the Christian ethic that the superior group was shirking its responsibilities in pushing the inferior group off to itself. But this, of course, is not the case. Many Negroes are superior to many whites, and such Negroes are clearly punished by racial segregation.

I am largely bypassing the argument that the Negro race is inferior and should therefore be segregated from the white. For myself, I take the scientific position that this has not been proved; I add to it the democratic and Christian assumption that men are basically equal. As for the apparent inferiority of the Negro group in this country, there are too many explanatory factors for me to assume a racial inferiority. Segregation itself is one of these factors. Through segregation the whites have cut the Negroes off from the main stream of culture, have put them in a weak and unprivileged position, and have discriminated against them educationally, culturally, economically and politically; in brief, have kept them as a race inferior. This is the general moral condemnation of segregation as a system; but even more basically immoral than this, as I have said, is the intent to discount the person of the Negro--and the white--for the supposed good of the white race.

I said "the supposed good." It is possible that the whites have been more damaged by segregation than the Negroes against whom we directed it. In the first place, we have possessed great power and have used it irresponsibly--perhaps we have been more irresponsible under segregation than we were under slavery. As Lord Acton once said, "Absolute power corrupts absolutely." How we think we can hold such power over people and not be corrupted by it is more than I can understand. We are not the gods we think we are. Our present foolish and in the long run futile fight against the passage of civil rights laws is a case in point. We claim to be protecting freedom; we are of course protecting privilege--white privilege. Basically, it isn't federal civil rights laws we're opposed to; we are opposed to any civil rights laws that might give the Negro a fair break. We want to maintain our privileges, codified in segregation, and we call this freedom. "Ah, Liberty, what crimes are committed in they name!"

But, in the imposition of segregation, we whites commit these crimes, or at least these sins, against ourselves as well as against the Negroes. This will be the theme of the rest of my talk. For segregation is a burden to the white as well as to the Negro. Basically a moral and spiritual burden, but also an economic and political burden. We have heard of iron curtains and paper curtains. Segregation may be called the Cotton Curtain, since primarily we wove it out of cotton. We can see through it, but dimly. To St. Paul's glass, through which all men in this life see but darkly, we in our foolishness have added a curtain which further limits and distorts our vision. Strictly speaking, it cuts down and refracts the light. The white man looking through this curtain at the Negro sees a dark figure diminished in size and beneath him; the Negro looking through this curtain at the white sees a light figure increased in size and above him. Is it any wonder that the Negro at least, having been made increasingly aware by all the influences of modern life that the white man does not really possess the divinity he has assumed, wearies of the game, and, tearing aside the curtain, sits down beside us at lunch counters and looks us in the eye? This is the whole revolution we're involved in: from paternalism to democracy, and the look straight across the table.

I said the curtain of segregation generally permits the white to see only a dark figure, the Negro to see only a light figure. The lineaments of the individual are blurred, only the racial color remains. This is not only the effect of segregation, it is also its intent: to prevent personal relationships, or to limit them to such personal meaning as could flow downward and upward along the master-servant, or the superior-inferior relationship. Segregation had to prevent full personal relationships. Without such a curtain whites could not have exploited Negroes as they have, nor could Negroes have accepted such exploitation, or exercised their petty exploitations in return, stealing from us a dime when we stole from them a dollar.

As a consequence of segregation, whites do not look straight at Negroes or Negroes at whites. I don't know whether Negroes find it hard to remember white faces or not; their daily bread has depended so much upon even our capricious moods that they may have learned to observe us closely; but I think we whites tend to see them as Negroes and that's all. They fall into the proper slot, like the punched cards of the computing machine. Why, in regard to the present student protest movement, it's hard for us to see real people; we see a set of cards punched in New York, or at least somewhere outside the borders of this happy region. In regard to Negroes, we have made of ourselves computing machines and of them the cards to compute with. I don't know which is worse, the machine or the card. Meanwhile, the Negro as a person generally escapes our glance; the humorous lips, the tragic eyes, the wise face, the beautiful face--the curtain blurs these personal characteristics and only the dark color remains. And it isn't simply that we thereby lose the strength that would come from the recognition of persons and gain only the cunning knowledge punched upon cards. We lose also the opportunity to be freely our better selves: friendly, courteous, compassionate. We Protestants tend to think of the world as a place wherein we are tempted only to do evil; yet momentarily life is persuading us to be good and to do good. God's grace is continually operative, and the mask-like faces of segregation might suggest to us if only the curtain were torn away the elusive mystery of life itself.

Not only does segregation hinder the development in both whites and Negroes of the capacity to be friendly, courteous, and compassionate, and, thus hindering the development of our moral capacity, is itself immoral; segregation also makes difficult our realization of the tragic greatness of man. What I shall say now is the most fundamental thing I have to say. It is bad to restrict or be restricted, and needlessly, in economic, political, and cultural ways; it is bad to be prevented from expressing, or hindered in expressing, one's positive good nature; but, worst of all, is our fear as we face the human condition. Perhaps I should say, our fear before we face in ourselves the human condition. Segregation tends to keep us from facing in ourselves this condition. Segregation tends to keep us from realizing that we are human.

I imagine many of you will say, Why, everybody knows he's human. Not in the South, Brother, not in the South. Down here those who get around to boasting about it are Anglo-Saxon. They've forgotten this other point, but they have a racial god named Woden. These people ought to go to church on Wednesday; that's Woden's Day. I'm Anglo-Saxon myself, and I think Anglo-Saxons are human beings; but I also think Negroes are human beings, and Russians, and Chinese, and all the many others. But these Woden-worshippers don't think Negroes are human beings--not the way Anglo-Saxons are. Well, there're a lot of Negroes in the South. They look like human beings: they're forked bipeds, like other human beings; they even talk English. But your dyed-in-the-wool Anglo-Saxon--if I might risk a horrible pun, I'd say "your dyed-in-the-woad" Anglo Saxon, for that's the blue stuff they used to dye themselves in--anyway, your real Anglo-Saxon can't accept them just as human beings, and so their numerous presence here casts some doubt upon his thoughtless assumption that the Anglo-Saxon is a human being, and, finally, that he himself is a human being. And that's bad. Down that road waits quiet, perhaps even violent, desperation.

What I'm trying to say is difficult, and I'm not saying it well. Let me tell you a story. It happened to me. A quarter of a century ago, in a mood almost of despair, I suddenly realized that what was happening to me happens sooner or later to everybody; that I was merely sharing the human destiny; that I was simply a human being. With that realization, my mood passed swiftly from near despair to a joy such as I have seldom known, and I was walking on top of the world, one with the two million people in the world. We were walking shoulder to shoulder. I didn't know where we were going; I don't know now. But wherever it was, we were going there together. Going through tragedy, through darkness, through storm, with patches of sunlight here and there, but over all the wintry weather of the world. This, as I see it, is what it means to be a human being--any human being.

I ask you: What, in God's name, has segregation got to do with this? When the intuition came to me twenty-five years ago, I wasn't even conscious of the race issue. I was a sort of innocent segregationist, living according to the custom of the country. But when, through the world-movements I have mentioned, the custom of the country began to be challenged, I had no doubt as to where I stood. I had been baptized into the human race, and the various races of men had become for me a superficial detail.

Since that time my resource has been mainly, I think, the realization that we are together; and not in desperation--only he who is alone is desperate--but in considerable happiness. And remembering the gulfs that once surrounded me, and that nearly swept me down, I am concerned mainly, I think, to reach across the distance that intervenes between me and other human beings, and find the living person on the other side.

Segregation, as I have tried to show, tends to keep this person from coming alive for me, and to keep me from coming alive for him. Here we meet, two ship-wrecked sailors--as all men are or are destined to be--two ship-wrecked sailors on the wide sea of the world, and what I most deeply need to know from him and he from me is, What is the reckoning, and whither are we bound--if anywhere? But how can a computer ask this of its card or the card of its computer? And so we drift by one another, with at best a polite, though under segregation, a formal hail, and we are again alone. But now each of us is weaker instead of stronger, because each of us saw what looked like a man, like another human being, but neither could hail him as such, and now we begin to doubt both the humanity of others and of ourselves. For we recognize in ourselves only that which we recognize in others.

It is hard enough to cross the natural gulfs that separate men one from another, but cross them we must or we are lost. Many men are lost. Yet we in the South have added to the natural difficulties of life the artificial wall of segregation. It's existence strikes at the very core of man's being. I dare say the men who built it thought they were protecting themselves. I dare say that many men who not try to shore it up also think they are protecting themselves. They may be protecting their prestige and their property--though I don't think they're doing much for their race--if that means anything. But themselves? Themselves they are destroying. The destruction of the public school system that some of them contemplate is, in this light, only an episode.

I am glad with you that we are awakening here from our deadly slumber; that we are facing the real problems and asking the pertinent questions. Evidently there are some people in the South who have the courage to be where they are.

Mr. Peter M. Sussman
Deputy Assistant Staff Director Commission on Civil Rights
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Mr. Sussman:

Thank you very much for your letter of October 27, and for the extra three sets of the Commission reports. We shall look forward to receiving the report on justice later.

The 120 copies of the New Orleans report have been received also, and this will do for our purposes. You can be assured that we shall give them out for maximum coverage and use.

The other day Dr. Robert Coles, a psychiatrist who is working in Atlanta for one year on a grant to interview the Negro transfer students, their families, and the white students in the schools which have been integrated, noticed the Commission reports on my desk and looked through them. He asked me to request one copy of the report on Education and the 50-State Report for his use. He receives his mail at our office. Dr. Coles will publish his study of the effects of school integration on the young people. I am sure that the Commission reports would be of help to him and that he would very much appreciate your sending him these two copies.

Sincerely yours,

Mrs. Ed. A. Albright

Dear Mrs. Albright:

Thank you for your letter of October 26. As you may know, the publication of the Commission report has not yet been completed. Volume 5 dealing with the administration of justice is still outstanding. We expect to release it in the near future. As soon as volume 5 is off the press, we will send you the requested three full sets of the Commission report.

Since our supply of the New Orleans report is somewhat less than ample, I wonder if your organization could make do with 120 copies, rather than 150 copies. A box containing 120 of these books will go forward to you on Monday. If you absolutely need the other 30 copies, we will try to make them available, but it will be difficult.

There is no charge for these publications. We appreciate your interest in the work of the Commission.

Sincerely yours,

Peter M. Sussman

Public Papers of the Presidents of the United States
HARRY S. TRUMAN, 1945

1BB. In this volume are gathered most of the public messages and statements of the President of the United States that were released by the White House during the period April 12 to December 31, 1945. Included are the texts of President Truman's news conferences; addresses; letters and telegrams; messages, statements, and remarks; and other public papers of the President released during this period. These items are presented in chronological order, rather than being grouped in classes. The subject index should meet most needs for a classified arrangement. Four appendixes provide lists of White House press releases covering matters with which the President was closely concerned; Presidential Documents—proclamations and executive orders—published in the Federal Register; Presidential reports to Congress; and rules governing this publication. 1961. 668 p.

PATTERNS FOR PROGRESS IN AGING. The objective of this series of case studies is to make more widely known a variety of successful activities for and by older people. Each study provides an account of the nature, history, and development of a project, program, or service, and an estimate of its impact on the people it serves. It is hoped that the studies will serve to suggest worthwhile projects to community planners and organizations and to provide guidance to their development and operation.

PEACETIME RADIATION HAZARDS IN THE FIRE SERVICE. The training of firemen and other personnel to deal with fires and emergencies involving radioactive materials has been recognized as being of extreme importance by the Atomic Energy Commission for a number of years. It is hoped that these publications, developed jointly by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Office of Education, will meet the need for basic radiation hazard training of firemen. In areas where there is considerable exposure to radiation hazards, it is the recommendation of these agencies that all firemen avail themselves of the 15-hour basic course. In locations of lesser potential involvement the 4-hour orientation unit may be adequate for most firemen with selected members from each department taking additional training by means of the 15-hour basic course.

JAM

Within America today there is a tightly knit society of adolescents which resists adult overtures, fights adult inroads on its isolation. It has its own values and attitudes—even its own influential market. How can we reach this society and bring it closer to the goals of secondary education? This vital question is answered in a significant and enlightening new book from The Free Press of Glencoe . . .

The Social Life of the Teenager and Its Impact on Education

By JAMES S. COLEMAN

With the Assistance of John W. C. Johnstone and Kurt Jonassohn

The Teen-Age Social System

With modern adolescents cut off from the adult world, in the separate worlds of their high schools, the need for drastic changes in our educational system is greater than ever. To make these changes, we must not only learn how this adolescent society operates, but how we can control it to implement the broad goals of our schools.

This is the central theme of James S. Coleman's revealing, thoroughly researched investigation of the social life of the teen-ager. Containing a wealth of significant data and observation, THE ADOLESCENT SOCIETY explores and analyzes the social systems of ten high schools of widely varied communities, from small rural towns to large urban centers. The values, activities, and interests making up these systems are examined in detail to determine how they differ from school to school, from community to community. Every element affecting the teen-age culture is carefully probed—from attitudes on homework, television, and cars to views on sexual relations and scholastic achievement.

Values and Goals of the Society

Here is timely and pertinent information on the separate world of the high-school adolescent:

► the relative importance of good grades and family background to the value climate of each school,

► the norms and values of the "elites" of the schools, the popular heroes and leaders who dominate the society and determine its direction,

► sports and studies as paths to success—the attitudes of the not-yet successful freshmen and sophomores to the best athletes and the most exemplary students,

► the position of "beauty and brains" in the status systems of the schools. (Here the author documents forcefully that "the structuring of scholastic activity is incompatible with the goals of secondary education in modern society.")

► the complex association patterns which compose the adolescent social system—those which reinforce certain values and undercut others.

Professor Coleman's book also considers the psychological and scholastic effects of the adolescent social system—on the members themselves and on the traditional goals of the high school. In an important chapter, he examines some of the elements that give the systems their particular values—the population composition, student-teacher relations, and others—emphasizing that these elements may be altered by changes in the structure of high school education.

The Uses of Competition in the High School

In a provocative final chapter, the author stresses his conviction that the adolescent society must be reshaped so that it comes to motivate the child in directions sought by the adult society. He urges new kinds of scholastic competition which would make use of the student's interest in games to help him deal with the large institutions which make up his environment as an adult. Other forms of competition, including the school's competition for students, are regarded as useful devices for strengthening the structure of rewards in high school and ultimately the structure of secondary education itself.

THE ADOLESCENT SOCIETY brings fresh insight to an immensely important subject: the emergence of an influential and powerful teen-age culture and its overwhelming impact on education and on society itself. Those who have to deal with and channel the energies of our adolescents will find this realistic and fully documented appraisal extremely helpful.

About the Author: JAMES S. COLEMAN is associate professor and chairman of the Department of Social Relations, The Johns Hopkins University. He has taught at the University of Chicago and was formerly a Fellow at the Center for Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. He is the coauthor, with H. Solomon and E. W. Adams, of MATHEMATICAL THINKING IN THE MEASUREMENT OF BEHAVIOR, the author of COMMUNITY CONFLICT, and coauthor of UNION DEMOCRACY, with S. M. Lipset and M. A. Trow.

Other new books reflecting up-to-date developments and original approaches to problems in education...

EMOTIONAL BLOCKS TO LEARNING

By Irving D. Harris, M.D. A useful book for those who are concerned with children who cannot learn despite adequate intelligence and competent teachers. Dr. Harris, author of Normal Children and Mothers, studied hundreds of case histories to discover the emotional disturbances that seem to underlie specific learning blocks. Although most of the study deals with children from seven to sixteen, the learning problems of pre-school children and college students are also considered. Published September15. $4.00.

THE USE OF ACADEMIC PREDICTION SCALES

For Counseling and Selecting College Entrants

By Benjamin S. Bloom and Frank R. Peters. An original and carefully researched solution to the problem of predicting academic achievement in college. The authors have developed the use of academic prediction scales which will reduce errors in evaluating college entrants and will improve the way students are advised, the basis on which they choose the colleges they hope to attend, and the eventual success of their college careers. Based on a study of over 18,000 student records in 125 schools and over 300 colleges, this book now permits a more precise examination of grading procedures and standards. Published. $5.00.

ON ADOLESCENCE

A Psychoanalytic Interpretation

By Peter Blos. This systematic presentation of the normal adolescent process offers a unified theory of adolescent development based on psychoanalytic principles. Dr. Blos—a psychoanalyst with a particular interest in children and adolescents—describes the stages of adolescent development in terms of the intrinsic conflicts, liabilities, tasks, and resolutions typical for each phase. He also highlights the specific contribution each phase has to make toward the attainment of adulthood. Published October 20. $5.00

MORAL EDUCATION

By Emile Durkheim. Translated into English for the first time—the renowned sociologist's still-timely argument for establishing a strong secular morality. Durkheim analyzes the elements of morality and discusses how to develop these elements in the child. He asserts that the public school is best suited to the task of moral education, and that in the process of educating the child it must create a new being shaped according to the needs of society. Published September 8. $6.00.

WHAT IS THE CITIZENS' COUNCIL DOING?

IT IS . . .

• • Leading the Resistance Movement against the race mixers and keeping racial agitators out of many communities.

• • Bringing Together groups of patriotic men and women dedicated to the principles of individual choice and race purity.

• • Organizing on a grass roots basis with control in the hands of recognized community leaders.

• • Acting, without fanfare, quietly, effectively and responsibly to prevent racial strife and to preserve our social and economic order.

• • Banding Together local Citizens' Councils into county, state and national organization for mutual consultation and advice.

• • Publishing "The Citizens' Council", a monthly newspaper with nationwide circulation as an authoritive source of information on the development of the Council movement.

• • Producing "Citizens' Council Forum", a 15 minute, weekly TV and radio program, featuring Senators, Congressmen and other national and international leaders of the resistance movement, which has been scheduled on more than 300 stations from coast to coast.

• • Providing Speakers for Council meetings, Civic and Patriotic groups, Legislative and Executive bodies, Schools and Colleges and Conventions.

• • Printing Literature, by the millions of pieces, on various aspects of the race questions and distributing to all parts of the nation.

• • Providing Information and Research to supply the news media with facts on Citizens' Council activities.

• • Sponsoring an Educational Program in the High Schools and Colleges, including an annual Essay Contest.

• • Corresponding with thousands of supporters in every state and many foreign countries.

• • Sending Organizers into local communities, as finances permit, to help set up new Councils.

• • Operating on a Limited Budget, that any medium size church could handle with ease, with marked success.

• • Making a Record of Achievement, with small expenditure, in mobilizing community resistance to forced integration which is recognized and acknowledged by the race mixers and of which it is justly proud.

• • Proving, day by day that with adequate financing we can Win This Fight.

• • Asking You To Join The Fight — to join those dedicated to the preservation of the white race —to help carry on a thorough, aggressive and sustained campaign.

IF . . .

(1) If you believe there can be NO compromise on the matter of segregation

(2) If you believe that integration will bring the evils of miscegenation (interbreeding between the different races)

(3) If you believe that social intermingling and miscegenation will be seriously detrimental to both races and to our civilization

(4) If you realize that either Communistic influences or economic pressure groups stand behind every effort to invade States' Rights and force integration and miscegenation on the people of the South

(5) If you believe in the rights of the Sovereign States to handle their own internal affairs

(6) If you realize that indifference, apathy, and the inclination of some to accept desegregation as "inevitable" . . . are our greatest enemies

(7) If you are positively dedicated, in your own mind, to the preservation of segregation without equivocation or qualification

(8) If you are ready and willing to DO SOMETHING positive about this very serious and present problem

FREEDOM RIDE.....By Jim Peck

Jim Peck's new book is the story of the 1961 Freedom Rides, the 1947 Journey of Reconciliation, and many of CORE's direct action campaigns in the years between.

Lillian Smith says of the book: "This story of how it all happened is important; the vivid detailed account of how a few people, accidentally or spontaneously found the symbols that speak to everybody: the need to eat, the need to move -- how they went at it, what they endured, how they changed within themselves...It is factual stuff; valid for historians of this age; I can find no important errors or oversights and I, too, have been close to this group.... The hope of our human future lies in the fact that how change will come cannot be predicted. There is always the moment when the astonishing thing happens... I, as one human being, pray that more astonishing things will come to pass, and quickly, for we on this earth have so little time left."

James Baldwin says: "Countless people, both white and black, are now undergoing the most brutal hardships.... Here is the testimony of one of them: and the moral of his story is that, however painful it may be for us to change, not to change will be fatal."

FREEDOM RIDE, published by Simon & Schuster, may be ordered from CORE.

Please send me _____ copies of FREEDOM RIDE @ $3.50 each.

WEEKLY GUARDIAN ASSOCIATES, Inc. . . . . .

197 E. FOURTH STREET · NEW YORK 9, NEW YORK · ORegon 3-3800

Renewed subscription
1-22-62

January, 1962

Dear good friend:

We enter the new year this year with mingled feelings: The challenge and excitement of the annual turning point has been tempered by the death of our beloved general manager, John T. McManus. But even in the midst of the initial shock, it is difficult not to experience a sense of pride and gratification at the outpouring of cables, telegrams and letters from all over the world in tribute to Jack McManus.

They came from Peking and Brooklyn, London and San Diego, Accra, Ghana and Gary, Indiana. From near and far they all bespoke the same sentiment: THE GUARDIAN MUST GO ON. Thus, by the hundreds, the messages demonstrated a real understanding of the life of Jack McManus and his dedication to what the GUARDIAN stands for.

There never was a time when this dedication to honest and fearless presentation and interpretation of the news was more urgent. The year 1962 will be a year in which fateful decisions will be taken on the Cold War, colonialism and nuclear policy. It may also see a bold challenge from the American Right.

But it will also be a year which could see the full flowering of the American peace movement, sparked by the waking women of America; and a reaffirmation of the principles of the Bill of Rights and the Emancipation Proclamation, with the young people of America taking the lead.

In this situation, the GUARDIAN stands ready as ever to bring to an ever-widening audience of thinking people information and opinion without which an anxious nation cannot properly judge and take a stand on the course of events--and this in a time when the press has increasingly become the self-censoring agent of the American Establishment.

more . . . .

There are three ways in which you can make sure that the GUARDIAN keeps on with the job:

- Contribute now the most generous sum possible, in the name of John T. McManus, to ensure the continuity of the work that was closest to his heart: the NATIONAL GUARDIAN.

- Join the GUARDIAN'S Buck of the Month Club. You send $1 a month in reminder envelopes sent out by the GUARDIAN. Thus we are provided with a reliable sustaining income. Subscriptions are automatically renewed upon your response.

- Continue your GUARDIAN readership. Your subscription renewal now (even if not immediately due) will be a heartening demonstration of your support.

Although there is only one signature at the end of this letter this year, in place of the two that usually were there, the McManus spirit will continue to prevail in the pages of our paper. For, as Cedric Belfrage put it so aptly: "Jack is and always will be Joe Hill to us."

In this spirit we know you will respond as fully as you can.

On behalf of the staff, please accept my warmest wishes for a New Year of rich fulfillment.

Faithfully,

Jim Aronson

James Aronson
Editor

P.S. As in previous years, we have an attractive free gift for you. To help nourish the hoped-for "flowering of the American peace movement," we have prepared sheets of "peace stamps" which can be used in a variety of ways.

You may have two sheets of these stamps, simply by checking the appropriate box on the card.

Dear Jim:

Thanks a great deal for your recent note. If you had asked me in Chattanooga to send copies of my testimony before the House Special Sub-Committee, there is great likelihood that I would have to be reminded by letter anyway.

I am enclosing two copies of the testimony. And since you indicate that your interest in it relates to your forthcoming report on the Federal Executive and Civil Rights, I am taking the liberty to send you two copies of another piece. It is the current issue of Social Action magazine which contains an article by me on the role of government in race relations.

I enjoyed our association in Chattanooga and I am glad that this opportunity to get better acquainted did occur.

Best of wishes,

Sincerely yours,

Herman

It was good to have the opportunity to get to know you better in Chattanooga and my thanks for your excellent transportation services while I was there.

RACE TENSIONS AND THE POLICE by J. E. Curry and Glen D. King, both of Dallas Police Dept. This timely book is a comprehensive guide to the officer's role as mediator of tensions arising from disagreements between racial groups. The sociological factors involved in racial conflict, as well as POLICE AND MINORITY GROUP PREVENTIVE MEASURES, are highlighted. The authors have made no attempt to argue the moral right or wrong of desegregation. They have taken the attitude that the responsibility of a police officer is to enforce the law regardless of whether that law meets with his personal approval. The officer who is striving toward professionalization of his vocation will find much in this book to help him assume a proper attitude toward racial tensions and to realize the dangers of alternative measures. IN ADDITION, SUGGESTIONS ARE MADE FOR BRINGING UNDER CONTROL an unruly crowd should tensions erupt into violence. Pub. '62, 152 pp. (Police Science Series), $5.50.

POLICE ROADBLOCK OPERATIONS by John I. Schwarz, Easton Police Department (Ret.), Easton, Pennsylvania. "Operation Roadblock" is designed for public safety and service. As an emergency action it may be used only once or twice a year, but law enforcement's reputation and prestige with the public depend upon handling the situation properly. John I. Schwarz, former Chief of Police at Easton, Pennsylvania, is an experienced and competent authority on the subject. He has drawn up a blueprint here showing how a blockade can be effective, efficient—handled with a minimum of danger to all parties concerned. He considers the purpose and planning of roadblocks, various types, methods, how many men should be assigned, and what their instructions should be. Attention is given to the use of barricades and stop signs, proper means of identification, and prevention of escape. Law enforcement needs a textbook of this type. It represents another step forward in the professionalization of police techniques. Pub. '62, (Police Science Series).

POLICEWOMAN'S MANUAL by Lois Lundell Higgins, Crime Prevention Bureau of Illinois, Chicago. Long before the fiftieth anniversary of women in police service in 1960, it had become apparent that "policewomen are here to stay." A wide audience will find much of interest in this long-needed and long-awaited book—the first general work on the subject in over thirty years. Dr. Higgins expertly describes techniques used by policewomen in field work and patrol—handling of complaints, investigation work, interview and interrogation of adults and juveniles, problems involving arrest, search and detention, preparation of cases for court, and courtroom behavior. Various specialized skills useful in police work are discussed . . . Judo, marksmanship, fingerprinting, crime photography, and public relations work. Other chapters survey recent trends in the employment and training of women police and set forth a recommended training program. An extensive glossary and an up-to-date bibliography augment the text. Pub. '61, 196 pp., 27 il., $6.50.

PATROL ADMINISTRATION by G. Douglas Gourley and Allen P. Bristow, both of Los Angeles State College. Despite current trends toward specialization the patrol force remains the backbone of police service. Its responsibility is all inclusive—its service indispensable. The present work by authors Gourley and Bristow is truly an examination in depth of the administration of the patrol function in law enforcement. The authors criticize and analyze present methods and systems of patrol. They discuss administration techniques to supplement the patrolman—policewomen, reserves, police dogs, integrated police-fire personnel, and police cadets. The planning process as it relates to the patrol function is explored in detail, including tactical as well as operational plans. Planning is related to patrol distribution and several suggested distribution systems are outlined. Special equipment required by the modern patrol force is examined . . . communications, vehicles, weapons, and patrol stations. Other important subjects under discussion include supervision, inspection, assignment, training and reporting requirements. Professors Gourley and Bristow recognize public relations as a special problem of the patrol force and they offer to the patrol administrator some very useful techniques. Administrators will find a number of excellent practical guides in the Appendices: Sample Procedure Manual for the One Man Patrol Car; Proposed Police Cadet Program—Los Angeles Police Department; Sample Watch Inspection Procedure; Sample Sick-time Supervisory Calendar; Excerpts from Sample Vehicle Purchase Specifications; Sample Automobile Lease Specifications. Pub. '61, 388 pp., 87 il. (Police Science Series), $11.50.

SAFETY IN POLICE PURSUIT DRIVING by Edward E. Dougherty, Physical and Document Security Branch, U.S. Internal Revenue Service. Pursuit driving at its best is a risky business. At its worst it can be a menace to people on the highways. To help those employed in a hazardous profession, Mr. Dougherty has set down in comprehensive yet concise fashion the "whys" and "wherefores" of the trade. The information presented here represents the combined experience of many enforcement officers—federal, state, and local. Coverage includes: The Pursuit Driver; High Speed Driving Policy; Hazards; Pursuit; Safety Belts; Vehicles, Equipment and Maintenance; Training; Defensive Driving and Vision; Overtaking Techniques and Transportation of Prisoners. Pub. '61, 112 pp., 4 il. (Police Science Series), $4.25.

FUNDAMENTALS OF CRIMINAL INVESTIGATION (2nd Ptg.) by Charles E. O'Hara, Western Reserve University. The entire field (usually requiring three or four books) in one volume—criminal law, laboratory methods, physical evidence, interrogation, and helpful hints applicable in special situations. "It's all covered—but good! In fact, the only question that Mr. O'Hara doesn't clear up adequately for us is—like we mentioned before—how the heck did he learn so much so quick! We'll buy this one. Suggest you do, too."—The Texas Lawman. Pub. '61, 744 pp., 98 il., $10.50.

RESUSCITATION OF THE UNCONSCIOUS VICTIM: A Manual for Rescue Breathing (2nd Ed.). By Peter Safar, Johns Hopkins Univ., and Martin C. McMahon, Baltimore Fire Dept. How to handle such emergencies rapidly and correctly is the subject of this expertly written manual. Recommendations are based on the authors' experience with actual resuscitations and on research conducted at the Baltimore City Hospitals. AN IMPORTANT ADDITION TO THE SECOND EDITION IS AN ILLUSTRATED DESCRIPTION OF THE NEW METHOD OF CLOSED CHEST CARDIAC MASSAGE FOR CASES OF CIRCULATORY FAILURE. "The advent of this new information on resuscitation coupled with the also recent findings concerning closed chest cardiac massage will enable more lives to be saved by those of us who still have the responsibility and the desire to KNOW WHAT TO DO; KNOW HOW TO DO; KNOW WHEN TO DO."—Texas Police Journal. Pub. '61, 100 pp., 36 il., $2.00.

THE NARCOTIC OFFICER'S NOTEBOOK by Malachi L. Harney, Formerly Assistant to the U.S. Commissioner of Narcotics, Washington, D.C., and John C. Cross, Division of Narcotic Control, State of Illinois. This is an important book for all serious students of the multifaceted problem of drug addiction in this country. The authors write from close acquaintance with the problem—an acquaintance possessed by few as to duration, depth and diversity. In their own personal experience and in that of the persons who trained them is reflected almost the whole history of narcotic control in the United States. This first-hand account dispels some present-day misinformation on the subject and puts the whole situation in proper perspective. In the matter of cure and rehabilitation the authors are optimistic but cautiously so. They warn against half-way measures, against reliance on any single isolated programs, and against any loosening of present controls on narcotic drugs which, in their judgment, would invite disaster. Pub. '61, 276 pp., 33 il., $8.50.

THE OFFICER IN THE SMALL DEPARTMENT by Arthur S. Aubry, Jr., Florida Forest Service, Tallahassee. How is the training program handled in most departments numbering from as few as five or six men up to fifty? The answer is simple—there is no training officer and no training program. Essentially, the newly appointed officer purchases a uniform, puts on the shield and revolver, and thereby is magically transformed into an officer. Now at last an effective substitute for formal training is available to the young officer. Mr. Aubry selected for these twenty-two chapters basic material from the vast field of topics which comprise police activities. Each chapter is focused toward the officer's direct and immediate needs: The History of Policing—The Derivations of Law—The Constitution; Police Qualities and Duties; Police Patrol; Arrest with Warrant; Arrest Without Warrant; Other Considerations for Arrest and Treatment of Prisoners; State Laws of Arrest; Searches and Seizures; State Laws of Search and Seizure; Evidence and the Rules of Evidence; Preparation of Cases and Testifying in Court; The Law of Crimes; The Law of Specific Crimes; Information and Informants—Sources of Information; Note Taking and Report Writing; Scene of the Crime and Photographing the Scene; Interviews and Interrogations; Criminal Investigation; Fingerprints and Technique of Fingerprinting; Fingerprints—Chance Impressions; Firearms and Police Arsenal Weapons; Public Relations. Pub. '61, 416 pp., 46 il., $10.50.

10

HANDBOOK OF EMERGENCY TOXICOLOGY: A Guide for the Identification, Diagnosis and Treatment of Poisoning (2nd Ed.) by Sidney Kaye, Medical College of Virginia. The new Second Edition of Dr. Kaye's popular handbook includes the latest and most up-to-date information available on poisons. New technics and rapid simplified procedures are included. All tests are geared for speed and simplicity to assist poison control centers in making rapid evaluation in questions of emergency poisoning—particularly for the common ones such as ethyl and methyl alcohols, carbon monoxide, barbiturates, arsenic, mercury, aspirin, and others. Early recognition of the characteristic signs and symptoms of poisons is a vital factor in the prevention of death due to poisoning. One day this recognition problem will confront you. Then the question will arise, "Is this ill health, disease, or intoxication by a poison or a toxic agent and what can be done to support life?" Dr. Kaye's book will answer these questions for you. As one reviewer said, this book "shows immediately what should be done as first aid." —International Criminal Police Review. Pub. '61, 392 pp., 32 il. (Amer. Lec. Public Protection), $10.75.

THE HUMAN SKELETON IN FORENSIC MEDICINE by Wilton Marion Krogman, University of Pennsylvania. It was not the author's intention to make anyone an "expert" in one easy lesson. He does tell what can be done, what should be done, how to do it, and when to call for special aid in the event that human skeletal material is uncovered. Reference is made primarily to the skeletal remains of deceased persons —to living bones only when radiological studies are involved. The skeleton from foetus to old age is dealt with. This book will be of vital assistance in three main types of cases—NATURAL DEATH of "disappearance cases" long lost to view; INTENTIONAL DEATH with purposive attempts to dispose of the body as by fire, dismemberment, use of corrosives, and general or regional mutilation by slashing, gouging, pounding, etc.; ACCIDENTAL DEATH as in domiciliary fires, auto, train and plane crash fires, crushing injuries, and the exigencies of mass burial in armed conflict circumstances. Identification of the bones centers around age at time of death, sex, race and/or ethnic group, stature, body build, and physiognomic reconstruction. The result is a highly specialized evaluation of our present state of knowledge in this area—a book that will find a lasting place as a reference for law enforcement agencies the world over. Pub. '62. 368 pp., 232 il., $14.00.

JUVENILE VANDALISM: A Study of Its Nature and Prevention by John M. Martin, Fordham University. What is vandalism? What kinds of children and adolescents commit vandalism? What are their motivations? How can vandalism best be prevented? John M. Martin answers these and many other questions in this book—the first to be published on the subject. Using statistics and case studies and working at various levels of theory, the author explores the roots of vandalism as found in the personalities of vandals . . . in the quality of their home life, in their neighborhoods and peer groups, and in the features of American society itself. Age, sex, ethnic, and socio-economic characteristics of juvenile vandals as compared with those of other delinquents are discussed and vandalism is classified into three basic types. Taking into account these and other findings of his study, the author makes specific recommendations for reducing the incidence of such crime. Individuals and groups interested in vandalism will use the conclusions presented in this study as "bench marks" to direct their own investigations and to guide their efforts to prevent such property destruction. Pub. '61, 160 pp., 12 il., $6.50.

Briefly, clearly, interestingly, The National Observer tells you what is going on in the world and what it means.

It brings to you the truth—without distortion, without sensationalism.

So if your reading time is limited, this new paper, this compact national weekly of broad cultural range, is for you.

Birth of an Idea

Before there could be any National Observer, it had to be thought up, and the idea explored.

From the beginning, the project looked exciting—a time-saving, once-a-week national newspaper of highest quality for the home.

Dow Jones & Company, Inc., originator of the idea, researched its possibilities; found a large coast-to-coast need for such a new and better weekly.

As publisher of The Wall Street Journal, Dow Jones was also well aware that its own vast news-gathering resources, brilliant journalistic talents and skills, were ideal for producing the new publication.

Why not do it?

So the same organization that publishes The Wall Street Journal, the great national business daily, now offers you The National Observer, its new weekly.

And in The National Observer, you will get the same dependability and clarity of news reporting, the same freedom from distortion and sensationalism, that leading business and professional men throughout the country count on in The Wall Street Journal.

The National Observer will bring to you and to your family, in the home, rich satisfaction of your news needs and cultural interests.

Schools, Unions and Industry Scored on Job Training Here

Foundation Says Techniques in Vocational Institutions Here Are Obsolete

By GENE CURRIVAN

Efforts to prepare teen-agers here for employment were indicted yesterday in a report by a nonprofit organization specializing in educational research and the study of delinquency and discrimination.

The charges, supported by fifteen city and state organizations, were directed at the city schools—principally the vocational institutions—city agencies, unions and industry.

The vocational schools were accused of giving obsolete training that in many cases is not acceptable to unions. The Food Trades High School, for example, was said to offer training "that approaches the dimensions of a scandal."

Both labor and management were said to be guilty of discrimination and the city agencies that operate programs in the area of youth and work were accused of having no coordinated policy.

The report said that with about 50,000 youths, including 27,000 who have dropped out of school, looking for work each year, there was poor correlation between job opportunities and training. The unemployment rate runs to 20 per cent.

In some cases, it said, the youngsters have been trained for practically nonexistent jobs such as cabinet-making, while others have had little, if any, guidance on choosing a vocation.

'General Curriculum' Assailed

In the latter category are those who were enrolled in the "general curriculum" in the academic high schools, described as "a catch-all of courses in which less able students generally receive a watered-down academic program."

"The school has not the slightest idea what will become of them vocationally," the report said. "Their entrance into industry is governed, more than anything else, by chance."

Blackstone-Shelburne

Mrs. Mary Conway Kohler

The report said the needs of about 25 per cent of the vocational and academic pupils were not met.

The report, "Youth and Work in New York City," is part of an eighteen-month national survey of youth employment by the Taconic Foundation. The foundation was set up in 1958 and is headed by Stephen R. Currier.

Mr. Currier is president of Currier & Co., a concern that manages a variety of commercial holdings, but he devotes much of his time to the foundation. A spokesman described the foundation as philanthropic organization concerned mainly with urban affairs, including social welfare and race relations.

One of the principal recommendations was that the Board of Education establish a "skill center" that would operate day and night, all year round, for persons of all ages. It would give free courses to drop-outs, unskilled graduates and adults in such diverse fields as foreign languages, industrial chemistry and cooking.

TRAINING FOR JOBS CALLED OBSOLETE

The center, the report suggested, could concentrate costly equipment in one place, making obsolescence of training equipment less likely.

Agreement Urged

The report called for "agreement among schools, industry and unions to standardize training both in apprenticeship and in formal two-year post-high school technical courses."

At present, the report noted, with some of the unions refusing to fully credit vocational school training, applicants for jobs must spend an additional three to five years in apprenticeship.

At this rate "it takes almost as long to be a plumber as to be a doctor," said Mrs. Mary Conway Kohler, who directed the survey.

Mrs. Kohler was formerly Children's Court judge in San Francisco, a member of President Kennedy's Committee on Youth Employment, a Ford Foundation consultant and a consultant to the Temporary Commission on the Courts of New York State.

Speaking at a press conference on Friday at the Taconic Foundation's headquarters, 666 Fifth Avenue, she said that a youth who spent three years in printing school found that he had to start from scratch when he entered the industry.

There has been no orderly transition or adequate attempt at a "breakthrough" by either the schools or the unions, the report held. Exceptions noted were the High School of Fashion Industries and the Aviation High School, both of which benefit from current employment demands.

Equipment Called 'Primitive'

The equipment in the main, eighty-six-year-old building of Food Trades High School "can only be described as primitive," the report said.

"This school was one of the victims of the lack of attention paid by the Board [of Education] to repair needs in recent years," it noted. "As a result, the conditions under which food is prepared and served are unsanitary and sometimes dangerous."

There are 654 boys in the school, but because of the high drop-out rate only fifty-six were graduated last year. This is in spite of the statements by industry representatives that they can guarantee further training and employment to any graduate. The board is planning a new school but it is not scheduled for completion until 1965.

The study found that two of every three youngsters dropped out of vocational schools and one in every three dropped out of academic high schools. The Board of Education has estimated it spends $925.96 annually for each vocational pupil and $602.96 for each academic high school pupil.

Among the report's recommendations were the following:

¶The school must bear the greatest responsibility for setting the child on the right road to educational and eventual occupational success.

¶All-day neighborhood schools should be expanded and also cover junior high school youngsters.

¶Students must be provided with a greater number of opportunities to explore various kinds of work before choosing a career.

¶Schools, city government, unions and employers must cooperate to end discrimination against Negroes and Puerto Ricans and unions must end opposition to youth membership.

¶Vocational schools should be kept open in the summer.

¶Students should not be required to spend half their day in academic and half in shop work when a flexible arrangement would be more practicable.

¶Responsibility for coordination of youth and work problems must be lodged at the top city government level.

¶There should be one counselor for every 300 high school students.

¶The Board of Education should establish a center for research on basic educational problems and evaluation of experimental programs in the schools and community.

The sponsors of the report were the American Association of University Women (New York Branch), the American Jewish Congress (Metropolitan Council), the American Jewish Committee (New York Chapter), the Child Study Association of America, the Citizens Committee for Children of New York, the Metropolitan Council, B'nai Brith, the New York Adult Education Council, the New York City Mission Society, the New York State Congress of Parents and Teachers (Metropolitan District), the New York State Citizens Committee for the Public Schools, the Public Education Association, United Neighborhood Houses of New York, United Parents Associations of New York City, the Urban League of Greater New York and the Vocational Advisory Service.

I regret to inform you that the title " Feed-back of Social Science Data into Local Communities: An Experiment in Communication" to which you refer is simply the title of a research project. The project is still underway and Dr. Grigg and I have not published a paper by this title.

In lieu of this I am sending you a copy of another publication which has resulted from the project. I might say that the results of this "INVENTORY" have been fed back into the community but we have not yet analyzed the results.

Dear Friend:

Perhaps the most important and valuable educational tool ADL has ever produced will become available to you in March, with the publication of "SOME OF MY BEST FRIENDS...."

"SOME OF MY BEST FRIENDS..." must be read by every Christian who unwittingly or not practices discrimination or who is trapped into sustaining and extending it. From no better source can one and all gain an understanding into this very real and pervasive problem which affects the lives of five and one half million Americans, to the loss of the entire nation.

We believe the educational value of this book requires that it be brought to the attention of every concerned person. In order to do this we will be happy to furnish you sufficient material and bear the cost of a third class mailing to all your parishoners. We would appreciate receiving from you as soon as possible the number of informational brochures you will require for such a mailing. Your assistance will be extremely helpful in removing the scourge of anti-Semitism from the community conscience.

I have read portions of this book in galley proof form, and I would feel personally remiss in my professional duty if I failed to recommend it in the strongest terms so that it did not come to the attention of the widest possible audience. Please use the attached convenient Order Form for obtaining your personal copy of the book, and we will absorb postage if you will remit with your order.

Sincerely yours,

"Some of My Best Friends..."

The term is an apology and an excuse — and often a smokescreen — for the discrimination used to deprive Jews of their equal rights as American citizens. For anti-Semitism did not die with Hitler or with the decline of organized bigotry in the United States. Instead, it lies imbedded in the American subconscious, rising to the surface in times of tension and, above all, manifesting itself in hundreds of ways in daily life.

One aspect of anti-Semitism — discrimination against Jews in the United States — has assumed patterns and practices that exist nowhere else in the world, making it almost a uniquely American phenomenon. It is not readily understandable, often enough not even identifiable. Yet, as the authors of this remarkably authoritative book show, it is pervasive and real, affecting much more than the lives of five and a half million Americans. The authors' concern, of course, is not limited to Jews. It is all those who suffer under its patterns, including people who unwittingly or not practice discrimination, those who are trapped into sustaining and extending it, and the nation which loses by it.

In their work, Benjamin R. Epstein and Arnold Forster tell how discrimination operates in the fields of education, employment, housing, and many aspects of American social life. Their title comes from the expression, "Some of my best friends are Jews," a term often used to explain away acts of prejudice. They offer a variety of fascinating case studies which show precisely where discrimination exists, who is practicing it, and how.

Almost all of these case studies — which include the recent Scarsdale Golf Club affair and the disclosure of a point system for weeding out "undesirable" home owners in Grosse Pointe, Michigan — have never before been fully told and analyzed for their implications. All this is set against a broad sociological context, explaining the roots of discrimination — "prejudice in action" — in this country and offering insights on how it might be excised from the American scene.

by Benjamin R. Epstein and Arnold Forster

Benjamin R. Epstein is national director of the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and has studied and written extensively on problems of prejudice in this country and abroad. Arnold Forster is the League's general counsel and director of its civil rights division. "Some of My Best Friends . . ." is their third collaborative book exploring bigotry in the United States. Their material is drawn from the research facilities and records of the Anti-Defamation League, a nation-wide human relations organization devoted, for almost half a century, to a continuing study of anti-minority prejudice and to a full-scale educational program to combat it. As part of B'nai B'rith, the national Jewish service order, the League works in support of equal rights for all races and creeds in a democratic America.

Dear Ed:

Before stating the real purpose of this letter I would like to take the opportunity to send personal regards and wishes for your continued success. Sixteen years or so have passed since my after-working-hours orbit veered only between Franklin Street (Loyola University College) and Wabash Avenue (Sheil School of Social Studies) and anyone who traveled that path in those days could only address a letter to you now by your first name. I have often wondered what ever happend to WORK.

In February we received a letter from you requesting us to return an enclosed card if we wish to continue receiving your Newsletter and other announcements of your Commission. We did return the card but have received none of your publications this year. So, if for some reason our card went astray, would you kindly correct your records so that we will receive future publications?

Thank you and again, best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

On our next trip to Jackson, Mississippi, we will locate another copy of the report of the Mississippi General Legislative Investigating Committee.

When we first saw this report, friends in the capitol press room helped secure copies for us. After these were gone, John Doar of the Justice Department indicated he would like to have a copy. Last week, we had to go directly to the office of Lt.-Gov. Paul Johnson to secure this copy.

HOW TO GET MORE MONEY FROM YOUR BUSINESS THRU THE VACATIONING NEGRO

You want to get more money from your business?

That's exactly what you will get as your share of some $100,000,000 that is spent annually by over 10,000,000 vacationing negroes in their travels thru the U.S.A. And you can get your share simply by making use of the WORLD-WIDE TRAVELGUIDE.

Read on while we tell you the story, as short as possibly, of how this "Guide to More Money" came into being, and how it will bring you more business.

This idea of a "WORLD-WIDE TRAVELGUIDE" came to its author, John F. Guthrie, during the 10 years sailing the globe with Uncle Sams Navy---and from many years of extensive world travel on his own. Especially during these years on his own there were many times that he slept and ate in his own car -- all to avoid the embarrassment of being turned down by Hotels and Restaurants that he knew nothing about.

So, John F. Guthrie, now a successful advertising man, sought a solution to the problems that beset the negro on his vacation travels - with the result that he wrote a book (5-1/2 x 8-1/2 with over 64 pages). 10,000 copies will be printed by the America Advertising of Cincinnati in the first part of 1962. Distribution will be made from suitable newstands where the prospective negro vacationer can buy it for $1.00. The book is jam-packed with practical information on most areas of the States and foreign countries. It locates -- recreational facilities -- historical sites -- fishing and swimming centers -- including facts of interest about all. The speed-laws of the various states are listed. Attractive photos illustrate bright-spots of many areas. But Best of All, there will be a LISTING OF HOTELS, RESTAURANTS, AND PLACES THAT CAN AND WILL PROVIDE ACCOMODATIONS FOR THE VACATIONING NEGRO.

These listings will consist of a very select and limited number of business places in each location. They will be run alphabetically to Cities and States, and can be a minimum listing of your "Name, Address, Phone # and Rates" or the use of a full page ad. At all times the guide will act as a ready reference directory to the vacationer in need of accomodations.

Surely you will now agree that placing your list in the "WORLD-WIDE TRAVELGUIDE" ought to bring you more money & more business. It will be like putting the "Welcome Mat" at your door, -- with no embarrassing questions asked. Yes, the traveling negro will know in advance that his money is good at your place of business.

And the printing and distribution of the Guide is guaranteed or your money refunded.

Most important the cost of such listing is amazingly low. Rates start at only $2.50. By all means be sure to read the enclosed circular so you can learn complete details of the low advertising rates. Not only that, but see how you can save an added 10% just by returning your order to us promptly. But do it NOW before you start something else -- ITS THAT IMPORTANT. You'll count it as a wise investment.

QUICK ACTION IS IMPORTANT to meet the printing deadline. The dollars you invest never before bought so much value as the proposition before you right now. Mail the handy order form with your best copy today....NOW!

Cordially

TV Panel Declares Washington 'Most Neglected City'

By Wallace Terry
Staff Reporter

A nationwide telecast last night examined problems of crime, employment, housing and school desegregation in the District of Columbia and found the city "the most neglected" in the United States.

Howard K. Smith, an ABC-TV news commentator, quizzed several persons conversant with District conditions, including District Commissioner Walter N. Tobriner, in a news commentary program over WMAL-TV.

Because they have "no influence on their government," District residents are at a greater disadvantage than any other American urban population in correcting these ills, Smith said.

"Washington, as a result, is the Nation's most neglected city."

But relief is ahead for District residents, Smith noted, because the 23d Amendment will give them "at least" the Presidential vote and because "reapportionment . . . threatens to eliminate from Congress some of the city's worst tormentors."

He said he referred to some members of the House District Committee who "keep things bad by their control of the policies and the purse strings" in order "to win votes at home by telling how bad things are in integrated Washington."

The District needs more funds to improve school and housing conditions, he declared.

C. Sumner Stone, editor of the Washington Afro-American, attacked what he termed the anti-Negro bias of Sen. Robert C. Byrd (D-W. Va.), chairman of the Senate District Appropriations subcommittee, Rep. John McMillan (D-S. C.), House District Committee chairman and Rep. James C. Davis (D-Ga.), chairman of a House District subcommittee.

The District is further handicapped, Stone declared, because persons seeking high District posts must show "some anti-Negro feeling" in order to win support from Byrd, McMillan or Davis.

Smith said the District had desegregated "more aspects of life more rapidly than any other city" and, according to some observers, made "noble progress" in the area of civil rights.

But opponents of equal rights for Negroes, Smith said, point "with horror" to Washington's rising crime rate and insist that integration is the cause. These critics fail to realize that such conditions "exist in every neglected, overcrowded American city, regardless of race composition," he asserted.

Tobriner dispelled reports that Washington had become a "city of terror" after dark as "more colorful than it's true."

He said that the District in 1961 ranked sixth among 16 cities of comparable size in the rate of serious crimes per 1000 population.

"The National Capital obviously is not setting national crime records," he added.

District School Superintendent Carl F. Hansen denied the charge that integration has hurt District schools.

He said that since desegregation began in 1955 there has been a "significant improvement in academic standards."

Asked by Smith if discipline had become worse in the schools since desegregation, Hansen replied that it was "illogical" to relate the two. Discipline must be related to conditions in the homes of the children, he explained.

THE recent assumption of responsibility by the Federal government for depressed localities marks a historic change in American political tradition, for in the past the problems of local areas have been left largely to the local governments and private agencies. The reasons for this new sense of national obligation have been recognition that the persistence of depressed regions within the nation is both an economic and a political menace—and also the realization that the failure of the United States to solve the problems of its own underdeveloped areas casts doubt upon our ability to help the nations of Asia, Africa, and South America realize their expectations in the Free World.

Chief among the depressed areas of the United States is the Southern Appalachian Region, which is composed of 190 counties and more than 80,000 square miles in seven Southeastern states—Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky, North Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia, and West Virginia. The Federal government conducted an economic and social survey of the Region in 1935, when the whole South was the nation's principal economic problem. Since then, while the rest of the South has gone on to improve its economic position vis-a-vis the nation as a whole, the Southern Appalachian Region has lagged behind the pace of national development, despite the efforts of numerous agencies to redress this dangerous disparity.

In 1958 a group of research scholars, almost all of whom were associated with institutions of learning in or near the Region, undertook again to survey the Southern Appalachian Region with the idea of reviewing its situation in comparison with the findings of a generation earlier. Aided by grants from the Ford Foundation which ultimately amounted to more than $250,000, the scholars this time decided to analyze thoroughly all of the social, economic, and cultural aspects of the Region.

With this new, coordinated approach, the team of scholars began a systematic study of the Region's agriculture, industry, education, local governments, health, religion, public and private welfare agencies, literature and folk culture, tourism, mining and forestry, the relation of rural to urban areas, the attitudes, beliefs, and aspirations of the people, and the causes of their accelerating migration from the Region. It shortly became apparent that the many-sided approach was far more difficult than had been anticipated, principally because the multitude of problems of the Region were found to be at bottom one large basic problem, the solution of which would require a program more fundamental than any attempted in the past.

As the nature of this larger, transcendant problem began to take shape in the minds of the group after many conferences on the amassed data (which has resulted in more than seventy maps and charts and about fifty tables in this volume), the passage of the Area Redevelopment Act in 1961 gave evidence of the nation's determination to assist its depressed regions with an overall, national approach rather than depend upon agencies of limited means or the areas themselves.

The 1935 study had viewed the basic problem of the Region as growing out of improper land use and relation of population to land. Conceding the impressive gains since made, the editors of the present study have found that most efforts—even the new legislation—were essentially one-sided and failed to deal with this long-recognized imbalance between population and resources.

A realistic approach must deal not only with development of natural resources but with the human resources of the Region. Some subareas of the Region will never meet the expectations of either the inhabitants or planners, because they cannot be made to support their large populations. Loans, grants, highways, and public assistance will not by themselves redress this basic imbalance; area development (such as industrialization) must rather be confined to the subareas which lend themselves profitably to this kind of development, and the people in the other localities must be encouraged to reduce population in line with resources. "The basic guiding principle which should prevail in the development of the human resources of the Region," Professor Rupert B. Vance reports in the concluding chapter "is that the people should be provided with opportunities to develop their full social and economic potential whether they remain in the Region or leave it." The study reveals that, despite the loss through voluntary migration of almost 2,000,000 persons from the Region during the decades from 1940 to 1960, the total population remains 5,600,000, or a fifth greater than in the 1930's, and the recommendation even then was for a drastic reduction in the number of people.

With the conception of the problem as a single one embracing both resources and people, a number of interesting implications emerged. The first result was the shattering of some of the myths which have clung to the Region. Lowering of coal miners' wages, for example, will not revive the industry or increase employment in it, as many have supposed; public assistance in some instances contributes more toward perpetuating a "culture of poverty" than toward rehabilitation; programs of vocational training in agriculture are ineffective, for already too many people are now engaged in the predominantly subsistence agriculture of the Region. The evidence points to the metropolitan rather than the rural areas as offering the best hope for development; vocational training is not effective unless the trainees have had a good fundamental education; the development of handicrafts has cultural but not economic value for the Region. Also contrary to much opinion presently held, mountain people are no longer fatalistic about their situation; they share the heightened expectations common to all underdeveloped areas; they wish for education; they look favorably upon programs of birth control; and they are voluntarily migrating in large numbers from areas which do not provide opportunity.

The larger implication, however, is that solution of the problem will call for more drastic, more painful, and more realistic action than is envisaged under present programs. Pleasant and popular measures must be allied with the sacrifice of some deeply ingrained attitudes and local interests. Hard logic implies selection of some subareas for development while others are encouraged to decrease their population; it demands disagreeable reform for local educational and political institutions, the acquiescence of business and political leaders in preparing their youth for careers outside their communities and of religious groups in programs of population control.

Because this study reveals the basic similarity between the problem of our own depressed areas and those of other parts of the world, this volume also has meaning for everyone who would understand the critical task facing the United States.

Southern Will Spurs Change

Book Review

SEEDS OF SOUTHERN CHANGE: THE LIFE OF WILL ALEXANDER. By Wilma Dykeman and James Stokely. Chicago. 343 pp. $5.95.

"SEEDS OF SOUTHERN CHANGE" is the story of a great humanitarian — one of the greatest of our times: Will Alexander, native of Missouri, citizen of the world, Methodist minister, sociologist, New Deal administrator, college president, philosopher, writer, farmer, leader for a generation in the South's only inter-racial movements, friend of rich men, college professors, and politicians, and a very lovable human being.

The book is more than a biography. It is a story of the aspirations for a better South of a group of men and women of both races, mobilized and held together by this gentle person called "Dr. Will." The authors, James Stokely and Wilma Dykeman, a husband and wife team, live in Newport, Tenn. They are ideally fitted to produce this book for they have, in addition to professional skill as writers, an avid interest in the social and political conflicts which this remarkable story depicts.

IT IS A WELL-written record of the amazing activities of a sensitive man who was deeply stirred by the plight of the South's poor—particularly its Negro poor. It is a faithful portrayal of many struggles for decency and justice with the threads of drama and human interest binding together the diverse pursuits of a gifted leader.

This story just had to be told. Dr. Will Alexander's career had many facets, but the story highlights the fact that once his passion for social justice fastened upon the neglect of the South's racial minority, his major energies were thereafter devoted to correcting that condition. And one might assume that none of his tasks were ever finished since even his frustrations are graphically related.

But the document confirms the feeling that steady and substantial gains were made in this epochal 40-year period ending with Will Alexander's death in 1956. The tragic account of lynchings leads into the great crusade of the church women of the South, who, inspirited by Will Alexander, constituted the largest single factor in ridding the South of this evil.

I WOULD ALSO include among his successes the assault upon farm tenancy sparked by Dr. Will and culminating in the famous Bankhead-Jones legislation. Some heavy reading is cleverly broken at intervals by such references as Dr. Will's chuckle over Walter Hines Page's statement, "Next to fried food, the South has suffered most from oratory."

I knew the hero well and admired him greatly. I was "one of his boys" for a half-dozen years. For that reason perhaps I am incapable of a completely objective judgment on this book. It is the only book on the subject that mentions me as often as Franklin D. Roosevelt. (You see what I mean?) Still, I say the book is fine reading for all who are interested in the changing South, and improved race relations.

LWV Gives Priority To Fair Housing in '62

The League of Women Voters of Chicago has given top priority in its 1962-63 program to promoting fair housing practices.

"Item No. 1" in the action program adopted by the League at its annual meeting in April includes:

- Working with other organizations to promote legislation.
- Working toward voluntary change in existing practices of real estate and mortgage lending institutions.
- Working with community organizations to promote orderly change.
- Working to obtain a housing study item on the League's state agenda.
- Editing and revising resource material put out by the housing committee of the League; making this material available to other groups and individuals.
- Participation in the Speaker's Bureau with talks on the pattern of Chicago's housing, the need and desirability of legislation, non-legislative solutions, and other findings.

The Chicago League, with 1,174 members, is a nonpartisan organization dedicated to the principles of self-government established in the United States Constitution.

The March issue of Chicago Voter, the League's newsletter, stated:

"Legislation opposing discriminatory practices in housing as adopted in New York City, Pittsburgh and an increasing number of states was examined, both as to content and effects to date. Such legislation was definitely regarded as a desirable step toward solving the problem.

"League members would like to see housing programs involving use of federal funds or federal supervision, such as FHA, VA, FNMA, Federal Home Loan Bank Board, covered. A 'significant portion of private housing' ought to be included; a law should apply to real estate agents and brokers and to mortgage lending institutions; it should probably include advertising media; and there should be an official commission to administer."

New City Hospital Law Bans Bias in Staff Appointments

The City Council of Chicago on April 18 passed an amendment to the city's hospital ordinance which forbids hospitals to discriminate in the employment or appointment of physicians to the medical staff.

The amendment states:

"Whereas, it is in the interest of the public health, safety and welfare of the people of Chicago that in the employment of physicians and the appointment of medical staffs, no person shall be denied such employment or appointment by reasons of race, color, creed, national origin or ancestry; now, therefore, be it ordained by the City Council of the City of Chicago:

"No hospital, and no person who is acting as superintendent or manager or who is otherwise in charge or control of any hospital or in charge or control of employment by the hospital or of appointments to the staff of the hospital shall, in the employment of any physician or the appointment of any person to the medical staff of the hospital, discriminate against any person on account of race, color, creed, national origin or ancestry."

A complete list of the Negro physicians holding medical staff appointments at private, non-governmental hospitals other than Provident, Louise Burg and Ida Mae Scott is available from the Commission on Human Relations.

FOR Holds 4 Conferences in May, Plans June Parley in Rockford

Four conferences were held in May and another is planned for June to gain support for state fair housing legislation. The United Citizens' Committee for Freedom of Residence in Illinois sponsors the meetings.

The Northern Illinois Regional conference will meet in Rockford on June 23. Conferences held in May include the East-Central Illinois conference on May 5 in the First Presbyterian Church in Decatur; the Southern Illinois conference in East St. Louis on May 12; the Tri-State conference at Augustana college in Rock Island, May 18 and 19, and the Rockford college parley in Rockford on May 16.

Earlier, local committees of FOR held a West-Central Illinois conference in Peoria on April 28, a Northern Illinois conference in Rockford on March 17, and another conference in East St. Louis on February 24.

I am sending you a copy of a summary of a study which was done by staff members of the College of Education, University of Georgia, concerning reading in selected school systems in the state. This summary has been reproduced in very limited quantity, and it is not our intention for it to be widely circulated, but we thought you would be interested in the summary.

Gentlemen:

In a recent mailing from you we have noted mention of the ACLU's "Annual Report" on U.S. civil liberties. If it is available still, we would very much appreciate receiving a copy for our files.

WHATEVER YOUR SCORE . . . you have an interest in civil liberties! Protect it by joining the

AMERICAN CIVIL LIBERTIES UNION

The ACLU is the only permanent national non-partisan organization devoted solely to defending the Bill of Rights for everybody. The Union fights for the civil liberties even of those whose anti-democratic opinions it abhors. But the ACLU bars from its governing councils all adherents of all totalitarian doctrines.

Today the ACLU with its Board and National Committee of leaders in every field, its thirty state and city affiliates (and their many chapters), its corps of volunteer lawyers, and its experienced staff, is engaged primarily on four fronts. YOU have a stake in the American Civil Liberties Union's fight in these four areas, among others:

- TO ELIMINATE second-class citizenship for Negroes, Puerto Ricans, American Indians and other minorities.
- AGAINST both governmental and private pressure group censorship of movies, plays, books, newspapers, magazines, radio, and television.
- TO PROMOTE fair procedures in court trials, congressional and administrative hearings.
- AGAINST those indiscriminate federal, state and local measures which, though aimed at Communists, threaten the civil liberties of all Americans.

The ACLU's Thirty State and City Affiliates

The ACLU needs and welcomes the support of all those—and only those—whose devotion to civil liberties is not qualified by adherence to Communist, Fascist, KKK, or other totalitarian doctrine.

YOU ARE NEEDED TOO — as a member of the ACLU. The Union depends on its 53,000 members (our enrollment has doubled in the past six years) for its entire support. To meet the challenge of the times, we need 10,000 new members this year.

USE THE MEMBERSHIP BLANK BELOW to become a $10 member, if possible, but JOIN—with whatever dues you can afford. You will be affiliating yourself with an important organization, and you will have a part in keeping America a home of freedom.

PARTICIPATING MEMBER $100

COOPERATING MEMBER ..... $50 SUPPORTING MEMBER $10

SUSTAINING MEMBER ..... $25 CONTRIBUTING MEMBER ... $ 5

Members listed above receive the Union's 80-page Annual Report on U.S. liberties and the monthly paper Civil Liberties. They are also entitled to single copies of some 30 other publications without charge. A weekly bulletin, the main content of which is largely duplicated by Civil Liberties, is available on request to members contributing $10 or more. Associate Members, at $2, receive Civil Liberties and the Annual Report.

By joining the national ACLU, you will join the affiliate in your area, and the larger your check the more it will receive. (Except in Northern California, where the affiliate maintains its membership separately. However, the national ACLU also welcomes support from members in Northern California.)

TWENTY QUESTIONS ON CIVIL LIBERTIES

You believe in the Constitution and the Bill of Rights—but how do you feel they should be interpreted today, in times of domestic complexity and world tension? Short summaries like those below cannot include the many necessary qualifications, but your answers should tell you where you stand on some representative American Civil Liberties Union policies (which were not all adopted unanimously by the ACLU Board—it seldom agrees 100% on any question).

To check whether you and the ACLU agree on the statements below, put a circle around Y (for YES) if you agree; if you do not agree, circle N (for NO).

1. Students receiving financial aid from the government should be required to swear that they are not members of the Communist Party. ..... Y N

2. Congressional investigations into "un-American" propaganda and association should be ended. Y N

3. Labor unions should be required to give to all rank-and-file members the guarantee of due process, free speech and equality. ..... Y N

4. Belonging to the Communist Party should be a federal crime. ..... Y N

5. Everyone who invokes the privilege against self-incrimination must be guilty as suspected. ..... Y N

6. Any private individual should have the right to criticize any government or government official anywhere in the world. ..... Y N

7. Parochial school pupils are entitled to free bus service, paid for from public funds. ..... Y N

8. The Postmaster General should be allowed to ban books like "Lady Chatterley's Lover." ..... Y N

9. In "cleaning up" television, the FCC must avoid all censoring of program content. ..... Y N

10. Movies, plays, and books presenting an offensive characterization of a particular racial or religious group should be suppressed. ..... Y N

11. Everyone should have the right to leave any country, including his own, and to return to his country. ..... Y N

12. Police are entitled to hold arrested persons as much as 24 hours before arraigning them in front of a magistrate. ..... Y N

13. Those accused as security risks under the federal security programs should have the right to confront and cross-examine their accusers. ..... Y N

14. The U.S. Supreme Court's power to review civil liberties cases should be curtailed. ..... Y N

15. In their war against crime policemen are entitled to listen in on private phone conversations. Y N

16. Laws against the use and sale of birth control devices violate rights of privacy guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution. ..... Y N

17. States' rights clauses in the Constitution justify efforts by certain Southern states to prevent Negroes from voting. ..... Y N

18. Racial discrimination in housing, public and private, should be prohibited by law. ..... Y N

19. Segregation in public schools violates the equal protection of the law guaranteed to all Americans by the Constitution. ..... Y N

20. To "emancipate the American Indian", reservations should be closed and federal services terminated—regardless of the tribes' wishes. ..... Y N

CHECK YOUR SCORE AFTER YOU ANSWER ALL TWENTY QUESTIONS. In the ACLU's opinion, you get 5 POINTS each for answering YES to numbers, 2, 3, 6, 9, 11, 13, 16, 18, 19, and 5 POINTS each for answering NO to numbers 1, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 12, 14, 15, 17, 20.

IF YOU SCORE 75 OR MORE, then you agree substantially with the ACLU, and are a member in spirit. Put your belief in civil liberties to work by joining the one national organization which fights —52 weeks a year—for the liberties you cherish. Use the membership blank on the other side.

While serving as United States Judge at the International Nuremberg Trial, I saw the terrible havoc the denial of civil liberties had worked upon a once proud and talented people. The enslavement of men's minds gave rise to a brutal and conscienceless hierarchy. Misery, bestiality, and fear resulted. I shall not forget it.

Since 1920, the ACLU has been reminding Americans that the Bill of Rights applies to all -- even to those who would deny its sanctuary to others.

This sometimes finds the Union championing strange bedfellows.

> In the U.S. Senate, the ACLU is fighting an already House-approved bill that would reinstate Post Office censorship of Communist propaganda abolished by the President last year.
> Conversely, the Union's New York affiliate went to court to defend the right of William F. Buckley Jr. and his right-wing National Review to hold public meetings at Hunter College.

John Pemberton, the ACLU's new Executive Director, recently spoke forcefully against those who suggest that in times of crisis our civil liberties are a luxury to be shelved for re-use in calmer times. Human rights and civil liberties, he said, "enjoyed little honor in practice before 1776, and only constant struggle for acceptance in practice ever since".

We need every voice whose devotion to civil liberties is not qualified by adherence to Communist, Fascist, KKK, or other totalitarian doctrine. We are now almost 60,000 strong, with a hard-working, experienced staff; talented volunteers -- including cooperating attorneys; and with active affiliates in 29 states and the District of Columbia. But I needn't tell you that politicians respect numbers. YOU are needed now.

I hope you will become a $10 member, but in any event join with whatever dues you can afford. When you mail the envelope above you will be adding your strength to the ACLU lever which moves the minds of men toward greater freedom in our country. Mail the envelope today ... it will go to work for civil liberties tomorrow.

Sincerely,

Francis Biddle

If you are already a member you will understand that list duplication is sometimes inevitable. You could help the Union most by using this letter and enclosure to persuade a friend to join.

The New York Times

"The A.C.L.U. . . . has been indispensable in investigating violations of civil liberties, in publicizing them and in working through the channels of public opinion and of the law to see that our constitutional principles as expressed in the Bill of Rights remain a living force . . ."

The Washington Post

"If the American Bill of Rights has served to keep this country's constitutional structure secure in the troubled decades since the First World War, a substantial share of the credit belongs to the American Civil Liberties Union . . . Americans owe gratitude to the ACLU for its service as a sentinel — for the alarms it sounds upon occasion. It can give warning of danger; but it cannot of itself maintain liberty. As ACLU Director Patrick Murphy Malin observes, 'If they want a free society, it will have to be maintained—by the people.' "

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

"Inevitably, many of the causes the American Civil Liberties Union has championed have been unpopular. The fighter for free and untrammeled speech must defend some unsavory characters who abuse their liberty. It follows that many sincere lovers of freedom have at times found themselves at odds with ACLU policy. The alternative, however, is infinitely worse, and the ACLU has earned a welcome from all who cherish the idea of a government of laws under which all men enjoy equal privileges."

THE DENVER POST

"The ACLU has stood firmly against waves of near-hysteria that have threatened, at times, to sweep away long treasured civil liberties of free speech, fair trial and equality before the law of all citizens in this country."

New York Herald Tribune

"The American Civil Liberties Union has won for itself an acknowledged role as watchdog of the citizen's liberties . . ."

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

"The ACLU has established its fearlessly independent reputation, and particularly its freedom from Communist control, by . . . years of evenhanded defense of a principle—the freedom of principle of the Bill of Rights . . ."

San Francisco Chronicle

"Both locally and nationally, the ACLU has functioned effectively for the preservation of the Bill of Rights. That is its only function. In defending the rights of those who happen to be in danger of having them violated or denied, the ACLU defends the rights of all Americans . . ."

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

" 'I do not agree with a word you say,' said Voltaire, 'but will defend to the death your right to say it.' It would be hard to find a more searching test of the genuineness of democratic sentiments than is implicit in this famous dictum. And it would be equally hard to find an organization that subjects itself to this test more often and more willingly than does the American Civil Liberties Union . . ."

Durham Morning Herald

Durham, N. C.

"The ACLU's mission is to fight for the preservation of the fundamental rights guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States, and it is a fight that's never won . . ."

The Des Moines Register

"Americans owe a debt of gratitude to the American Civil Liberties Union for its watchdog role, but its report makes clear that in a country based on freedom civil liberties must be everybody's business."

Bergen Evening Record

Hackensack, N. J.

"If the battle for democracy in the United States is ever lost it will be lost, in a manner of speaking, over the dead body of the American Civil Liberties Union . . ."

Dear Miss Levine:

I am uncertain whether or not I replied to your request for a copy of my paper "Race Relations and Social Change" given during the symposium on the Changing South at Duke during the summer. The paper now is being rewritten and will be published along with the other papers of the symposium later. Dr. Allen Sindler of the Dept. of Political Science at Duke will edit the book; I am not sure about the publisher.

9/20/62: Sorry, Mrs. Patterson. We are returning your check for $2.00 as there have been no other directories in the making since our 1959 issue, which was a "one-time" operation. We realize there is a dire need for this type of a directory but it takes funds, which we do not have, to compile such a publication, as you can well understand. Thanks for the order, at any rate.

Dear Sir:

I happened to hear "A Century of Freedom" on last Sunday evening's Witness program and I'd like to congratulate you for putting on as good a radio show as I can remember.

I would also like to know if it would be possible to get a written transcript of this particular broadcast since it discussed a subject which is very much the concern of the Southern Regional Council. I would appreciate knowing to whom I might write for such a transcript, assuming one is available, and what would be the cost, if any, of purchasing it. Thank you very much for your help in this matter. Having just moved to Atlanta, I look forward to hearing future Witness programs over your very excellent station.

Dear Professor Protho:

I read with great interest a UPI story in last night's Atlanta Journal describing the study on segregation in the South which was recently completed by a team of political scientists, including yourself and your colleague at Carolina, Associate Professor Donald R. Matthews.

I am writing to inquire if it would be possible for the Southern Regional Council to obtain a copy of this report. It concerns a subject with which we are very much concerned, and I am sure it would be of great value to our research department. For this reason, I would be most grateful if you can tell me to whom I should write for a copy and the cost, if any, of purchasing one. I look forward to hearing from you at your convenience.

Another Important ONE NATION LIBRARY Publication:

A Living Bill of Rights by William O. Douglas

There will be little controversy over what provisions of the Constitution protect individual liberty. When it comes, however, to determining their meaning in this tense and complex era, spirited controversies arise.

Justice William O. Douglas discusses the first ten amendments to the Constitution in terms of the citizen's daily life. The principles of our civil rights are cogently reviewed against today's major issues: the racial problem, anti-Communist and loyalty questions, and our educational system. Included in the text are pertinent landmark legal decisions and an Appendix with an extensive list of reference materials.

In sum, this book offers a stimulating warning and appeal to citizens in all walks of life to help perpetuate the democratic ideals reflected in the Bill of Rights.

Out of his 22 years as a member of the Supreme Court, Justice Douglas writes with both conviction and dedication. The authority of his name and the eloquence of his writing make "A LIVING BILL OF RIGHTS" an ideal text for social studies and community discussion groups.

THE NEEDS OF EDUCATION FOR TELEVISION CHANNEL ALLOCATIONS

30W. Based on a study designed specifically to bring into focus the national picture of television facilities for education that will be needed during the next decade, this report was prepared for the U.S. Office of Education by the National Association of Educational Broadcasters. It discusses the needs of the future reflected nationally by communities, institutions of higher learning, the public schools, State departments of education, and active educational television stations; and these needs reflected by the several separate States. This report includes maps which for the first time chart all ETV channels and proposed channels in complete coverage of the United States. Additional sections contain an analysis of the study and pertinent recommendations, an engineering report, and an appendix which includes several schedules and tables to be used as a reference for general information and in conjunction with the attached maps. 1962. 181 p., 9 maps and 20 maps in pocket.

New York 17, N. Y.

The American Bar Association Journal for June 1962 has chosen Carleton Putnam's Race and Reason for its leading book review. We quote the following excerpts:

"This short treatise on the integration problem may well become one of the most important books of this generation . . . Mr. Putnam writes with the fluency of an educator, the simplicity of a master, the forcefulness of an advocate, the exactness of a scientist, the compassion of a friend and the cold courage of his distinguished ancestry . . . .

"Race and Reason is commended to the Bar as deserving of its general reading and to assist it, as leaders of thought, to learn not half truths, propagandized history nor pseudo science, but 'the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth.'"

Dear Professor Henderson:

Leslie Dunbar suggested I write you for assistance in our quest for a study, "The Negro Consumer: A Review of the Economic Position and Consumer Behaviour of American Negroes Outside the South," by Nixon (first name not given). We first learned of this when an announcement of it appeared in the October 12 Newsletter of the Bureau of Applied Social Research of Columbia University.

In response to our request to them, the Bureau replied that they had no surplus copies and suggested we write the Life Insurance Agency Management Association, 170 Sigourney Street, Hartford 5, Conn. This group replied that the report was "made under special contractual arrangement with four of our member companies" and was available to them only. This fact seemed unusual and regrettable since it was announced in a matter-of-course public mailing from Columbia.

The member companies would seem to be those appearing on the Association's letterhead, a copy of which is enclosed. If you have any suggestions as to how or where this might be obtained, we would be most grateful.

Dear Leo:

Thank you for your efforts to get "The Negro Consumer" from your Hartford librarian. Unfortunately, the document is beginning to sound really off limits to everyone except those four companies who underwrote the expense, but I'm grateful to you anyway. And it is useful to know that LIAMA may release a more public supplement in a year. Perhaps we can try again then.

Jack and I are consumed with envy to know the Bernsteins are spending the coming weekend in Chicago. How I wish we could make it a semi-annual reunion. Love to Wink and Toby.

Dear Barbara:

It was good to hear from you the other day even though the result was strictly a business call. I passed on a request for information on the "The Negro Consumer" to my Hartford librarian. She in turn contacted LIAMA and they told her that the report was a special study.

What that means is that it was done on the behalf of four large life insurance companies by the Columbia Bureau of Applied Social Research. It therefore is not available to the public.

As a matter of fact, she told me that if we the company were interested in the study we could get a copy only if we were willing to pay our proportionate share of the cost of the original survey.

She indicated that LIAMA might release a supplement within a year or two. At that time, she said we would get a copy for our library.

I'm therefore not sure that even if you wanted to go the $800 charge you would be able to procure it since it was done for life companies.

I'm sorry that I was unable to do anything about this for you.

Winky stays in touch with you and has indicated to me from time to time that things are going well with the Pattersons. Give my regards to Jack and the children.

1. Teacher Education for Human Relations in the Classroom 25¢ ✓.

The report indicates that students are not being adequately prepared for their roles as teachers in our democratic society. Required college courses do not include enough information about race and race relations, about religious-culture groups and interreligious group relations, about the structure of society and the variation in value and behavior patterns among social classes. A significant finding is that professors have such infrequent inter-departmental communication about the needs of teacher-candidates, that they do not know whether or not the program of teacher education is adequate.

2. "Privacy" and Prejudice: A Survey of Religious Discrimination in Social Clubs - 25¢ _____.

This pamphlet, which deals with the problem of religious discrimination by social clubs, is the first to deal with this subject in depth. The pamphlet contains a comprehensive statistical breakdown of the extent of discrimination by private clubs in the 50 states.

3. Dallas, Texas: Factors affecting school desegregation - 50¢

This is the seventh field report on the subject of desegregation which the ADL has produced. Written by William R. Carmack, director of the Southwest Center for Human Relations Studies at the University of Oklahoma and Theodore Freedman, director of the ADL Southwest Regional Office, the study reviews the steps leading to the token desegregation of the Dallas school system.

4. How To Cope With Attacks From The Fanatic Fringe - 15¢ _____.

"How To Cope With Attacks From The Fanatic Fringe" appeared in School Management magazine. Focusing on "fanatic fringe" groups and means of identifying them, the piece offers excerpts from a tape-recorded interview with three men who have had to deal with attacks by extremist groups.

5. The Study of the Influence of the Mass Media on Public Opinion by Arnold M. Rose, University of Minnesota. Reprinted from Kyklos, International Review for Social Sciences. - 25¢ _____.

An historically oriented survey of research done on mass media influence on public opinion, this is a pioneer study covering the work of sociologists, political scientists, social psychologists and psychologists in this field. It discusses the formulation of prejudicial attitudes and the methodology of opinion change.

6. The Third Reich in Perspective - 25¢ _____.

This Resource Unit is designed primarily for teachers. It is the second publication prepared by ADL to fill the gap left by the inadequate textbook accounts of Hitler, Nazism and the persecution of Jews in Germany. The first to be published was "Anatomy of Nazism."

7. Resource Unit -- Prejudice and Discrimination - 35¢ _____.

This unit, designed primarily for teachers, will also be used for other group leaders. It replaces the tabulated resource unit which was discontinued some time ago.

8. Small-Town Jews and Their Neighbors by Peter I. Rose - 25¢ _____.

This reprint from the December 1961 issue of the Jewish Journal of Sociology, published in London, summarizes the results of a two-part study made of Jewish life in the small American community.

I'm most sorry, but for the present at least we're almost out of "Revolution in Mississippi" by Tom Hayden. However, there is a good possibility that we'll soon be receiving a good number of copies that are being returned; if this turns out to be true, we'll send off a dozen or so to you.

Sorry we can't help you now; i hope we'll be getting thecopies in soon.

AMENDMENT TO EDUCATION CODE PERTAINING TO TEXTBOOKS

The people of the State of California do enact as follows:

Section 1. Section 9361 is added to the Education Code, to read:

9361. Contracts for the purchase of textbooks or teachers' manuals entered into by the State Board of Education pursuant to Section 9355 shall, among other things, provide each of the following:

(a) That the textbook or teachers' manual shall be sold at a price at the state warehouse in Sacramento which, including all costs of transportation to that place, shall not exceed the lowest price at which the seller offers the textbook or teachers' manual for sale to any state or school district in the United States.

(b) That, if at any time during the term of said contract the textbook or teachers' manual should be sold at a lesser price to any state or school district in the United States under an agreement entered into or amended as to price after the date of said contract, said lesser price shall forthwith become the price at which the textbook or teachers' manual shall be sold in California pursuant to such contract.

(c) That, if at any time during the term of said contract the textbook or teachers' manual shall be offered to any state or school district in the United States under terms and conditions which, when construing the contract as a whole, are more favorable to the purchaser than those applicable under the contract, said terms and conditions shall become applicable at the option of the board to all textbooks or teachers' manuals thereafter furnished pursuant to such contract.

(d) That, upon the willful failure of the seller to comply with the requirements of the contract specified by this section, the seller shall be liable to the State of California in the amount of three times the total sum which the seller was paid in excess of the price required under subdivisions (a) or (b) of this section, and in the amount of three times the total value to the State of the performance of the terms and conditions to which the State is entitled under subdivision (c) of this section.

Section 2. Section 9554 is added to said code, to read:

9554. Supplementary textbooks adopted pursuant to this article and sold by a publisher for use in a public school within the State shall be sold pursuant to a purchase order upon each copy of which there shall be clearly set forth the obligation of the publisher to comply with each of the following:

(a) That the supplementary textbook shall be sold at a price at the publisher's depository in California which, including all costs of transportation to that place, shall not exceed the lowest price at which the seller offers said supplementary textbook for sale to any state or school district in the United States.

(b) That, if at the time of sale of such supplementary textbook the publisher furnishes teachers' manuals or instructional services in connection with such textbook free of charge to any state or school district in the United States, said teachers' manuals and instructional services shall to the same extent be furnished free of charge to the purchaser of such supplementary textbook in California.

(c) That, upon the willful failure of the seller to comply with the obligations imposed by this section, the seller shall be liable to the State of California in the amount of three times the total sum which the seller was paid in excess of the price required under subdivision (a) of this section, and in the amount of three times the total value of the materials and services which the State is entitled to receive free of charge under subdivision (b) of this section.

Each copy of an invoice covering such supplementary textbooks shall contain the publisher's certification, under penalty of perjury, that the obligations imposed by this section have been met.

As used in this section, "publisher's depository in California" includes any office or depository maintained in accordance with Section 9957 of this code.

Section 2.5. Section 9555 is added to said code, to read:

9555. The provisions of Section 9554 shall apply to the purchase of supplementary textbooks for use in elementary schools under Sections 7203 and 7352 of this code.

Section 3. Section 9953 of said code is amended to read:

9953. The bond shall provide that the publisher will furnish the books offered by him and listed by the State Board of Education to any high school district at a price at the publisher's depository in California which, including all costs of transportation to that place, shall not exceed the lowest price at which the publisher offers said books for sale to any state or school district in the United States.

Section 4. Section 9954 of said code is amended to read:

9954. The bond shall also provide that the publisher will reduce the price automatically to purchasers within the State to the extent that reductions are made elsewhere in the United States.

Section 4.5. Section 9957 of said code is amended to read:

9957. The bond shall further provide that the publisher will maintain an office and depository in California or arrange with an independently owned and operated depository in California to receive and fill orders for the textbooks.

Section 5. Section 10011 is added to said code, to read:

10011. Textbooks adopted pursuant to this article and sold by a publisher for use in a public high school within the State shall be sold pursuant to a purchase order upon each copy of which there shall be clearly set forth the obligation of the publisher to comply with each of the following:

(a) That the textbook shall be sold at a price at the publisher's depository in California which, including all costs of transportation to that place, shall not exceed the lowest price at which the seller offers said textbooks for sale to any state or school district in the United States.

(b) That, if at the time of sale of such textbook the publisher furnishes teachers' manuals or instructional services in connection with such textbook free of charge to any state or school district in the United States, said teachers' manuals and instructional services shall to the same extent be furnished free of charge to the purchaser of such textbook in California.

(c) That, upon the willful failure of the seller to comply with the obligations imposed by this section, the seller shall be liable to the State of California in the amount of three times the total sum which the seller was paid in excess of the price required under subdivision (a) of this section, and in the amount of three times the total value of the materials and services which the State is entitled to receive free of charge under subdivision (b) of this section.

Each copy of an invoice covering such textbook shall contain the publisher's certification, under penalty of perjury, that the obligations imposed by this section have been met.

As used in this section, "publisher's depository in California" includes any office or depository maintained in accordance with Section 9957 of this code.

Section 5.5. Section 10012 is added to said code, to read:

10012. The provisions of Section 10011 shall apply to the purchase of high school textbooks under Sections 7203 and 7352 of this code.

Section 6. This act is an urgency measure necessary for the immediate preservation of the public peace, health or safety within the meaning of Article IV of the Constitution and Sections 1, 2, 2.5, 5 and 5.5 thereof shall go into immediate effect. The facts constituting such necessity are:

The Legislature is presently engaged in investigating prices of textbooks purchased by school districts and by the State Board of Education. There is reason to believe that the prices set by the manufacturers are much too high, and that even with the changes made by this act, the manufacturers' profits will still be substantial. In order to give the manufacturers sufficient time to submit their revised prices for textbooks for the 1961-1962 school year, it is necessary that Sections 1, 2, 2.5, 5 and 5.5 of this act go into effect immediately.

Dear Mrs. Ledeen:

Your letter of January 19 to OASIS requesting copies of "Background: Atlanta" has been forwarded to us by Mrs. Beverly Downing of HOPE. Our Executive Assistant Mr. Paul Anthony has asked me to write to you about this booklet.

Unfortunately, the 50 copies you ask for are just not available. I am enclosing this one from our own nearly depleted stock. Our only thought regarding additional copies in bulk is that OASIS may reprint the booklet. We do not have other materials which they have produced. I am sure, however, that you are familiar with SRC's publications and I will be happy to send you any materials you might find useful.

Dear Friends,

When we were in Atlanta in November for the Fellowship of The Concerned we were told that an Employment Survey of Houston (negro Employment) would be ready in a month or two. I am wondering if it has been completed and if I may have a copy of it? We were told to write to the Council for it. I would appreciate having it.

Thank you.

Dear Sirs:

Andre Hammonds, a fellow graduate student, has advixed me that you can supply me with some helpful material concerning sit-ins and freedom rides. This type of material could be very useful in the undergraduate course I am presently teaching. I will be starting to teach the chapter on minority groups the last of this week. If this bulletin is still in existence, or if a similar bulletin and map have been completed from the 1960 census, I would appreciate your forwarding a copy to the following address:

The Southern Regional Council really has no explicit policy concerning members. It is not a membership organization in the sense of soliciting members. To clarify this, I am enclosing to you a brief statement of aims and origin and a list of currently available materials published by the Council.

Dear Miss Patterson;

Many thanks for the information that you sent. I am accepting your invitation to write for further material. There are several of the booklets that I am interested in, but due to my present budget (non-existant), I will only ask you now for the free items. The ones that I would like are L-15, L-17, L-20, L-21, L-22, L-23, Action Patterns IN School Desegregation: A Guidebook, THE LOUISVILLE STORY, SOUTHERNERS AND SCHOOLS, CHANGING PATTERNS IN THE NEW SOUTH, THREE VIEWS OF THE DESEGREGATION DECISIONS, and SOUTH CAROLINIANS SPEAK.

Someone was reading this over my shoulder and just donated a dollar to provide me with the other items, so I will enclose the money and also ask you to send me THE STUDENT PROTEST MOVEMENT, THE NEGRO AND THE BALLOT, THE NEGRO VOTER IN THE SOUTH, RACE AND SUFFRAGE IN THE SOUTH SINCE 1940, and WHAT THE SUPREME COURT SAID.

Again, many thanks for your help.

Leslie W. Dunbar, the Executive Director has asked me to answer your letter of February 23.

I have put together and today am mailing a packet of materials which explain to some extent the work of the Council and are illustrative of its publications. The materials I have included bear heavily on the role of the church in human relations in the South. I have also included a list of other publications available.

Dr. Dunbar has asked me also to indicate that we would be happy to provide without cost for your class bulk items "The Southern Regional Council - Its Aims and Origins," the Post and Times reprints and the Dabbs address. The same applies to "Changing Patterns in the New South," although the postage on 100 copies of that might be something your budget could cover if possible. The issue of New South is available at .20¢ a copy and both "The Church in Areas of Racial Tension" and "This I Believe" at .02¢ a copy.

Please let us know your needs and we will attend to them promptly.

Dear Sir:

In my deputation work as a foreign missionary on furlough (from Nigeria, West Africa) I have been asked to teach a book entitled The Bible and Race, by T. B. Maston, to women's groups in two churches. This is a welcomed opportunity, since the race question in Africa is entwined with that in America, affects Christian work in both places, and I am frequently asked questions on the subject.

As part of my presentation I should like to be able to put into the hands of participants information on organizations who are working for progress in this field, such as CORE, NAACP, SCLC, and your own organization to encourage greater understanding.

Do you have printed leaflets that explain the aims and work of Southern Regional Council? There will be approximately 100 women attending my study groups, and I should be very happy if you could provide me with material for them. I shall be glad to pay cost and postage if you will let me know what material is available.

Dear Mr. Mayo:

Under separate cover I am today sending you some of the materials SRC has issued. The "Aim and Origins" mimeographed sheet should give you some idea of our stance and activities in the southern environment.

I believe that the statements by Louis Lomax and Dr. King in the issues of New South will givebyou some idea of what as you say, "the people discriminated against feel."

I note that your letter is mimeographed, indicating I presume that you have made similar requests elsewhere for information. I am unable to suggest other agencies that you probably have not already thought of, if you have thought of SRC. No one here would be able to give you any "answers'" as you suggest. The whole fabric of segregation is old and deeply woven. I hope some of our materials on current situations will be useful and for more historically searching inquiries, I would suggest Lillian Smith"s "Killers of the Dream" and W. J. Cash's "The Mind of the South." Please feel free to call on us if we can be of further usefulness.

Dear Sirs:

Presently I am a senior at Pomfret School who is interested in the problems of racial discrimination. However, I know very little since although eager to learn, I can not obtain much information from our library. Could you please send me some information about the problem.

I wonder what your organization feels about racial discrimination and what the people discriminated against feel. Specifically, I hope to write a history term paper on this subject, but I am sure my own view is an oversimplification. The whole problem arises because people make superficial judgements about other pepple's appearance. In other words, people are prejudiced on account of color or race because they are emotionally opposed to those pepple of a different race.

I realize my problem is insignificant compared to the problems of your organization, but I would very much appreciate a reply. If you are unable to answer my questions, do you know of anyone who could and would? Thank you very much for all the help you can give me. I will appreciate all of it as it further enlightens me about the race problem. I feel that the least I can do is to communicate the problems and underlying causes of the problems arising from racial discrimination.

Your letter of February 22nd has been called to my attention. I have great sympathy with the problems you describe and have given considerable thought as to how we might be of help. Dear Sir:

The Negro residents of San Bernardino County are in dire need. Instead of being called San Bernardino County, it should be labelled "Annes to Mississippi County."

Jobs as salespersons or in private industry are practically nonexistent. The utility companies won't hire us. Employment above laborer with the City or County is strictly on a token basis. For the person who happens to be one of the few tokens, advancement isn't possible.

The Negro residents have no representatives of any sort in the area to help them overcome their handicaps. When we get heavily populated in one area and there is a possibility of electing a Councilman to help us, the City simply redistricts the Wards.

In the City there are many small organizations but in all cases the leaders are of the working class. Therefore, what the leaders can say or do is very limited. The professional persons (including ministers--with one exception) are doing nothing to help the community.

A small group called "West Side Civic Committee" is presently involved in court proceedings against the City for "gerrymandering."

We need: LEADERS, INSPIRATION, KNOW-HOW, AND FINANCES.

I realize your organization's purpose is to aid the people of the Southern region; but if you check, you will find that this area is comprised mostly of migrants from the south. Along with these migrants came their southern ideas and traditions.

For the benefit of all San Bernardino County residents, I sincerely hope you can and will offer your assistance in ANY form.

Dear Mr. Deitchman:

Under separate cover I am mailing you today several copies of Report L-30, as you requested, plus some additional materials which I trust will serve to answer some of the questions you pose in your letter. Briefly, you are right, the South is far from standing still.

There is no Southern Regional Council for any one particular state. Our organization tries to be "Pan-Southern" in the scope of its information and activities. We do have, however, cooperating organizations in some southern states, notably Alabama. There is at present none in Mississippi. In Birmingham, the agency is The Alabama Council on Human Relations.

Perhaps some of the materials will be useful regarding a southern view of the South and the Chattanooga and Houston studies serve to answer some of your economic queries.

Please call uponus if we can be of further usefulness. In a few days an updated list of SRC publications will be available and I will send you one then for future reference.

Re: Report L-30 da ted December 28, 1961

Dear Sirs;

The report aforementioned has just come to my attention. As I have little knowledge about the Southern Regional Council I would appreciate it if you could send me the available information about the coundil. I would also appreciate it if you could send me a few copies of said report.

Having spent most of my life in the Northeastern part of the United States most of the arguments against the south and its policy had to be recognized as second-hand or heresay evidence. It appears that the South is not standing still in the effort to solve its problems, nor that the total population is pushing it aside. However it does (the report) bring a question to mind. That is, is there a regional council in Mississippi and Alabama? How do the people feel a bout the problem itself? I ask these questions of you, because all the answers I have hitherto been given have been given with what one might call a "Northern Slant". If the industrial problems of Mississippi would be solved to the extent that jobs would be available to all, would there be preference shown to the different races? That is to say, eventthough teachers salaries are being equalized would this apply to the new industries?

What methods does the Council feel should be used in the further solution of this problem?

Yours very truly,

Robert Deitchman

Dear Miss Walker:

By now you have talked with Maggie Long on the telephone and you and she can carry on directly.

I am, however, enclosing the biographical material you requested. Unfortunately, she does not have a good recent photo. And I gather her talk will be around the subject of stereotypes of the South and the southerner with lots of pertinent information on just what is going on in the South nowadays. As for information on SRC, glean what you can from the enclosed "Aims and Origins." I can't recall whether I sent you any back issues of New South, but both it and her column in it, "Strictly Subjective," are good introductions.

As for Spring Vacation plans, in addition to hashing it over during Miss Long"s visit, why don't you write me possible dates, how traveling, how many, interests, etc. You're quite correct about "righting the wrong"; we wouldn't want to see a lot of your co-students vacationing in the Albany, Georgia, jail.

March 8, 1962

Dear Mrs. Patterson,

SRC is wonderful! Thank you so much for the letter which I received from SRC yesterday.

Here is the more specific request for a speaker:

Forum Board (student organization which brings speakers to campus) has offered expenses to Margaret Long for a trip to speak here. Preferred date is March 18; this would leave some time for students hearing her speech + becoming interested in going South to make arrangements to do so before March 30, when our spring vacation begins here. Am I rushing things? I'm sorry; two years of frustration are bursting out.

For Miss (Mrs.?) Long's speech (at 2:15 on a Sunday afternoon, for about an hour), there will probably be an audience of from 60 to 100 students, 100% pro integration; some of them will have been to the South, others will not; some will be militant; many will be either slightly hostile, or at least will be inclined to view what she says with considerable reserve.

I will need some biographical material on the speaker, her topic, a glossy photo, and some general information on SRC for a newspaper article the Friday night before the Sunday she will speak.

If you can send me more information on the possibilities of Northern students coming South, I'm sure I can send (or bring) you dozens. This college has a large (comparatively) population of student activists, just bursting to get on Freedom Ride Buses, or to "do something" to improve the Southern scene. They have no idea of what to do, for the most part. Maybe you can give some constructive suggestions. I love these kids for caring, for being idealistic, but I fear their "tunnel vision" of the situation — you know, one sees a wrong, one focuses on that wrong + nothing else, one races in, rights the wrong — and then goes home, leaving the shambles behind him. Can't more useful, constructive, positive methods be found as outlets for their concern? I hope so.

Please reply as quickly as possible — for obvious reasons. I'll be waiting — eagerly. If necessary, call me collect at French House (774-9421) (DAD code 161) — Forum Board will pay for all costs of arrangement.

Thank you very, very much.

Sincerely yours,
Carole Walker

March 2, 1962

Miss Carole Walker
French House
Oberlin, Ohio

Dear Miss Walker:

I am sending you today under separate cover all the materials you requested in your letter of March 1, plus some. I particularly wanted to include Leslie Dunbar's reprint, as well as that of Harold Fleming (former SRC Director), Ralph McGill, Harry Ashmore and Dr. Hill, who felt compelled to speak as he did to his Sunday School class. These are Southerners, tell your detractors.

I think the mimeographed "SRC- Aims and Origins" expresses our stance in the South: we are primarily an information and mediating agency, not an activist group, but dedicated to equal racial opportunity.

I also must say that your brief letter struck a sure chord here, meriting more than the usual courteous reply to information requests. Perhaps it is because we have all experienced the sense of frustration over being explicit about the good South and still have some guilt about our own preconceptions. Margaret Long, SRC's Information Director and editor of New South, was impressed by your editorial and volunteered her services to speak at Oberlin. If expenses and/or some small honorarium were available, many suggestions for visitors to your campus are forthcoming. Paul Anthony, SRC's Executive Assistant and whose secretary I am, suggested, however, rather than feeding you a list, that I let you know that good people are available and wait upon a more specific request from you indicating the size and nature of the group which would be interested.

For example, Lillian Smith is a splendid speaker, as well as Miss Long, but like her is often identified as the suffering Southerner who has "taken" it forever and therefore not as commanding of interest as someone less familiar. Let us know should you wish to pursue this further and we will be happy to help line up something definite.

Mr. Anthony further suggested that SRC might be able to act as a coordinator for northern and eastern students interested and able to bear their own expenses who might like to come South during Spring vacation. Actually, Atlanta is many ways can serve as a microcosm of the South. And anyone who has taken Bob Thompson of the Urban League's tour of the city will have many of their stereotypes unsettled. You sound from your letter like the kind of steam engine who might move such a thought from campus to campus, or perhaps there would be a sizeable group from Oberlin alone. We would be more than happy to help and although I can't commit myself, I believe hospitality arrangements could be made to keep expenses minimal in Atlanta. Greyhound is low cost and also has the advantage of seeing rural South, quite a contrast with urban South.

My only other thought for you re the students who think all Southerners are "bigots" is that the fabric of Southern thinking is old and thickly textured: people lwho want to understand need more than facts and figures. They need to read searching books like Lillian Smith's "Killers of the Dream" and W. J. Cash's "The Mind of the South."

L-Report 8 is out of print, but L-29 largely replaces it, along with Benjamin Muse"s reprinted article on "Race and Reason."

Please let us hear from you if we can be of further usefulness.

Sincerely,

(Mrs.) Barbara Patterson

Enclosed is an editorial published two days ago in our school newspaper; I've been talking myself hoarse ever since, and I want to keep talking. If you have any more pamphlets or material that you think I could use, please send them along + bill me. I'm trying hard to do some education up here, and to convince people that 1.) Southerners are not monsters all, just because some are bigots, + 2.) the best way to help the South is not to go at it with the attitude of fighting against the white Southerner, but of trying to work with him + for him.

Does the SRC have speakers available to talk about what is being done in the South by Southerners to replace the old order with a new one? Oberlin College needs to encounter Southern white liberal ideas. The students here are concerned, active, + generous with their money. I'd like to see this reserve of resources put to some constructive use.

Thank you very much.

Sincerely yours,
Carole Walker

Under separate cover I am today mailing 100 copies of "This I Believe." Bearing in mind your topic and the fact that the workshop participants will be of high school age, I can think of only two other suggestions for background reading. I have included single copies of each of these in your packet. They are "Racial Prejudice" and "This Is What We Found." We do not have 100 of the former, but could send you a small supply without cost. The latter we can provide 100 of, at the rate of 25¢ per copy. Perhaps you might consider using a limited supply of both of these as reference materials for the participants.

Please let us know if we can be of further usefulness.

Dear Paul:

Did not think I would be writing you so soon again.

We had our second planning meeting for the Youth Workshop today. The four subjects for discussion will be:

1) Do Parents Teach Prejudice?
2) This I Believe
3) How Do I Look to Others?
4) What is Prejudice?

Actually, these are four pieces of material which was selected for distribution and for backgroud reading. If you have any other materials on these subjects, please forward them to our office.

I would like to place an order for 100 of the leaflet, "This I Believe." dlg.

On good authority, the Mayor has said that he will not rescind his directive regarding desegregation though he has been approached to do so. Will keep you informed.

We were informed yesterday that Dr. Clarence Higgins (a negro physician) is now on the Courtesy Staff of the Texas Children's Hospital (Houston). This means that he can bring his patients there for treatment, but he is the first one granted that courtesy.

We growing this week--not exactly! It seemed odd to have to commend someone for carrying out the law as our Mayor did.

Dear Mr. Bloch:

Please accept our sincere apologies for not being able to get the information you requested sent to you in time for your March 18 debate. Our only excuse is the overwhelming weight of work we have had of late and, actually, your letter of March 8 was not received here until Monday, March 12. We are very anxious to be helpful with problems such as yours, and it is embarrassing when the time factor lessens our usefulness.

Perhaps, however, the information which I am mailing today under separate cover will serve a purpose in the future. With regard to your questions on laws passed by southern state legislatures, there is nothing specific which we have available for mailing. I can recommend, though, the following books:

Where the States Stand on Civil Rights, by Richard Barnett and Joseph Garai; Bold Face Books, Inc.;
A Century of Civil Rights, by Milton R. Konvitz (with a study of State Law against Discrimination by Theodore Leskes); Columbia University Press;
Race Relations and American Law, by Jack Greenberg; Columbia University Press; Separate and Unequal, by Louis R. Harlan, the University of North Carolina Press.

I would also suggest you consult the quarter-annual Race Relations Law Reporter published by the Vanderbilt University School of Law, Nashville 5, Tennessee.

Again, our apologies, and please call on us in the future if we can be helpful, giving us just a few more days leeway.

Several students here who have been active in Maryland sit-ins are preparing for an informal debate, Sunday, March 18, on whether college students should participate in integration demonstrations. I was told you have released detailed factual reports on the integration effort in the South. May we please have copies of whatever material is available for distribution? We are particularly interested in the comparative incidence and effectiveness of sit-ins, boycotts, and negotiations.

I am also interested in the bodies of law passed by Southern state legislatures to enforce racial inequality. Can you suggest any sources of material on this topic?

We will be glad to reimburse you for postage and cost of materials, and would appreciate receiving them in time for study before the 18th.

My research is being conducted in the Department of Justice under the auspices of Mr. Henry Putzel, Deputy Attorney General for Voting and Elections.

Much of the research done by your organization would be of great value to me in examining the background of the problem. Could you send me whatever publications you have prepared on the subject of voting discrimination. In addition, if you have any comments on the present state of Negro voting rights in the South and on the effectiveness of the present statutes, I would appreciate them.

Atlanta, Georgia

Dear Sirs:

I am a student in Columbus Grove High School, Columbus Grove, Ohio. I am a junior and I am required to write a term paper. The subject of my term paper is Negroes--rights, ways, education, and etc.

I am writing to you for information on what is involved in my paper.

If at all possible, I would like to have information from different individuals-both Negroe and White minister, pupil, and teacher, and businessmen. In these letters I would like the following information: relationship between Negroes and Whites in their Christianity, relationship of teacher and pupil in mixed examples, and the homes of Negroes and their conditions.

I would also appreciate their opinions on segregation-good and bad points, do you have it, why or why not, do you agree with it? (etc.)

If at all possible, I would like to have this information as soon as possible. The term paper is due in a few weeks.

Sincerely yours,

Marie Moffat

Dear Sirs:

In the recent issue of New South you list several "Recent SRC Publications." Is a complete list of the Council's publications available? If so, could you send me a copy.

I have been receiving New South for several years and am now beginning to wonder if I could complete my run. I lack the following:

Vol. I, No. 1 - Vol. XIII, No. 2
Vol. XIII, No. 4 (April, 1958)
No. 11 (Nov., 1958)
Vol. XIV, No. 10 (Oct., 1959)
Vol. XV, No. 9 (Sept., 1960)

Can you tell me which of these numbers are still available and at what price?

Very truly yours,

Dear Mrs. Dowell:

Please accept my apologies for the delay in answering your letter of March 8 in which you ask for some reading suggestions on the history of the Negro in America. Two very good books come to mind:

Pictorial History of the Negro in America, by Langston Hughes and Milton Meltzer, Crown Publishers; and

E. Franklin Frazier's The Negro in the United States, MacMillan & Co.

Trusting these will be helpful,

Sincerely,

BP:s (Mrs.) Barbara Patterson

P.S. I have enclosed a list of publications available from the Council. If you are interested, we will be happy to send single copies without cost.

Gentlemen:

Please send me information as to how I can obtain added knowledge of the negro origion. I have a book of my son's when he was in the 1st grade, going to a school in the south. I am not sure of how he came by this book, entitled America's Tenth Man a brief survey of the negro's part in American History, but being of the black race of course I am interested and would like to know more about my Ancestors. Your consideration is appreciated.

I am writing to praise your booklet on Negro employment in Chattanooga and to ask for the first report in the series.

I have been working with the Job Opportunities Committee of our local Council on Human Relations for the past two years, and our findings are so like this report on Chattanooga that it isalmost uncanny. Mr Butler of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity sent me the booklet, incidentally, because of the similarities and to lighten our sense of frustration.

Do you have a list of publications that pertain to our efforts in finding better employment for Negroes? With prices? Dear Sirs

Two civil rights groups -- the civic interest group of Baltimore and the Northern Student movement Coordinating Committee -- are planning a summer program for the eastern shore of Maryland. The purpose of the program will be to instruct the adult negro population on the importance of voting and also on the way to go about registering for that vote.

Before starting the program, we would like to get as many suggestions and as much information about voter registration and related topics (i.e., community development projects that could be used to generate an interest in voter registration) as we can.

Dear Mr. Ryan:

Please forgive our delay in replying to your letter of March 3. Your work with Intergroup Relations is interesting and I wish there was more I could send you. We are primarily involved in the actual function of such work and have published practically nothing on the dynamics of the work, per se. However, under separate cover I am sending a workshop report, some sampling of our publications and the latest report of Dr. Dumbar's, which pretty well spells out what we do and have been doing. I am also including a copy of New South which looks close to your interest and a publication list. If there is any material on the latter which looks likely to you, let us know.

There has been an up-dating of The Student Protest Movement report you mention: it is out of print at this writing but is being reprocessed, and I have made a note to myself to send you a copy within the next 10 days when it is ready.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir:

I am a student at Kansas State University, majoring in Sociology, Intergroup Relations, and presently in the second semester of my Junior year. Being within the field of Intergroup Relations for more than two years and having had 3 months of experience in the South where I was affiliated with Negroes who had been involved in the student protest movement, and further understanding the complexities involved, I wish to ask for your help in obtaining some materials which you might have. In my possession is a copy of the following:

> Special Report: The Student Protest Movement, Winter 1960; SRC 13, February 25, 1960 (With a Postscript covering events between February 26 - March 13).

I would be very much interested in knowing whether or not you have done a further report since the issue of this one, and if so, would it be possible for me to obtain same from you? Also, I would like to have any articles you might have published for publication which deal with the SRC which pertain to both my field and the integration movement as a whole in the South. I would imagine that I am asking for much more than I ought, but it is through such organizations as yours that I am able to obtain the information which I wish to have in order that I might better understand and be able to work within the field of Intergroup Relations.

I am presently interested in two things: 1) the overall study, analysis, and research on and of problems and developments affecting my field; and 2) the collection and compilation of information and conceptual or practical ideas regarding programs, methods, and techniques. Having been affiliated with the NCCJ in both New York City and Wichita, Kansas, and having talked with members of CORE concerning the Freedom Rides, as well as other work I have been doing with a Council on Human Relations which has evolved as a result of discriminatory practices in housing here in Manhattan, I have been able to learn and, to some measure, apply what I have gained in experience within the field of Intergroup Relations. My education is far from complete and will not be even though I am going on to do graduate work in this field. I would hope that your organization might in some way be able to supply me with information such as I have asked for in order that I might know as much about various organizations' ways and means as is possible. In this way it will help me in my research and study. All that you might be able to do will be greatly appreciated.

Respectfully yours,

George E. Ryan

Dear Mrs. Patterson:

Thank you for your letter of March 16, 1962.

We had another planning session for our workshop for senior high school youth this past Friday, March 23rd. I am enclosing a copy of our recent newsletter for your files. Mr. Rilling received one also with our regular mailing, but I thought you might want separate with this correspondence.

We have all of our discussion leaders, but need one more person to give the main presentation and I have a call in for her this morning.

Everyone present liked the booklet, "Racial Prejudice," and we would like you to send us the small supply which you mentioned in your letter.

I am also enclosing a copy of each of the other materials that will be distributed for background reading by the young people we are recruiting. The entire workshop will be geared to human relations in Houston, but also its implications on the larger sphere.

Thank you for your help and assistance.

Dear Sir:

When I chose my topic for a sociology term paper, Race Prejudice in Education appealed to me very much. It offered much in the way of interest because of the variety of theories and the many controversies about it. Before I write my paper, I would like to get as much information from as many different sources as possible in order to get a view that is broad and unbiased.

Could you please send me any information which you have available on the problems of integration or segregation, or the race prejudice problem in education in general. This will help me very much if you could send it as soon as possible.

Thank you very much for all your help.

Thank you for your reply to our letter about corresponding with a segregated southern school, and for the suggestions and material you sent us. The copy of New South is being made available to the student body.

Our hopes were to make contact with an all-white school; if, as your letter indicated, you can not help us do this, we would greatly appreciate your helping us get in touch with an all-Negro school. Dear Gentlemen:

Your letter inquiring about corresponding with a segregated southern school is a bit perplexing. I think, however, there are two possibilities. First, we could put you in touch with an all-Negro school in Atlanta. And/or, second, we could help you contact individual white and Negro students at some of the high schools here which have begun desegregating. Why don't you write and let me know how those ideas strike you?

I just thought you might be interested in the enclosed issue of New South. Wesley Pittman, who wrote the poem on page 9, is white. He is a senior and what I guess you would call an all-around, popular one, at one of the high schools which admitted Negro students for the first time this year.

Dear Sirs:

At the beginning of this school year, we decided to correspond with a segregated Southern school about integration in the public schools. At the time our only means of finding a school was the exchange files of our school newspaper. We were disappointed that our committee received no answer.

We were very grateful when Mr. Jack Greenberg of the NAACP Legal Defense Fund, advised us to write the Council. We would appreciate your helping us find a school willing to engage in a correspondence.

An invoice is therefore also included.

Gentlemen:

Mr. John H. Fenton, of the government department at the University of Massachusetts, has referred me to your office.

I am writing a research paper concerning the subject of voting trends of the Negro in the South. I plan to encompass the methods used in the past and present to prevent the Negro from voting and also the influence of his vote on recent elections.

I would appreciate it if your office would send me any literature and statistics concerning these subjects which would assist me in my research and, also, any references you may suggest as to where I might find additional material.

Thank you very much for your consideration.

Editor, THE BEE
Danville, Virginia

Dear Sir:

In the editorial, "The Court Stands Firm", in the March 6 issue of THE BEE, is the statement that the decision of the Virginia Court of Appeals with regard to the closing of the Prince Edward County schools will be appealed to the Federal courts. The decision of the Virginia Court of Appeals may be sustained on a technical ground, but it will not dispose of the race issue.

Human relationships cannot be maintained on the level of law only. Beyond law there are considerations of equity, ethics, and religion. A violent storm felled a tree in my yard on the house of my neighbor and almost demolished it. The mishap having been an "Act of God", there was no legal responsibility for the damage. However, the sadness in my neighbor's eyes and a voice in my heart impelled me to act "above and beyond the law". Only tribal or primitive civilizations function on the basis of law. Higher cultures and civilizations evolve extra-legal standards of human relationships.

Our Hebrew-Christian heritage, our Declaration of Independence, our Constitution and our role as leader of the free world commit us to the treatment of man with equal justice without regard to race, color, religion or national origin. On the Liberty Bell is inscribed, "Proclaim Liberty throughout the land unto all the inhabitants thereof." (Lev. 25:10) Liberty is indivisible; it includes ALL!

We are engaged in a life-and-death struggle with a powerful and cunning enemy. We are called upon to mobilize all our material and spiritual resources and to rekindle the flame of patriotism. The cardinal point on which we differ from totalitarianism--Fascist or Communist--is "that individual men are necessarily the foundation, cause and end of all social institutions" without regard to race and color. (MATER et MAGISTRA, Encyclical Letter, Pope John XXlll, May 15, 1961). Is it patriotic to distort the image of America by actions which belie our democratic protestations? Can we, with clear eyes, face Communism and with a clear conscience denounce it as a pagan heresy when we trample under foot the dignity of ten percent of our population? Is it too much to ask to sink local prejudices for the sake of Patriotism? The prejudiced in our midst, whether North or South, East or West, are no less false to the ideals of true Americanism than the Totalitarians of either Right or Left. There are no gradations to evil. "Surely there is within this nation--within the minds and hearts of the vast majority of people--a plan for progress in the field of race relations which at the same time can be a plan for domestic peace and which can be supported with respect for Christian conscience and for law." (Leroy Collins, former governor of the State of Florida).

There was a time when the colored races were "the white man's burden". Now the white man's burden is his attitude toward the colored races. President Kennedy said that we are only eight percent of the world's population, that we can no longer shape or right things to our liking. The hegemony of the white man is being challenged on all sides. Via television and other media the Asians and the Africans have learned about crime, race prejudice, delinquency and divorce in the United States. Of all these ugly features of our vaunted civilization our racial attitudes and practices have done us most harm. Since Christianity is identified with the West the Christian cause, too, suffers in Asia and Africa. (THE CHRISTIAN CENTURY, March 7, 1962). What is the rationale of spending billions of dollars in Asia and Africa in order "to make friends and influence people" when our racism lacerates their souls and heaps insult upon the majority of the human race. The shrill voices of isolationists and crack-pot extremists can only lead us to fascism and nuclear war.

Let us rededicate ourselves to the ideal of true Americanism. "Many strands have gone into the making of our country: the glory of the Greek City-state; the ordered structure of Roman law; the egalitarian spirit of the French Encyclopedists; the bold affirmations of Britain's Magna Carta. Running through the warp and woof of the entire fabric is the golden strand direct from Sinai". (Eisendrath). Let us not betray the role in which a kind Providence has cast us!

Dear Mr. Payne:

Under separate cover I am mailing you today nearly all of the copies of New South you requested in your letter of March 27: as I understand it, Vol. I, No. 1 through Vol. XIII, No. 2. I believe you will find there may be a dozen or so missing during that eight year period, and this I cannot remedy since when back issues are in very short supply, we must retain a few copies ourselves. I find there are 106 in this packet, and taken with the two (Vol. I, No. 1 and Vol. XIII, No. 2) of this order already supplied you and the additional four which you asked for and I sent with those two, this would make a total of 112 copies altogether. Under the circumstances of such a large order and since the older issues are uneven in value, we consider a reduced rate in order. I think a price of $.10 per copy would be equitable. An invoice for this amount is enclosed, and you may disregard the previous invoice in the amount of $1.20.

Trusting this is satisfactory, and that you will call on us in the future if we can be of help,

Sincerely,

Thank you for your letter of March 20th and for the catalogue of SRC publications. I would like to order all items appearing on the catalogue, except the Map Showing Percentage of Non-White Population in Counties of Southern States as of 1960. In checking the catalogue to the list of Recent SRC Publications contained in the last issue of New South I find in the latter one additional item, the Employment Study for Chattanooga. I would like to obtain a copy of this publication also. My enclosed check in the amount of $4.55 covers the indicated cost of these items.

SENT 3/30/62

Thank you for the copies of the back issues of New South. However, there seems to be some misunderstanding. You sent Vol. I, No. 1 and Vol. XIII, No. 2. In my original letter I asked if the numbers for Vol. I, No. 1 through Vol. XIII, No. 2 were available. I will remit for all issues available when they are sent.

Dear Mr. McKean:

My apologies for the delay in answering your letter to Harold Fleming of March 30. Mr. Fleming, incidentally, is no longer with SRC.

Your thesis is a meaty one and I'm afraid we can do little more than recommend sources. As the enclosed description spells out, we are not a political action organization. We do keep reference files of everything from hate literature to campaign propaganda, but this is only available for in-office use. The enclosed publication list indicates the kinds of material we have for distribution. If anything on it looks likely to you for your purposes, please let me know. And, if you could be more specific, we could let you have information pertinent to one specific campaign, for example.

Now, on the positive side, there are some books, if you have not already encountered them:

Southern Politics, V.O. Keys, Jr., Knopf, 1949; Citizens Guide to Desegregation, Hill & Greenberg, Beacon Press;
Where the States Stand on Civil Rights, Barnett & Garai, Bold Face Books, Inc.

For examples of the use of biased propaganda, you could no doubt obtain a sizeable sample by writing to the Citizens Councils of America

315-25 Plaza Building
Jackson, Mississippi.

It occurs to me that one very insidious example of misinformation which is currently causing a great deal of damage is Carleton Putnam's psuedo-anthropological "Race and Reason." You might want to have a look at this book. It is being given a heavily financed boost here in the South. Some of the methods we have tried to use to undo the damage are enclosed.

I"m afraid we have not been too helpful, but please call on us in the future if you have further need.

Sincerely,

Dear Sir:

I am a college student beginning work on a thesis concerned with the political aspects of inter-racial propaganda. My particular interest is in biased propaganda which has been used either for or against any minority group in connection with its or its members' political activities.

I am writing to your Council in hopes that you might forward to me any samples which you may have of such material which may have come to your attention over the past few years.

I would also appreciate your recommendations as to additional sources of such materials.

If your Council has been drafting any legislation designed to eliminate anti-minority group propaganda, I would appreciate draft bills, histories of attempts to pass legislation, histories of civil and/or criminal litigation sponsored by minority groups, etc. I am particularly interested in the policies of your Council concerning such corrective actions as you believe are possible with the intention of eliminating the threat to organized democracy which such propaganda represents.

I am hoping to collect enough information to begin to show in some comprehensive form how much such political propaganda has served to influence political campaign practices, in selected instances, in an adverse way. I further hope to develop some reasonably practical courses of attack on such propaganda in the belief that it is one of the major substantive political evils remaining today (although by no means the only one).

Any materials or names of persons, programs, or organizations which might be able to supply such material would be greatly appreciated. — write WCC Jackson, Miss

Dear Mr. Zinn:

I would like to congradulate you on the publication of your "Special Report - Albany". It's importnace lies , I feel, primarily in the fact that you have shown how the people of Albany themselves acted in their own behalf and were thereby able to change the social patterns to a limited extent. I feel that it will not be until we develop local mass participation will we be effective in changing these unjust practices.

Would it be possible for me to order two copies of your report? If so, I would appreciate it if you would have them mailed to me, enclosing their cost which I will immediately remit.

Once again let me thank you for your report. We need many such analysis.

THE GRAIL

Family and Community Apostolate

The Grail is a world-wide movement of women, striving to form a leaven of Christian influence in all spheres of modern life—the family and community, education, recreation, the professions, the arts, public life and international service.

The Grail works within fields in which women can act most effectively, and works differently, using a variety of approaches, according to the needs of the Church and the people in a particular area or country. In the United States five Councils have been set up to meet the needs of a more complex and highly organized society. They are:

1—Family and Community
2—Service Careers
3—Christian Culture
4—World Community
5—Religious Education

In this booklet we highlight the Family and Community work carried out by The Grail in Lafayette, Louisiana.

The objectives of the Family and Community Council:

— to awaken women to their responsibility to strengthen family life and to build community; and to prepare them to carry this out through local, regional and national programs.

— to aid families in assuming their role in community building.

— to assist in the development of the essential institutions of life that promote and foster true community.

— thus to help realize the concept of community in Christ.

These objectives are being worked out in the Diocese of Lafayette, Louisiana by The Grail in collaboration with priests in the area. The followng material appeared in the Southwest Louisiana Register, and is being reprinted here, with the permission of the Editor and Managing Editor, Mr. Henry Libersat, who compiled the articles.

Father Albert McKnight, C.S.Sp. assisted by competent parishioners plans the four-point program.

Lives Enriched By Four-Point Program

by Mr. Henry Libersat

Inconspicuously, in two communities in the Diocese of Lafayette, exists and thrives a most extraordinary movement in applying and vitalizing Catholic social principles. With the approval and cooperation of Father J. Lucey, and spearheaded by the dynamic efforts of Father Albert McKnight, C.S.Sp., the program has literally changed the lives of many people in Abbeville and Kaplan, offering greater opportunities for better employment, economic independence, and of utmost importance, for living the life of the Church through the liturgy.

Father McKnight, assisted by members of the Grail Movement has instituted a four-point program through which (1) illiterates are taught to read and write; (2) friends join in a co-operative buying effort; (3) a private credit union is formed; (4) the liturgy becomes a happy reality to hundreds of people actively participating in the life of the Church.

The success of the plan, instituted among an inexperienced people, emphasizes at once the need for charity and its influence in the relations of those involved. Social improvement requires concerted effort, unity of purpose, comprehension of methods, all of which are possible only when participating individuals possess a "common denominator."

This common denominator among the group in Abbeville and Kaplan is a mutual interest in helping each other achieve individual goals. For example the program has already enabled an elderly lady to read and answer her children's letters herself.

And so we present four phases of co-operative social efforts, as worked out by Fr. McKnight, The Grail and the capable, responsible people who not only benefit but actually manage the program themselves.

Adult Education

"That They May See"

In retrospect, we find a parish struggling against heavy odds. Our Lady of Lourdes Parish in Abbeville, with its Kaplan mission, had more than its share of trouble and relatively little in the way of finances. Parishioners were unemployed most of the time. When jobs were available, wages were considered exceptionally good if a man earned $3 a day.

Families were large; housing, inadequate. A passive mood was prevalent in the vast majority of parishioners. The year? Within the past decade.

Some progress was being made with children. The parish had a two-room school accommodating 52 students. Later, two busses were acquired. Today there are 261 students and a new six-room school is a happy reality.

Despite the obvious progress, the over-all conditions still exist. Housing is still inadequate; wages, low. On the brighter side, morale is soaring as definite steps are taken to relieve the parishioners of some of the burden in this generation. The children in the new school will not have to start the wheels of progress. Adults are doing it for them today.

Realizing the complexity of the social problem in his parish, Father Albert McKnight, with the approval and counsel of Father J. P. Lucey, C.S.Sp., pastor, further pursued his studies of adult education, credit union and co-operative buying systems. A survey was conducted in the community by Father McKnight, the Grail team from Lafayette, and parish leaders. Results pointed to three areas needing attention — namely, education, economics, and religion.

The State Legislature, at the same time, was proposing a bill that would have denied illiterates their right to vote. Without persuasion, perhaps motivated by the proposed bill, parishioners agreed to attend night classes. There were many problems involved in acquiring classrooms and textbooks.

The night classes were inaugurated with two things in mind: to enable the parishioners to vote had the legislature bill become law, and ultimately to foster individual initiative for local leadership.

Classes, held Monday and Wednesday evenings from 7 P.M. to 9 P.M., are divided into basic and advanced courses. The basic studies include the fundamentals of reading and writing, (phonics,) arithmetic (number-aid method), and Bible study. Advanced courses include bookkeeping, typing, sewing and study of the Mass.

These week-day sessions also include educational programs and study groups on credit unions and co-operatives featuring a monthly film on these subjects.

The night classes are groundwork for more extensive study through which participants hope to earn high school diplomas.

There are approximately 20 adults enrolled in the courses as regular students, ranging in ages from 20 through 70. Father McKnight and the Grail team lauded the group for its zeal and drive in the classes and cited a number of examples that prove that this program is one program with four related parts.

In the Mass study (of the Last Sunday after Pentecost) for example, each person was asked to comment on the Gospel of the Second Coming. One man, after long deliberation, said, "The Second Coming is like balancing the books. The Lord asks, 'What are your assets? What are your liabilities?' The proprietorship is heaven." The Grail team admits it is an amusing comparison; however, it evaluates the answer as a welcome sign of comprehension.

Commenting on the progress of the educational program, Father McKnight said: "Without the individual interest on the part of the adult students, the faithful attendance, and their sincere desire to better themselves to help others, the program would have surely collapsed.

"I cannot," he continued "conceive the possibility of any success in this movement had it not been for the dedicated Grail team, who have helped and co-piloted the program from the initial survey to the actual teaching in the classroom.

"These loyal women, well-trained and capable, have contributed greatly in every sphere of our four-point program."

The Grail Family and Community work in the Lafayette Diocese is part of the National Council on Family and Community. This Council's program is twofold. To work out the contribution of young women in building the Christian family through their own marriages or through social responsibility among families on a community basis; secondly, the Council helps the family find its roots in the parish community and, from this vital source, contributes toward building a strong community structure.

Members of the Grail Movement from Lafayette working on the Kaplan project: Susan Lies, Katherine Price, Sarah Broussard, Monica Richard, Anita Broussard, Betty Simon, Margery Burns, Beth Usher and Una Mae Hargrave.

All phases go hand-in-hand or rather, the educational, economic and co-operative phases are bound together and vitalized by the spiritual boost in liturgical participation.

Father Albert McKnight, C.S.Sp., the Grail team, their parishioners and all individuals who have co-operated in this social movement have proved what can be done through unity and effort directed toward the common good, which ultimately affords individual prosperity for all.

Advanced classes in bookkeeping and typing met with enthusiastic response as parishoners realized this to be a vital "must" for parish credit unions.

CREDIT UNION -- From Need and Knowledge - PROGRESS

Invisible walls cannot be seen by the human eye, but when the invisible wall is tradition, an archaic caste system, the effects can be felt. Social conditions can place people in an economic bracket far below that of the average American family.

So it was with the majority of the parishioners of Our Lady of Lourdes. In fact, the income was so low it was difficult for families to establish credit affiliations with reasonable, reputable financing firms. Many fathers would end up paying nearly twice the amount borrowed.

A need for economic assistance could be felt. In some cases children, as well as their parents, had unbalanced diets. Unpaid doctor bills were common and it was not unusual to find a family without medical attention in severe illness.

The education program cannot really be considered as separate from the economic assistance program. They are necessarily linked as separate parts of this social movement. The classes teach; the application of academic knowledge is exercised in two of the remaining phases, namely the Credit Unions and the Co-operative Store.

In 1959 Father Albert McKnight organized a credit union among the parishioners in Kaplan. After a year's growth and successful operation, another was set up in Abbeville. These are among the few parish credit unions in the Diocese of Lafayette.

The credit union was the only logical answer to the problem of freeing the families from the grasp of loan sharks, who used them and their lack of collateral to further their own economic schemes. Father McKnight also believed it was a good way of teaching those involved that cooperation and concerted effort can accomplish big goals.

The Kaplan unit, only a little over a year old, has over $5,000 in savings and it has loaned out over $6,000. Shares in the union were sold at $5 each. It costs each member 25 cents to join and all are encouraged to save at least 25 cents weekly.

The "church credit union" is handled by the members, and they are in turn guided by the experienced Father McKnight who has spent months of study in the field of community cooperatives and credit unions, especially in St. Francis Xavier University, Antigonish, Nova Scotia.

1) A board of directors, consisting of five persons was chosen by the members. (Abbeville has seven directors.) This board set the general policies, elects the treasurer who serves as manager, and the assistant treasurer. These two officers have the everyday duties—making loans, collecting payments, and keeping books.

2) In Kaplan, business hours are every Friday after the 6 P.M. Mass in the parish hall or any time at the treasurer's home. In Abbeville, after all Masses on Sunday in the rectory, on anytime in the treasurer's home.

3) The members chose a credit committee of three who consider all loan applications, taking into consideration the applicant's character, ability to pay, and the purpose of the purpose of the loan. Loans are classified in two groups, providential (for sickness, food and shelter); productive (for business or labor investments in machines, tools, equipment).

4) There is also a supervisory committee which supervises the whole organization, from the board of directors to the loan applications.

5) The whole operation is thorough, from top to bottom, complying with the rules and regulations for making a credit union successful. The 25 cents entrance fee is put into a reserve fund, plus 20 per cent of the annual earnings. For protection against possible bad loans the credit union's policy is to have in the reserve fund the equivalent of 10 per cent of the unpaid balance of all loans delinquent from two to six months; 25 per cent of the unpaid balance of six months to one year delinquent loans; and the equivalent of 80 per cent of the unpaid balance of all loans that are delinquent one year or more.

According to Father McKnight, loan loss is very low in these two credit unions because they are formed by a group a people from the same church parish, because it was fostered and sustained by the influence and direction of the Church, and because those borrowing money realize they are borrowing their own and their friends' savings. Further protection against loss of money is the fact that all officials handling money are bonded.

6) Over and above helping families have money at their disposal in emergencies, either through their savings or through loans, participants are paid dividends annually or semi-annually with the approval of the board of directors. The Kaplan unit paid out a two and one-half per cent dividend at the end of its first year. Dividends are paid out of the earned interest of the credit union's invested savings.

7) Interest on the loans is charged at the rate of one per cent on the unpaid balance monthly. There is a loan-cancellation agreement attached to each loan in the event of death or permanent disability. If a member becomes temporarily disabled while paying a loan, all payments are cancelled by insurance during the term of disability. All savings are insured. In the event of the death of a member, the savings are matched dollar for dollar.

8) Credit unions are tax free, however, members must pay tax on their dividends. The writer has gone into details purposefully in this particular phase on the four-point program. The success of the educational program can be appreciated without much emphasis on such details. The credit unions, however, are so complex in construction and operation that it necessarily entails knowing the structure and work of the unions to fully appreciate the achievement of these people who had no previous experience.

An education in savings for young parishioner as he hands in his weekly savings to the secretary-treasurer of the credit union.

Co-operatives-Co-op Store Broadens Vision

Having witnessed the successful management of the credit union and the progress in the night adult-education classes, the priest of Our Lady of Lourdes Parish guided the parishioners of the Kaplan mission into the third phase of the social program, the co-operative store.

The Co-op store, or the Buying Club, was organized to set up a co-operative business through which the fundamentals of business principles could be taught. In this phase of the program, parishioners learn the difference between wholesale and retail operations and the ethics of establishing prices to afford marginal profit. This phase also affords actual income to the families participating.

For convenience, it was decided to establish a grocery co-op. The Buying Club buys non-perishable groceries at wholesale prices and the members buy them back for consumption at retail prices. The "profit" is put to account for the individual member for his purchasing shares later when the business grows large enough to merit shareholders.

The members meet monthly to discuss and study business conditions and to learn about other methods to further their project. The only salaried person is the "storekeeper" who gets 10 per cent of the profits for his services. All members have so far realized returns in dividends of about 10 per cent on every dollar spent in the co-op.

Speaking of the progress and potential of the co-op store, which is housed in the parish hall in Kaplan, Father McKnight said: "It is really too early to judge whether it is going to grow and succeed as well as we hope it will. The co-op, at this stage of the game is really only an experiment."

"Whether it succeeds or fails," he continued, "we will have accomplished one important thing. We will have educated our people n the responsibilities of business, the value of a co-operative effort, the place business has in our social structure, and they will know of some of the problems facing those, who, in the past, have been only people "behind the cash register."

Liturgy-Adds Depth and Meaning to Program

The educational, economic, and co-operative phases of the four-point program in the Parish, have thus far succeeded for three main reasons:

1) Conditions fostered the desire to act;

2) People realized they had to take advantage of their own natural talents and abilities, and

3) There was, and is unifying spirit among those involved that originates and thrives in the influence and atmosphere of a church parish.

This common denominator has been polished and strengthened in the fourth phase of the program, Liturgical Participation. Through a realization of the meaning of the liturgy, parshioners have carried their sense of unity in worship to their work in all the co-operative phases of the four-point program.

As explained earlier, many of the people in both the mother parish and its mission are uneducated. Despite this handicap Father McKnight reports excellent participation.

"Everyone participates," he said. "The children know all the responses. The old people answer the simple responses. The CCD board and members of the discussion clubs answer the entire Mass with the exception of the prayers at the foot of the altar."

The parish boasts a lay reader for the Epistles and Gospels who is very enthusiastic and capable, according to Father McKnight. The reader hopes to become an accomplished commentator.

Active participation was accomplished by short practices before. Father McKnight would walk up and down the center aisle, listening to the parishioners' answers, correcting when necessary, and encouraging everyone to participate. The sermon time was also used, on occasion, to correct or encourage responses.

A portion of the time for night classes has been dedicated to teaching the correct pronunciation of the Latin words. The Grail team has been efficient in instructing parishioners in the WHY of the Liturgy as well as the HOW and the Way.

Enthusiasm is keen, although variable, according to the amount of practice before the Masses. An interesting footnote is that participation does not vary between the sexes —both men and women participate with equal enthusiasm.

Despite obvious progress in liturgical participation, Father McKnight claims it is too early to foresee the ultimate degree and success of this fourth phase. He is encouraged, however, by many favorable comments on the part of the parishioners who claim a greater appreciation for the sacrifice of the Mass and also a better understanding of the purpose and lessons in all services in the Catholic faith.

This understanding of the Mass and the spiritual ties between Catholics, has enabled parishioners to carry on their other projects in a true Christian spirit, enriched by the realization of their ONENESS in Christ substained through the sacraments.

Dear Friends,

Mr. Forman of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee gave us the address of your organisation as one to whom we could write for information and news on the civil rights movement in the United States.

Although I am principally concerned with news of student activities in this field, I would of course be interested in more general news as well and would particularly like to receive any publications or other informative material which would help to give a clearer picture of the movement.

If you produce any publications regularly it would perhaps be possible to arrange for a regular exchange. Our publications are the monthly magazine World Student News and the fortnightly News Service which is intended primarily for the use of student editors. Both these carried articles on the sit-ins and freedom rides during last year, which aroused much interest among students in other countries. It is hoped that further articles will be included during the coming months.

Hoping to hear from you soon,

I remain,

Yours sincerely,

Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Sir:

I am a sociology student at Baylor; and in regard to a term paper I am writing for my course in Social Problems, I am very much interested in attaining some booklets etc. dealing with the changing position of the Negro in the South. If you will, I will certainly appreciate your sending me some information on education facilities, housing (urban and rural), attitudes toward school integration held by both the Negroes and whites, what has been done so far toward integration, the wages of Negroes in urban and rural areas and how they differ (if any) with wages of whites in similar jobs, and any other pertinent aspects that are prevalent to any large degree and that you think would aid me in writing my paper.

Enclosed is a check for $2.00 to help cover the cost. If the bill should run a little over that amount, please send me a statement and I will, of course, send you the difference.

Respectfully,
John A. Hughes

Dear Mrs. Dumbauld:

Thank you for your letter of April 13 and the enclosed check for $2.00 in payment for 100 copies of "This I Believe."

I believe SRC can let you have 20 copies of "Racial Prejudice" without cost. We just don't have any more. These 10 are in the mail to you today under separate cover.

Perhaps, as you suggest, you could write to the Episcopal Church. I note on the fly leaf that the booklet is published by a committee on youth, but no address is given. Most of our correspondence with them goes through 281 Park Avenue South, New York 10, N.Y.

I hope this is helpful.

Dear Sirs:

Enclosed please find a small amount to help support the work you are doing for all of us. Although I have been aware of the discrimination, I had never become involved or curious about it until last summer, when I attended the Race Relations Institute held at Fisk last summer. And also being a "white" student at Oberlin has made me even more aware. Formerly having lived in Massachusetts and New Jersey, we have now moved to Richmond, Virginia where my father has become the Exec. Sec'y of the Religious Work Foundation for the state of Virginia. I am glad our family has the opportunity now to live in the South, and to see how ignorant we have been about race relations, and how stupid ~~our~~ many Southern whites are!

When home for Spring vacation we were fortunate to meet "Happy" Heslip (who I had seen at the summer Fisk Institute). Remembering how much your Council can use money I spoke to Mr. George Simpson - the Sociology Department head at Oberlin - to make a statement, and give your address to our class on Racial and Cultural Minorities. So I hope you will receive some requests for information, (along with the request some financial support) from our students.

I would like to be put on your mailing list, but would prefer that you send material to my home address - so my folks can benefit from it, and since I will be there this summer. Next fall I hope to be able to attend Fisk University for a semester - to help in true brotherhood and peace.

Sincerely, Bill Loesch

Dear Professor Seifert:

In response to your letter of April 12 requesting "scholarly studies" of non-violent resistance, I am sending under separate cover what materials we have. Our publications have, I believe you will find, tended more to the reportorial than the philosophical viewpoint. The Wofford speech is perhaps an exception.

It has been suggested that I recommend to you, if you have not already encountered them, two other pieces. One is Howard Zinn's article in the March 17 issue of The Nation, "The Force of Non-Violence. The second is a book by Paul Ramsey: "Christian Ethics and The Sit-In," Association Press, New York, 1961.

Can you refer me to any scholarly studies of the process of non-violent resistance which has been involved in some of the recent activities in the field of race relations of the South? In reply to your letter of April 13 requesting information on race relations, I scarcely know what to send you for so general a topic. All of our materials deal with some aspect of race relations. When we hear from you, we will be glad to send single copies of any of our publications.

I note that last week I received a similar information request also from St. Clement's Hall. It occurs to me that if you could share the publications list with your fellow seminarians, perhaps in a prominent place such as a bulletin board, it might save some effort in the future.

The Librarian
St. John's Seminary
197 Foster Street
Brighton 35, Massachusetts

Dear Sir:

Within the last week or so the Council has received six letters from individual students at St. John's. Without exception they request information on "the race issue," "race problems," "race relations." I am writing to you in the hope that we can be helpful in providing these students with the specific information which will be most useful for their purposes of study.

I trust, that if you are at all familiar with the Southern Regional Council, you appreciate that our research and publications have dealt with many aspects of "the race problem"; voting, education, housing, employment, religion, to name a few. And desirous as we are of being as helpful as we can in meeting all the specific needs which come to us, we simply do not have the staff or the budget to write individual students for the purpose of eliciting more concrete requests and to send each a personal library of materials.

We have found that in the past we can very effectively, and gladly do, distribute single copies of all our materials without cost to libraries where there is a need and a demand. I am hopeful, therefore, that the enclosed publication list will serve as a guide to what your students require and what we can freely provide. After looking it over, please do not hesitate to let us know what your needs are.

Before writing to you I had written similarly to one of your students suggesting that the publication list I sent him be placed in a prominent place for the use of his fellows. So far, no reply, and the general requests keep coming. Please understand our dilemma and sincere desire to cooperate in making our materials available as feasibly as we can.

Sincerely,

BP:s enc. (2)

Gentlemen:

By way of the suggestion of the Field Secretary, Mr. Horace J. Bond, of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee I am writing you in request of information on the subject of school integration in the Southern United States. I have been told that you are an information organization and that you could supply me with a great deal of material on the subject. I have been told that you not only have numerous phamphlets and studies on the subject but also have in particular a map showing the percentage of school integration in the South since 1954. I would appreciate it very much if you would foreward your map and any other information that you feel I could use.

I am a senior Sociology student at Pomona College, Claremont, California enrolled in a Race Relations class for which I am doing this research not only to write a term paper but also to present an oral report before the class on the school integration problem later in the semester. I will certainly appreciate any information that you can give me.

I am enclosing a dollar for mailing charges.

Dear Mr. Linnemann:

In reply to your postcard inquiring about the Council's publications, I am enclosing to you herewith a listing of materials currently available. From time to time announcements of new publications and reminders of past ones appear in our monthly magazine New South. Since you may not be familiar with this, I am enclosing a copy of it also. If you willnnotify us at any time we will be happy to send you whatever materials you may require. As for our regular mailing lists, we maintain these largely to supply our information periodically to the press, government officials, related agencies, etc. If you believe there would be a real interest at your high school, we could add the name of the high school library. In brief, what we try to do with our limited resources is send our materials only where they are needed and will be useful. Please do not hesitate to call upon us if we can be of further help.

Messrs. Joel Lidov and Arthur Cohen
Great Neck South Senior High School
341 Lakeville Road
Great Neck, New York

Dear Messrs. Lidov and Cohen:

My ppologies for taking so long to respond to your letter of March 30.

As for your correspondence on exchange of views, I had to broach the matter through the school system here and that was delaying. Mr. J. Y. Moreland, Principal of the Booker T. Washington High School (45 White House Drive, S.W.), suggested that you write to either/or at the school here in Atlanta. From these contacts at this high school, which is all-Negro, you could mutually decide on how you wished to proceed with your exchange of views.

Mr. Arthur Powell, editor of the Washingtonian (school newspaper)

Mr. Otis Cochran, President of the student body,

Now as to an all-white school, I believe we misunderstood one another. I did not intend to rule that out at all. When I reread your letter this morning I saw the ambiguity. Of course, write to any all-white high school you wish. I have not taken the time to clear it with anyone, but from any Atlanta telephone directory or school directory, you could get names and addresses and post your letter to the head of the student council or editor of the newspaper, etc. Here are two suggestions off the record: Druid Hills High School, 1798 Haygood Drive, NE., and Cross Keys High School, 1626 North Druid Hills Road, N.E. Both of these are in suburban Atlanta, similar to your location in relation to New York City.

Hope this is all helpful.

Dear Mrs. Patterson:

Thank you for your letter of April 25, in which you have given me some valuable leads as to where I can write for further information for my paper on the development of the Southern textile industry.

I wrote to you at the suggestion of the Education Department of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union of New York.

In writing my paper, I have found it difficult to obtain recent material on the Southern industrial growth; however, I am sure that you suggestions will prove fruitful.

Thank you for the material your are sending me. And thank you for your valuable help.

Sincerely yours,

Dear Mr. Weintraub:

It appears likely from the request in your letter of April 23 that you have the Council confused with some other organization. Our concern is with race relations although some of our research in this field has been related to industry. Under separate cover I am mailing you some of our publications, but I doubt if they are what you require.

I would suggest, however, that you address your inquiry to the National Cotton Manufacturers Institute, Inc., 1501 Johnston Building, Charlotte, North Carolina, bearing in mind that this organization is comprised of southern mill owners with a very conservative and avuncular approach to their industry. Another thought is an old but still very valid study done in 1956 by Hammer & Co. (70 Fairlie Street, NW, Atlanta) on "Post War Industrial Development in the South."

Sorry to be of so little help.

Sincerely,

BP:s

Dear Mrs. Patterson:

Thanks very much for your kind offer to send copies of "Albany" to key people in Durham. Attached is a list of members of the Durham City Council, the Mayor's Committee on Human Relations, and a few other key people.

I would appreciate it if with each copy of the pamphlet you could send a covering letter saying that the pamphlet is being sent at the request of the Durham Youth and College Chapters of the NAACP to a small number of key people in Durham. The Durham NAACP chapters feel that the pamphlet is outstandingly successful in conveying not only what happened in Albany, but also the reasoning and emotions which lay behind the various participants' behavior. The NAACP feels that the pamphlet ought to be read by everyone who will have responsibility for dealing with the racial tensions which are bound to continue to arise in Durham, for its analysis of what happened, especially as regards the lack of real contact between Negro and white leaders, is quite relevant to Durham. Moreover, the Albany story is a fascinating one in its own right.

Sincerely yours,

Edward Opton, Jr.

Dear Mr. Deddish:

The Council has not published anything on the Black Muslims but I am enclosing to you reprints of stories from the New York Times and other papers. Also, if you have not already seen it, there is Eric Lincoln's book, The Black Muslims in America, published by Beacon Press, 1961. And our research department has recommended the following three magazine articles:

1) Worthy, William, "The Angriest Negroes," Esquire, Feb., 1961;
2) Krosney, Herbert, "America's Black Supremacists," The Nation, May 6, 1961; and
3) "Aftermath: The Angriest Negroes Revisited," Esquire, June, 1961.

Trusting the above will be useful.

Dear Sir:

I am at present a Sociology major at Denison University. Our Race Relations class is at present engaged in a series of class panel discussions concerning various groups in the United States. The topic chosen for discussion by our panel is the "Black Muslim Movement."

Your Organization was recommended to me by some of the students who took part in the Denison Southern Tour earlier this spring. I would appreciate greatly any information which you might be able to supply me concerning the Black Muslim Movement in our Country.
